I am glad to say that his advice was not all well received and, having occasion to address the same gathering later in the evening, I took pleasure in helping to spike the guns of the anti-florist orator.

prices took a big tumble. Business in retail circles was excellent during the week, but even the good demand had little effect on the large quantity of stock available. Sweet peas were sold as low as $1 per thousand in 10,000 lots, despite their fine quality. Of carnations the supply was large in all varieties. The heavy consignments caused prices to drop to $1 per hundred in large lots. The great quantities of roses that arrived during the week glutted the market, and the prices on these dropped to about one-half the former quotations. Russell and Ophelia roses are coming in satisfactorily and bring fair prices in small lots. Peonies and cape jasmines will arrive this week and crowd the market until Memorial day. Shasta daisies and outdoor valley are arriving in large batches. Easter lilies and callas are plentiful. All greens have a good call.

Various Notes.

The St. Louis County Growers' Association will give a dance Saturday, May 26, at the Eleven Mile House. Tickets are for sale at all the wholesale houses. A large number of the city florists will attend.

August Hummert, vice-president of the St. Louis Seed Co., says he thinks that there will be a large representation of St. Louis seedsmen at the annual convention of the American Seed Trade Association at Detroit, June 19 to 21.

Hugo Werner, of Werner Bros., is completing a new home in Clayton. It is rumored Mr. Werner will marry soon, as Dan Cupid has been hanging around the place for some time.

The florists in the south end put in a busy week with funeral work. Andrew Meyer, Jr., F. W. Bruenig, W. H. Kruse and the Diener Floral Co. reported large orders for the week.

The next meeting of the Lady Florists' Home Circle will be held June 13 at the home of Mrs. Henry G. Berning, 4211 Westminster place.

Stanley Bishoff has left the employ of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co. The vacancy has been filled by Joseph Breun.

The establishments of John Nyflot, F. H. Meinhardt and the Koenig Floral Co., which are near the big cemeteries, had a busy week planting out stock. Plant sales are reported a larger item than ever before.

The leading hotel and bank buildings make a fine appearance with their well filled window boxes.

The Shackelford Nursery Co. will start cutting Coreopsis lanceolata

W. J. Pilcher has had a most successful season in roses. Hadley and Russell were among the selects that came into this market last week. George Schmidt is the rose grower at this establishment.

Edward Cizkowski, head of the Cass Avenue Florists, reports a splendid season. The company will start to make improvements next month for larger quarters.

The next session of the St. Louis Florists' Club will be its thirty-second anniversary meeting. The trustees will arrange a fitting program for the occasion. The meeting will be held on the grounds of the Missouri Pottery & Supply Co.

Any florist in the eastern part of Missouri desiring any information concerning the coming convention of the S. A. F. or wishing to join the national body, should address Jules Bourdet, the state vice-president. J. J. B.

The members of the St. Louis Association of Gardeners at a recent meeting adopted a resolution looking toward the conservation of the native flora of the city and county. The resolution points out that, on account of indiscriminate collectors, the native flowers and plants are in danger of extinction. Picnickers, on visiting the country for a holiday, become enthusiastic over the flowering plants, and some of them plunder the countryside of its beauty, with the idea of reproducing the effect in their city gardens. These amateurs know little of gardening and in the majority of cases the loss is total. Trade and civic organizations of the city have been supplied with the resolution.

GREENWICH, CONN.

AN INDOOR SUMMER CROP.

What crop can be put in a greenhouse 27x60 and so grown that it will pay well this summer? S. A. W.—Mass.

There is no flower crop you could start now that would give you any returns before late summer or fall. Asters, such as American Branching, would come in season in September and October. I think a vegetable crop would pay you most, either tomatoes or cucumbers. The former would be easier for you to handle than the latter, unless you have handled cucumbers before. The sooner tomatoes can be planted the better. Train the plants to a single stem. Plant them in solid beds if you have such beds and place the plants an average of eighteen inches apart each way. Remember that tomatoes require a dry atmosphere and must not be sprayed overhead. Cucumbers require a warm and moist atmosphere.

C. W.

The Burning Question.

Monday evening, May 14, the Gardeners' and Florists' Club held one of the best attended meetings it has held in a long time. At a previous meeting I. H. Moss and James Hamilton had been appointed a committee to inquire into the coal situation and to report at last week's session. As every member had been notified, and as all were interested, the attendance was large. One of the things the committee did was to have the secretary write to W. F. Gude, the Washington representative of the S. A. F., to see if the national body could promise anything, or if the government could hold out some hopes. The following is an exact copy of Mr. Gude's reply:

Replying to your favor of May 4th with reference to the coal situation, I can only say that you have a hard nut to crack. We figure that our coal for next year will cost us from $12,000 to $15,000 more than it did this year, for our firm alone. While that is a big item, it does not worry us so much as the fact that we may not be able to get coal at any price. From the best information we can gather here at Washington, the thing to do is to get all that you can and pile it up on your own place, the sooner the better, because it would seem that the situation for the coming winter will be much more serious than it was last year. Sorry that I cannot write you more hopefully, but I see no relief in sight.

It does not look as though the government would take any hand in the matter.

Mr. Moss paid a visit to the Consolidated Coal Co., the largest company in Maryland, which operates mines in the western part of the state and in West Virginia. The object of his visit was to make a proposition and to get the company's rates on say—100 carloads. The idea was that the tradesmen should club together and buy all their coal in one order. This company's reply to him was that it had more orders on its books now than it could handle, and that it did not want any new customers at this time. Most of the company's sales are in cargo lots, so Mr. Moss thought he would have no trouble placing such an order. The Reading Coal Co. was visited, with the same results.

How About Wood As Fuel?

Mr. Hamilton has studied the question deeply and his argument is that, while there may be a greater demand for coal this year than ever before, he does not think it is such as to warrant the advance in prices every company is making. Everyone present had seen someone, in most cases the people they have been in the habit of dealing with, and in every case prices were reported doubled.

It is my opinion that this situation is an honest one; that the cause for it is the largely increased demand and the scarcity of labor. Then there is the greater manufacturing activity, a direct result of the war; the naval bases now have to be well stocked and care must be taken of the export trade; in fact, it seems as if the companies do not get a chance to get any coal on hand. As Mr. Gude says, the outlook for next winter is far from reassuring.

This naturally led to the question, "If the worst comes to the worst, what are the florists to do?" There were some present who, during a severe winter, with a coal strike on hand, had been without coal. They came through all right, by using wood, and this part of the question was thoroughly debated. Some of the boys have plenty of wood on their own places, and as near as I could get at it, one cord of wood would give about the same results as one ton of coal; that is, under normal climatic conditions. One grower said that in zero weather it would take two cords to one ton of coal, and the opinion was that any boiler could be fired with wood, by simply placing a layer of clinkers over the grates. Of course, it is going to take more labor. I think, from the way things look now, that if I had plenty of timber on my place, I would be beginning to get it cut.

Prices Must Go Up.

This brought up another question, "With this increased cost of production, can we afford to stay in the business and sell our flowers at the prices we have been?" To this question I would answer no. With labor scarce and high, coal at prohibitive prices, and living expenses doubled, no florist can afford to stay in the business and sell stock at the old prices. Is there any other line of business on the face of the earth, in which expenses have increased as in the florists' business, that would not adjust prices accordingly? If it costs 10 cents to produce a geranium in a 4-inch pot, are we going to sell it at the old price of 10 cents, or are we going to add a fair profit?

I was surprised at the number of business men who are ready to say that the public will not stand an advance. Flowers are a luxury, they say, and can be done without. Whether or not they are right, I believe that if florists do not advance prices in proportion to the advance in their costs, some of them will go out of business. It is a condition the florist is facing now, not a theory. He should stop all this talk of luxury; his business is a legitimate one. Let every florist go along and adjust his business to meet conditions, and it will not be long before he will find out that flowers are not one of the luxuries.

During the meeting there was a sorrowful note. Charles Cook, of Catonsville, reported over the telephone the death of his son, Robert. The deceased, a fine boy of 20, was beloved by everyone. He contracted quinsy, which developed into lockjaw, and his death was sudden. A resolution of sympathy was extended to the family in its great loss.

The last two weeks have brought us hot, dry days, and everyone has had to shade his glass. Business has kept up well, however. Mothers' day business was the best yet; it is one of the real flower days of the year here.

this means a good demand for bouquets and corsages. Fortunately, there are plenty of good flowers yet, though the carnations are growing smaller and the roses are rapidly being dried off. Many of the growers have their roses for next year benched and growing. Carnations are doing well in the field. Some of the growers prefer to set their carnations in temporary benches, and then reset them in the permanent quarters. There is a growing conviction among carnation growers here that best results are obtained in the south from carnations that have never been outdoors.

Sweet peas are plentiful, but there as yet are none grown outdoors that amount to much. Valley is in good supply and the growers have more pips in storage at present than ever before at this time of the year. Roses are in fair supply. Orchids are about gone, but the local supply is sufficient for the present demand. Peonies from the field are about gone, except the later ones, and another week will see only a few cold storage blooms left in this market. They have sold fairly well, but there are so many grown by people not in the trade that the prices are always low. The blooms are sold on the street corners and in the department stores for 50 cents per dozen, with the result that the tradesmen have reduced their acreage.

From the quantities of stock being propagated, everyone seems to have confidence in the future of the trade. From the way bedding plants have cleaned out, there seems to be no danger of business falling off.

store at Chattanooga May 19. Messrs. Harrison and their sister, Miss Bess, are in charge of the new venture. They are experienced florists, having grown up with the Joys, their mother being a Joy. For the present all supplies will be shipped from Nashville. Greenhouses may be built in the vicinity of Chattanooga later.

Geny Bros. have put in a new "cold room," cooled by their refrigerating plant, which gives them room to do nearly all their own cold storage.

There will be more annual and perennial flowers grown in the open and offered to the trade this season than ever before in Nashville. During the last few years there has been a decided shortage of flowers for summer use, and the desire to prevent this led to the planting of these subjects.

Louis Haury, who went into the market-gardening business a little more than a year ago, is growing pot plants and bedding plants almost as extensively as he is vegetables. He has a stall in the market and wagons on the streets.

J. F. Corbett has a batch of the best columbines in bloom that I have ever seen in this vicinity. Just why more of these plants are not grown by the trade here I cannot say. They certainly give more good flowers at less expense than most plants.

R. F. Smith, carnation grower for the Joy Floral Co., has a large lot of carnation seedlings that are about large enough to bench. He has been working along this line for some time and has two or three carnations that are promising. He says the best thing he has ever produced is a larger, double Mrs. Sander daisy. It surely is a daisy,

EFFECTS OF FERTILIZERS.

On Different Soils and Crops.

This article consists of extracts from a paper prepared by H. J. Wheeler, of Boston, and read before the Massachusetts Horticultural Society.

The types of bacteria, fungi, protozoa and other beneficial or injurious organisms in soils are affected by the amounts and relations of mineral and dead organic matter present and even by the chemical relation. Organic matter is highly essential in giving to the soil proper tilth, in improving its physical aëration, its water-holding capacity, and its power to absorb and hold plant food. Soil is no longer looked upon as a lifeless mass, but as teeming with low forms of plant and animal life.

It is impossible to follow all the lines of agricultural investigation. One of the most important was the establishment of the fact that legumes and certain other plants assimilate nitrogen directly from the air. This was shown by Hellriegel and his associates in Germany to be due to the intervention of micro-organisms which grow on the roots of the plants and

Some Abandoned Theories.

Many new theories concerning soils and plant nutrition have recently been advanced. Among these is the idea that the chief function of fertilizers is to improve the physical condition of soils; also, that fertilizers are not needed as plant food, on the supposition that the minerals represented in the soil are present in sufficient quantity to be dissolved and to replenish the soil solution rapidly enough to meet the plant requirements. It has also been claimed that poisonous substances develop in the soil as the result of the decomposition of decaying vegetable matter, and also in the shape of excreta from the roots of plants.

The idea that fertilizers are useful chiefly for improving the physical condition of the soil has since been abandoned.

done. It was also shown in a recent article by former Director Hall of the Agricultural Experimental Station of Rothamsted, England, that at least wheat and barley plants, after growing in the soil for sixty years continuously, have not thrown off toxic excreta capable of accumulating in the soil. It is stated by Mr. Hall, as a result of these and further experiments by him, that fertilizers have been returned to their old category as plant foods and that the theories advanced by the Bureau of Soils in Washington concerning them are fallacious.

Mineral Food Stored in Soil.

Mr. Hall has also shown that where mineral fertilizers are added to the soil in excess of the immediate needs of the plants, they are stored in such forms as to be subsequently highly available. It was even found by Mr. Hall that barley thrived better in extracts of soil in which barley had been grown for sixty years than in artificial solutions containing the same quantities of mineral ingredients. This he attributed to the possible benefit of small amounts of soluble organic materials, which had accumulated in the soil.

In the experiments which I conducted in Rhode Island, where about fifteen different kinds of plants were each grown on a separate area for two successive years, with like fertilization, it was found that when onions followed the third year on all of the areas, the yields ranged from twelve to 412 bushels per acre, according to the crop which had preceded. The continuation of this work by Director Hartwell has shown that buckwheat was able to thrive better where onions had failed than elsewhere. These results show that in the plan for treatment and fertilization, one must take cognizance of the previous manuring, fertilization and cropping of the land as well as the kind of crops which are to follow.

Poisons Developed in Soil.

The fact that certain poisonous substances develop in soils was long ago recognized in Holland by Mulder, and in other places in Europe by other investigators. It was even found more than twenty years ago in connection with the experiments in Rhode Island that ammonium sulphate, which had proved at Rothamsted, England, to be a good fertilizer, was immediately poisonous on the highly acid Rhode Island soil. After liming, however, it became highly effective.

Even nitrate of soda, highly esteemed as a fertilizer, may seriously injure the physical condition of certain soils and such injury is capable of being corrected upon the application of sulphate of ammonia. Such facts, as well as the possible loss of nitrates by drainage, illustrate certain advantages of ready-mixed, commercial fertilizers in which the nitrogenous in-

Ingredients are introduced in several forms so that losses from leaching may be avoided, and so that the supply necessary to plants may be continuous throughout their growing season.

Sometimes Poison, Sometimes Food.

Certain of the so-called plant poisons, which develop in soils, appear to be both food and medicine for certain other groups of plants. An instance of this is afforded by the fact that under conditions where onion plants will die, cranberry plants thrive better than if the soil is corrected so as to meet the needs of the onions. Similarly, mignonette cannot be grown on soils which are nevertheless ideally adapted to Silene orientalis, asters, and many others of the flowering plants.

Recent investigations at the Indiana station show that in some cases where the tilth of the soil has been improved by the introduction of vegetable matter, and where there is an abundant supply of ordinary plant food, crops failed to thrive because of the presence of aluminum nitrate. It was shown, however, that upon the addition of lime, the alumina is precipitated, the nitric acid combines with lime, and the plants then thrive splendidly.

Soil Disinfectants.

Interest has been awakened in the subject of the treatment of soils by the fact that carbon bisulphide, toluene and various other soil disinfectants have been found to be highly beneficial. According to the results at the Rothamsted Experimental Station, this is due in some cases to the destruction of microscopic forms of animal life which feed upon the useful bacteria. When these animals are destroyed the bacteria increase enormously, with marked benefit to the soil. Investigations in Europe and at the Agricultural Experiment Station in Rhode Island show that sodium, if present in fertilizers, whether as nitrate of soda or as common salt in association with muriate of potash and kainit, is of use to certain plants if the supply of potash is insufficient, whereas there are cases of plants which show but little, if any, ability to benefit by it.

New Ways of Obtaining Nitrogen.

Recent utilization of great waterfalls for the generation of powerful electrical currents has made it possible to combine the gaseous nitrogen of the atmosphere in such a way that calcium cyanide, calcium nitrate, ammonium sulphate and ammonium nitrate are now coming onto the market as plant foods. The nitrogen of the air surrounding the earth, which could formerly be utilized through the aid of leguminous plants, may now, therefore, be made our priceless possession for the nutrition and maintenance of the human race.

Experiments by Loew show that it is sometimes of great importance to add lime to soils for the purpose of counteracting the effects of an unusual amount of magnesia. There may also be cases where the addition of magnesia to a soil may be beneficial on account of the lime being in excess.
The requirements in these particulars vary with different plants.

Marion, Ill.—Mrs. M. L. Copeland, proprietress of the Marion Greenhouses, was married recently to John Hodaly, of Sycamore. Mr. Hodaly came to this country from Hungary seven years ago to study agricultural methods of the west. He liked the conditions so well that he decided to remain, and after taking a course in floriculture in an eastern university he became florist for the Great Falls Floral Co., at Great Falls, Mont. Subsequently he was associated with William Swinbank, of Sycamore, Ill.

Seed Trade News*AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.;
Secretary-Treasurer, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-fifth annual convention, Detroit, June 19 to 21, 1917.

It seems this year as though seeds will sell all summer.

REPORTS from France indicate that this year there will be at least as large a percentage as last year of 12-centimeter bulbs in the Paper Whites.

IMPORTED seeds of all kinds are pretty nearly cleaned up. Reports of prospects of some vessels coming from Europe, if true, afford a hope, however, of getting more stock.

As a measure of the importance of the American trade to the Holland exporters, it is stated that one of the principal houses has in hand for fall shipment orders aggregating $240,000, and that this does not include any spring orders not shipped.

REPORTS coming in from the radish growing section of northern Michigan show that the cold, backward spring has already reduced the acreage of radishes, and damaged crop prospects to some extent. It looks as though radish seed would be easily worth 50 cents to $1 per pound next fall.

THE seed situation, as it is today, was well summed up by a seedsman who, last week, drove up to the offices of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, to place an order for some seeds. Upon being told that the price on a certain item had advanced $1 per pound, he merely laughed complacently. "It isn't a question of price," he said, "they come these days asking not how much, but 'Please, Mister, can we get the seed?'"

THE directors of the Wholesale Seedsmen's League met at the Hardware Club, New York, May 22. It was stated that only routine business was transacted, with no report for non-members, which is taken to indicate that the principal theme was the values of seeds of the 1917 and 1918 crops. President F. W. Bruggerhof, Nestor of the seed trade, who is in his eighty-seventh year, occupied the chair at dinner, there being fifteen seedsmen present.

A SCARCITY is developing in turnip seed and, as the larger percentage used in this country has in the past been imported from Europe, it looks as if turnip seeds for planting this June and July would be a scarce item. Prices have advanced considerably and seed is now selling in a jobbing way at 60 to 75 cents per pound for Strap Leaf, Flat Dutch and ordinary sorts. Globe varieties and the rutabagas are jobbing at 75 cents to $1 per pound, with prospects of still higher prices. Milan sorts are bringing $1.25 to $1.50 per pound.

The opening session will be held at 10 o'clock in the morning of Tuesday, June 19. The Hotel Ponchartrain has been selected as the headquarters for the convention. Included in the business to come before the convention, the secretary's announcement says, is consideration of an amendment to the by-laws which would permit, when necessary, a change in the dates of holding the convention.

The program for the three days' session follows:

THE EXODUS.

ried fifty-two other Hollanders, the exodus thus numbering 102 within the week. It is said the Ryndam would have had the entire party except that reservations had been booked on the Swedish boat prior to the announcement of the sailing of the direct steamer—and the Swedes refused to let the Hollanders cancel unless they forfeited their money.

SUPPLYING THE SEED DEMAND.

Americans, young, old and of all the ages between, are calling for seeds. The seed producers and distributors are answering that call, thus "doing their bit" toward a maximum production of foodstuffs. The accompanying illustration shows the small army of workers who are helping H. W. Buckbee, of Rockford, Ill., supply a portion of the country's extraordinary demand for seeds this spring.

The photograph was taken Saturday afternoon, May 12, at Mr. Buckbee's warehouse at Rockford. The men and women, and boys and girls, were ranged on the lawn ready for the photographer. Mr. Buckbee was so busy seeing that none of his employees escaped the camera that he barely got into the picture. So that the observer may not fail to find him, his photograph has been brought out by a circle.

Besides being a large distributor of seeds, Mr. Buckbee combines all branches of the trade in his business. His greenhouse range comprises more than 200,000 feet, and he maintains a retail store in Rockford. He has been a member of the American Seed Trade Association, is a charter member of the S. A. F., and is a member of the F. T. D.

TEACHING SEED TESTING.

For several years the United States Department of Agriculture has permitted persons interested to spend the months of July and August at the seed laboratory in Washington, D. C., to become familiar with the technique and practice of seed testing.

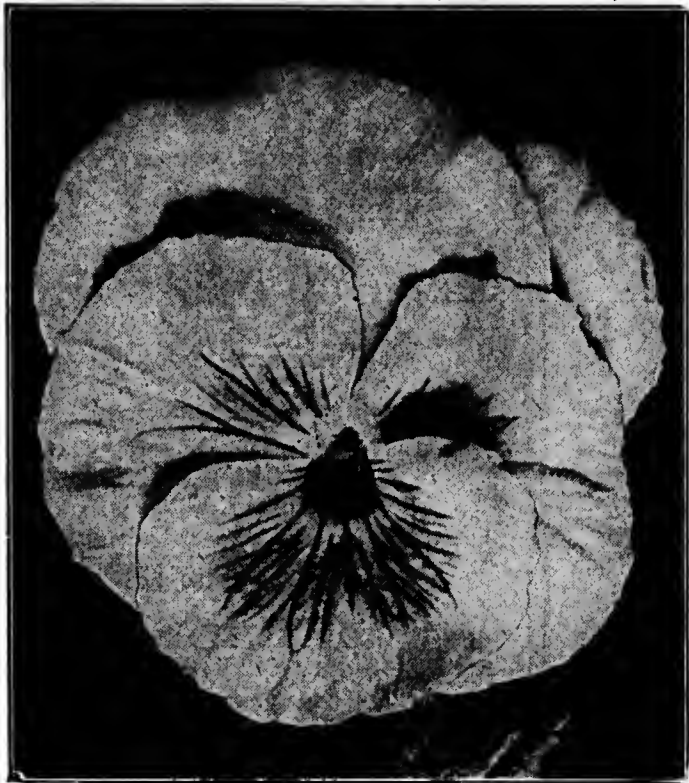

It is expected that more persons than usual may wish to avail themselves of this privilege this year through seedsmen voluntarily furnishing, with the field crop seeds they sell, information concerning quality, including the name of the seeds, the per cent of pure live seed and, in the case of certain imported seeds, the country of origin. It is, therefore, desired to know definitely not later than June 15 how many and who may be expected.

There will be no charge in connection with this work, but each person who comes will be required to supply himself on arrival with certain equipment, including hand lenses, forceps, etc., at a total cost not exceeding $15.

Anyone wishing to avail himself of late planting, and will assist in locating seed stocks for localities where shortages exist. The committee is co-operating with state, local and commercial agencies in an effort to secure better distribution of seed, and to encourage plantings of all important crops.

Information regarding shortages and surplus stocks should be addressed to R. A. Oakley, chairman, committee on seed stocks, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

SEEDSMEN CALLED TO CAPITAL.

"Any danger which may have existed of a seed famine in the face of a world emergency has been largely minimized, if not wholly dispelled," said J. C. McCullough, of the J. C. McCullough Seed Co., Cincinnati, when interviewed after the recent conference of seedsmen with the National Council of Defense at Washington. Mr. McCullough was summoned to Washington on a two hours' notice and found there the biggest seed producers of the nation.

"What the manufacturers of America are planning to do to outfit the government for a world war of the largest possible proportions the seedsmen are going to do for the farmers, so that food supplies without stint will be available," said Mr. McCullough.

"This is a big problem, because America is going to go in for agriculture upon a scale scarcely even thought of, let alone seriously contemplated. Every state in the country is planning to double, and probably to treble or quadruple, its normal output of food supplies from the soil. Every resource at the disposal of the seedsmen will be exerted to make the supply of seeds equal to the demand."

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

Some seeds grow,
But add to their shame;
Johnson's seeds grow
And add to their fame.

"I had no idea," observed F. G. Johnson, of Johnson's Seed Store, Cleveland, "when I wrote this catchy limerick that it would create such interest. It goes to show that an ad out of the ordinary always catches the eye. So many adaptations can be made from it." Three times the usual amount of business is recorded by this concern and two stories will be added to the building this summer, with storage to care for the heavy crop of potatoes expected. "Strange as it seems," said Mr. Johnson, "farmers in Michigan prefer to contract this season to grow potatoes for 50 cents per bushel rather than beans and peas. One reason is the scarcity of labor and another that they expect ordinary potatoes to bring $2 per bushel at time of harvest. We are starting with 200 bushels that cost us $3.75 per bushel, and could find use for 1,000 bushels if clean, true stock could be guaranteed."

Ward & Co., also of Cleveland, are experiencing an extraordinary seed business. An exception is noted in a smaller call for flowering seed, bulbs and tubers, but shrubbery, perennials and the like are selling finely. "The biggest season on record before we wind up," is the prediction of Manager Rotherham.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

The general opinion was that Mothers' day business this year was not only larger than ever before, but that there was also a greater variety of flowers sold. In addition to the white carnations, this year there were valuable boxes of choice flowers sent out, and even the transient trade took box after box from the retailers. The shipping business also was far above the average, and towards the end wholesalers were hard pushed to fill orders for good greenhouse carnations.

Indoor roses are plentiful, but of moderate quality, the stock coming from the north being superior to the locally grown flowers. Russell roses from San Francisco are magnificent, but the locally grown Beauties are equal to the northern stock. Field carnations have varied considerably in price and on some days there has been a large surplus to go to the dump. Greenhouse flowers are not so good as they were, and the quality probably will decline from now on until the new crop is ready. All spring flowers are plentiful and cheap, but bulbous stock is about over, a few irises only remaining. Gladioli are just coming in, some pretty novelties among the dwarfs, good America and hybrids being among the earlier showings. Valley is still scarce, but orchids are more plentiful. Some pretty Mexican lœlias of the aneeps and similar types are shown. They do not, of course, last so well as cattleyas, but they afford a change. All classes of greens are plentiful, but plants remain scarce.

Various Notes.

S. Murata & Co. reported a big Mothers' day business, the shipments going over a much wider territory than ever before.

The Redondo Floral Co. says that so far the usual May dullness has not reached it. A splendid line of Spencer sweet peas helped out a great deal; also good carnations.

Some hybrid calceolarias shown by W. W. Felgate, at Sierra Madre, are most attractive. According to Mr. Felgate, they are the result of a cross between C. rugosa and some of the showy annual types. They should make elegant pot plants and they are not so difficult to ship as the older, larger flowering types.

C. H. Woolsey, formerly of Freeport, Ill., and more recently of Glendale, has severed his connection with Mr. Kelly, of Glendale, and is now looking for a new location.

The Broadway Florist reports a good demand for Beauties and long-stemmed blooms of other varieties.

D. Stathalos says that the Mothers' day business this year was remarkable, not only on account of the large amount of business done, but also on account of the large variety of stock sold. Many boxes of good roses, orchids and other flowers took the place of the former box of carnations. His weekly sale of carnations was about 15,000.

Fred Sperry, manager of the L. A.

"We find The Review a first-class advertising medium and can assure you that we will put in another advertisement as soon as we have stock to offer."

"Hickey & Hollis."

"Petaluma, California, March 13, 1917."

Floral Co., says he could have done more business for Mothers' day if he had had more of the better grades of stock, but as he will not ship second-grade stock some of the orders had to be cut short. As it was, the whole staff was kept busy during the latter part of the week and had all it could attend to.

Wright's Flower Shop has been busy with decorative and good funeral work.

C. Lewis is still with L. H. Freeman and his window displays of spring flowers attract attention.

Frank Nelson, of the California Cut Flower Co., is contemplating a rather extended vacation trip. He includes the Grand cañon and most of the big eastern cities in his itinerary, and will probably be away about eight weeks. The store is most attractive and business is improving right along.

Mr. and Mrs. Helmer, of the Haley street nursery, Santa Barbara, were visitors in the city last week.

H. Reeve Darling showed a true spirit of patriotism when he turned over his store, force and all, to the Red Cross Society for a whole day. The result was several hundred dollars for the benefit of this splendid organization.

H. R. Richards.

The Market.

The retailers do not seem to have any complaints to make about Mothers' day business, but some of the growers and wholesalers are a little disappointed over the outcome. White carnations were held back and the prices advanced, the blooms retailing at the downtown stores at $1 per dozen, or 10 cents each. The sale of this particular flower was not encouraged, and the demand was more diversified, much to the gratification of the retailers.

From present indications, there will be a fine crop of Easter lilies for Memorial day; also a splendid cut of callas. It is expected other flowers also will be in ample supply. The shippers are looking forward to a banner business, as their early orders are of a substantial nature.

The present market situation can be summed up in a few words. There is plenty of everything for all needs. Bulbous stock is about gone, but it can be spared nicely in view of the abundance of other flowers. The supply of sweet peas threatens to become burdensome, but so far the offerings have been utilized in decorations and funeral work.

Roses are beginning to deteriorate a little. The demand keeps up fairly well, however, and good stock clears without much difficulty. Some nice larkspur is appearing. Peonies are plentiful and popular. A wide assortment of miscellaneous stock lends variety to the retail display. There is little to say about orchids, but it appears the supply is about equal to the demand. Taken as a whole, the flower market is in splendid condition for this time of the year. A good many tourists are beginning to arrive, which is taken as an indication by the florists that travel is to be heavy in this direction this summer, thus tending to keep up social functions and stimulate the demand for flowers.

Various Notes.

Louis R. Goodman, treasurer of the Charles Riegelman Co., Inc., of New York, has been a visitor to San Francisco.

G. Lord, of the retail department of C. C. Morse & Co., is leaving on an extended trip through the southern states in the interests of the business. He expects to be gone about six months. T. C. Holmes, manager of the Morse store, at 125 Market street, says the demand for seeds is holding up longer than usual. Orders are still coming in freely, whereas the season usually is about over by May 1.

Since taking over the stand at the Clift hotel again, Miss Recardie Lee Murray has been busy looking after the hotel business as well as that of her store on Geary street. She reports a splendid business for Mothers' day, and now is supplying a big demand for red, white and blue bouquets, made of red and white sweet peas and bachelor's buttons. She used a great many of these flowers in an elaborate decoration at the Palace hotel.

At Albert O. Stein's store the principal activity is in funeral work and table decorations. Patrick Orr, of the sales force, plans to leave June 1 for a month's vacation in the east.

P. Vincent Matraia, head of the Art Floral Co., has no complaints to make about Mothers' day business, as his sales showed a substantial increase over those of the same day last year.

Victor Podesta, of Podesta & Baldocchi, says the demand for cut flowers is holding up well. He notes considerable extra business from eastern visitors, who are beginning to arrive for the summer. His Mothers' day sales exceeded expectations.

The Bellevue florists made up several dozen red, white and blue bouquets for a theater party of children. They used red sweet peas, white carnations and blue cornflowers to get the desired effect. Miss Bertha Cohn and Miss Rothschild, the proprietors, are well satisfied with business. They had a clean-up Mothers' day and decorations in the hotel are quite regular.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee advertised Mothers' day extensively and with good returns. She made a special effort to divert attention from white carnations and succeeded in disposing of all kinds of flowers. She has already booked some nice shipping orders for Decoration day, which indicate a big demand from out of town.

Mothers' day MacRorie & McLaren sold more colored flowers than they did white, according to Fred C. Jaeger. The day's sales were gratifying and the business was easy to handle, being principally box deliveries.

Upon his return from a trip down the San Joaquin valley, W. F. Pitts, of the W. F. Pitts Seed & Nursery Co., reports the nurseries he visited in fine shape.

The C. Kooyman Co., Inc., is supplying a large demand for freesia and Paper White bulbs, according to Mr. Kooyman.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

Mothers' day was one of the best flower days of the year. The rush started early May 12 and continued late May 13. The short supply of carnations and the strong demand put this stock off the market early in the game. Every available carnation in Tacoma, good or bad, was disposed of at a good price. Fine Darwin tulips took second choice, selling readily at $1 per dozen. Cut stock of all kinds was scarce, painfully scarce, and as a result the florists managed to dispose of anything they had. The clean-up was so thorough that there was nothing left to put in a window Monday morning, May 14. Locally grown roses were insufficient to meet the demand and some florists had to order from California. Some fine irises were shown and disappeared at once at $1 per dozen. Snapdragons were more plentiful, but cleaned up completely.

On top of an unusually strong Mothers' day there were a number of funerals, weddings and small decorations, which kept the florists hopping from one thing to another and left no time for the customers to "visit." It was rush, bustle and go, and it was a tired but happy bunch of florists who closed their doors late May 13.

The last few days have shown a marked improvement in weather conditions. It is warmer and brighter, and the movement is already noticeable in the market. Peas are more plentiful. Snapdragons are up to the demand and ten weeks' stocks are showing up. Outdoor valley is coming in nicely and is not so yellow as last week's. Lilac is commencing to put in its appearance. Mignonette is of good quality and sufficient for present needs. Cut baby primroses are still in the market and good alyssum and candytuft are offered.

There is an oversupply of narcissi. Amateur growers are cutting them by the acre and selling them to anybody who wishes to buy, at any price he wishes to pay. Some of the drug stores filled up with these flowers and showed signs at 10 cents per dozen. This does not injure the florists' business, but it worries some of the tradesmen to have the hawkers make people think that they are underselling, when, in reality, they are not, as people who come to a florist's expect to get green wax paper and boxing, to say nothing of delivery service, which certainly is worth the difference in price. Last winter an attempt was made to "rush" a lot of lilies in some of the dry goods stores here, to prey on the florists' Easter trade. Some of the florists appointed themselves a committee to interview the managers of the dry goods stores, with the result that the "fly-by-nighters" were required to move.

Potted plants are off the market. Bedding stock and hanging baskets are moving slowly. Good pansy plants, asters and stock plants are prominent. Darwin tulips are on the wane. The green supply is easier.

Various Notes.

Miss Marie Watson, of the Twin City Floral Co., of Centralia, was a Tacoma visitor this week. Miss Watson reports an active business at Centralia. John Watson is specializing in peas and snapdragons. Mothers' day cleaned up everything in the store.

Hopkins Bros., of Auburn, made a business trip to Tacoma this week. They report a good business in bedding stock and have started to cut cukes.

The Hayden-Watson Co. reports doing the most satisfactory Mothers' day business in its history. A large funeral order which came in over the long-distance telephone kept the force busy up to a late hour.

A. Lingham, of the Puyallup Nursery Co., who markets a good deal of his stock in Tacoma, says that his cut of Darwin tulips is about over.

The Hamilton Florist has had a little

Stock was scarce for the day, especially carnations. Some reliance had been placed on outdoor narcissi, but these came in a little too ripe and many were lost. Roses were good and in fairly good supply. Everything sold at good prices, carnations averaging $1.50 per dozen.

Since Mothers' day there has been but little opportunity to accumulate stock; funeral work has kept the coolers rather bare. Carnations, particularly, are in demand, but the supply is limited.

Mothers' Day Business.

Growers of carnations made every effort to have a heavy cut of blooms ready, and there was a larger supply than ever before seen at Mothers' day, but there nevertheless were only about half enough blooms to meet the demand. All the roses and other miscellaneous cut flowers were taken, but even at that many buyers were disappointed because they could not get a flower to wear. Carnations, all colors, retailed at $1 per dozen at the downtown stores, and the local dailies made some unkind remarks about flowers jumping up to war prices. No mention was made of the fact that the entire cut would have been sold at $1.50 if the dealers had asked for it. Special effort had to be made to get the stock ready; the cost is greater than for ordinary daily cuts, and the growers are entitled to a higher price. This the buyers must pay, and it is a credit to the dealers that they have added no further profit, but asked the Albert Zimmerman was elected a member of the society, taking the place of his brother, George, who has left Portland. The committee on nominations presented the following nominees: For president, E. J. Steele and James Forbes; vice-president, Guy Pilkington and H. E. Weed; secretary, H. Niklas and E. H. White; treasurer, R. E. Gehr and F. A. Van Kirk. These, together with six nominees for trustees, will be voted on at the June meeting.

Robert Newcomb, of Chicago, representing the American Bulb Co., attended the meeting, and when called on stated that he had no special message to deliver from Chicago, but that he brought good tidings about business conditions he had found on his way to the Pacific coast. He gave an interesting talk on the new varieties of roses and carnations which would be put on the market this year and later.

The question for the evening, which related to the effects of department store sales of plants and nursery stock, was participated in by all; and it seemed that the majority of the speakers could not note any ill effects from such sales, except the discouragement resulting from the purchase of unsatisfactory stock. The idea was expressed that the great majority of the buyers of plants at the 10 and 15-cent counters were not of a class who would visit a florist, except to order a small funeral token; and the sales at the department stores helped to move surplus stock. A lunch and social chats and cards filled out the evening.

Various Notes.

H. J. Millatt, of the store force of Clarke Bros., is in the hospital, where he was operated on for appendicitis. He is reported to be recovering rapidly.

William E. Wood, of the Scott-Wood Co., says the delayed season has so blocked the range of his company with bedding stock that he hardly knows which way to turn. He is not the only one to suffer for want of room.

Gene Robinson is cutting some of the best sweet peas seen this season. The stems of many of the flowers are twenty-two inches in length.

The question of help at the greenhouses is growing more serious. Good, husky helpers can earn up to 40 cents per hour at the steel shipyards, and some of the men have gone into the country to work on farms, thinking they can thus avoid being taken into the army. It seems as though they would be as safe at the greenhouses.

Thomas Bodley has his range filled with Bonny Best tomatoes, which will be yielding returns by June 1. The dark weather has necessitated hand fertilization to a large extent. S. W. W.

WANTS WINTER ASTERS.

Please tell me what asters to plant for winter flowering. Should they be grown in pots or in the bench in which they are to flower? C. E. S.—Wash.

None of the asters are suitable for winter flowering. You can, however, profitably grow them as a late summer or early fall crop, under glass. They should be planted in beds or benches in the same way as chrysanthemums, and should be given similar soil and culture. Vick's Branching and American Branching are suitable varieties to grow

WAR AND NURSERY BUSINESS.

What effect the entry of the United States into the war will have upon his business is a question the nurseryman naturally is asking himself. Through the efforts of Lloyd C. Stark, vice-president of the American Association of Nurserymen, this question has been answered for the nurserymen of this country by the nurserymen of Canada.

The Canadians had passed through two seasons since the war began, and were well into the third when they answered Mr. Stark's inquiry. They know what the effect has been on their sales, and practically all agree that business is better now than before the war started. They have but one adverse condition to contend with, and that is the scarcity of labor. On the other hand, they say that farmers never were more prosperous than now, and that they are putting some of their surplus money into fruit trees, and are planting much ornamental stock.

Mr. Stark asked the nurserymen in his letter to make a forecast, based on their experience, of what the war would do to the business in the United States. It is their opinion that the United States will enjoy all the favorable conditions which the war has brought about, and suffer little from the adverse—the scarcity of labor.

The following excerpts from the letters will interest the trade:

The war affected us most adversely during 1914. By 1915 conditions had become more stable and that year proved the best year in the history of our country. During the following year, or 1916, we increased our business more than forty per cent and the sales this spring are considerably above those of last year. It is difficult for me to analyze our sales definitely and state the effect the war has had on them, but it is certain that the large returns received by the farmers for the products of their farms have placed them in a far better position to purchase our goods. On the other hand, we have had to combat the shortage of labor.—Prairie Nurseries, Ltd., T. A. Torgeson, managing director, Estevan, Sask.

The farmers have the money all right, but with us it is the scarcity of labor that is holding things up and hitting the business hard. You have such an immense population that the drain for the army will scarcely be felt. With the United States being able to raise 7,000,000 men as easily as Canada can

NURSERYMEN--NOTICE

A TAUSENDSCHON SPORT

(Color upon opening similar to Uirich Brunner, shading to a clear rosy pink.)

I DID not know when I decided to place my new Rose Tausendschon sport, which was awarded a Silver Medal by the American Rose Society at Philadelphia, March, 1916, that the rose was wanted as a finished nurseryman's stock, and consequently was not prepared for the demand for same. We are completely booked up and refusing orders for 2-year-old field-grown plants, which were limited to 8000; and the 1-year-old (field-grown) will be an unknown quantity for fall delivery; our 2½-inch stock had been limited to 20,000, and have only 11,000 more to dispose of, and are now ready for delivery immediately. Nurserymen should consider this new rose and act accordingly—delay sometimes means disappointment.

began.—Emile Gadbooks, Rougemont, Quebec.

War has made no difference in our business and, from all appearances, people will keep on buying fruit trees, fruit bushes and flowers, too, as usual. E. Granger & Co., Toronto, Ont.

During the last three years the United States has profited enormously by the war. No country ever entered a conflict better prepared financially. From the experience of the Canadians, the conclusion may be drawn that there is no cause to expect anything but continued prosperity in the business.

NEWPORT, R. I.

John C. Hass says the rumor that he had given up the wholesale flower business here and taken a position in New Bedford is not founded on fact.

Bowen B. Sweet, after many years of service, has resigned as superintendent of the city cemetery.

Alexander MacLellan has a lot of extra fine California privet in all sizes for hedging. W. H. M.

Allentown, Pa.—The new store of Ernest Ashley is far superior to the one which was reduced to ashes. To add to this loss, the insurance company expired at the same time. Mrs. Ashley has charge of the store and speaks highly of Mothers' day sales. The call was chiefly for white and pink carnations, of which, fortunately, they had an abundance. A handsome office has been built at the greenhouses, where Mr. Ashley presides, and Mr. Ashley has quite a nursery attached.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Warm weather last week increased the cut flower receipts and prices on nearly everything manifested a tendency to recede. The quotations on roses reached a lower level, and carnation prices followed suit out of sympathy, but not to the same extent. The higher temperatures were accompanied by an increased sale of seeds and bedding plants, particularly geraniums, of which the prices averaged about 15 cents per plant.

Everybody seems to be optimistic as to the Memorial day business and the growers report a good supply of stock in line for the holiday.

Various Notes.

With the idea of capitalizing the patriotic spirit, a number of florists are featuring small bouquets made of one red carnation, one white carnation, a blue iris and smilax. The results have been good.

A flag 6x9 feet for the funeral of a soldier boy was made last week by Henry Strobell. The "stripes" were made of red and white carnations; the "field" was made of blue cornflowers and the "stars" were represented by forty-eight gardenias. R. B. M.

BRAMPTON, ONT.

After a wonderfully successful Mothers' day, the Toronto Retail Florists' Association has decided to get in touch with the secretaries of the various lodges and other organizations in Ontario and endeavor to inaugurate a Decoration day May 24. This day is usually regarded as a holiday throughout the Dominion and there is little doubt that, if the florists put their shoulders to the wheel, the idea will prove a good one, especially as the stock is arriving in fairly good shape, now that pleasant, spring weather is with us.

The same weather is responsible for satisfactory progress in most of the greenhouses, and, despite the severe drawback in the shape of a limited labor supply, the work is much farther advanced than is usually the case at this time of the year.

Richard Jennings is about again after a serious illness of six months. He is growing some fine sweet peas this season. Mr. Jennings says that the day prior to Mothers' day was the biggest in the history of his business.

Mark Henderson's place is in good shape and is at present planted to tomatoes and a variety of bedding stock.

The Dale Estate has also set apart a fair area for tomatoes and is just now producing a crop of beans. W. G. P.

Lincoln, Ill.—Adolph Nielsen, superintendent of the Gullett & Sons cut flower greenhouses, has the sympathy of his many friends in the trade in the loss of his father. Mr. Nielsen was a florist in Christiania, Norway, many years ago and is hence entitled to the appellation of old timer.

The Market.

The growers and storekeepers are finding little fault with the warmer weather, as the indications are that there will be an unusual scarcity of outdoor flowers for Memorial day. Already many orders are being booked for that occasion. As has been the custom for a number of years, the demand is largely for potted plants. A slight stiffening in prices is already noticeable. Of cut flowers there is a good supply, with prices ranging about normal.

Various Notes.

The question of an adequate supply of coal for the coming fall and winter is holding the attention of the greenhouse men. It is a serious proposition.

"How to Fertilize the Home Garden," was the subject on which Philip Wessels, of the Rhode Island State College, addressed the Rhode Island Horticultural Society at the monthly meeting held last week.

William H. Sawyer has removed his store from 1920 to 1911 Westminster street, directly across the square from the old stand.

The June exhibition of roses, strawberries and early vegetables of the Rhode Island Horticultural Society will be held at the Narragansett hotel June 16.

Thomas Callahan, who came here a few days ago from New York to enter the employ of the J. A. Budlong & Son Co., at Auburn, was taken to the hospital May 13, following a sudden attack of illness.

Conrad Schultz, of Westerly, was in the city last week, while on his way to Boston.

O. H. Williams is turning much of his land to gardening this year. In the big greenhouses, where for several seasons at this period sweet peas were grown, thousands of tomato plants are flourishing.

W. H. M.

Chillicothe, Mo.—The recent "flower banquet" of the local business college called for one of the largest decorations of the season. Sefton & Son say the late, cold spring has retarded the growth of bedding stock in this locality, but with bright sunshine and rising temperature everything is coming forward rapidly. The demand is good and local florists are working overtime to fill orders.

CAST IRON BOILERS WASTE FUEL

I had a cast iron 8-section boiler before, but was afraid it would crack to pieces. The Kroeschell Boiler is certainly a fuel-saver. My coal bill to heat 5000 sq. ft. of glass surface with your boiler is less than last winter's coal bill, when I had only 2050 sq. ft. of glass, heated with the 8-section cast iron boiler.

Your boiler burns any kind of fuel. I would not have any other boiler than the Kroeschell, and will recommend whenever I get a chance.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

RADIATION IN RESIDENCE.

We contemplate heating our residence next winter with hot water, supplied by the same boiler that heats our greenhouses. Please describe the best method of figuring the amount of radiation required to heat a dwelling house. W. H.—Ind.

Before attempting to give definite suggestions for the heating of a residence, one should know the usual minimum outside temperatures; the nature of the construction of the dwelling, whether frame, brick or other materials; the amount of exposure, the square feet of glass, the exposed wall surface and the cubic contents of each room, as well as the temperature desired in each room.

For a well built frame dwelling, with average exposure, we would suggest the following formula for a temperature of 70 degrees, which would be about an average for the living rooms, the bathroom, and perhaps for one sleeping room which may be used in case of sickness, in sections where the temperature in the coldest weather runs from zero to 10 or 15 degrees below:

With hot water radiation, use an amount equal to the square feet of exposed glass, plus one-tenth the area of exposed wall surface, plus one per cent of the cubic contents of each room.

For a temperature of 60 degrees, which will answer for the average sleeping room, compute the radiation in the same way and then reduce the amount one-third.

Having determined the amount required under average conditions as above, if the dwelling is a poorly built frame structure, the radiation should be increased ten to twenty-five per cent, while for a substantially built brick radiation by the foregoing formulas may seem a difficult task, but it is really quite simple. Thus, in a living room 12x14 and nine feet high, with one end and side exposed—that is, they are outside walls—and with two windows, each 3x6 feet, there will be thirty-six square feet of glass, the exposed wall surface will amount to 234 square feet, and the cubic contents of the room is 1,512 feet. Then we shall need for radiation thirty-six square feet, the area of glass; plus twenty-three feet, which is one-tenth of the exposed wall; plus fifteen feet, which over a steam pump for steam line drainage and boiler feeding.

Substituted for pumps, the Morehead System will keep all steam pipes clear of condensation and return it to the boiler as pure, hot feed water quicker and on 90% less steam than a steam pump will do it.

The installation expense is small—the results great. It matters not whether your institution is large or small, the Morehead System will save sufficient to pay for itself in a few months' time. Letters in our files prove this. Let us tell you about it.

is one per cent of the cubic contents, or a total of seventy-four square feet of radiation. For sleeping rooms of the same size, about fifty feet of radiation will answer in a well built frame house. In a poorly built house, the radiation might range from eighty to ninety feet for 70 degrees, and from fifty-five to sixty-four feet for 60 degrees. Even these figures should be slightly increased if the location is much exposed, or if the outside temperature drops to 20 degrees below zero or lower for a number of days each winter. When the low temperatures last but a few days, a little heavier firing will keep up the heat.

In determining the size of the main flow and return pipes—which, by the way, should be of the same size—if the radiation is less than 250 square feet, 2-inch pipe may be used; for 250 to 400 feet we would advise the use of 2½-inch; from 400 to 700, 3-inch is suggested, and 4-inch will answer for 700 to 1,400 square feet of radiation. The amount of radiation in the surface of the mains should also be taken into account, unless they are well insulated, and even then some account should be made of it, if they are extra long. The foregoing estimate is for use in cases where the radiators are at least two feet above the top of the boiler.

Unless a radiator is quite small and only a short distance from the main, we would not use less than 1¼-inch pipes for the feed and return pipes. For radiators up to sixty square feet we would use 1¼-inch pipes for the supply and return pipes, and above that 1½-inch up to 150 square feet of radiation. For radiators on the second floor, as well as those on the first floor that are quite near the main, or where they are five or six feet above the top of the boiler, the amount that may be supplied with 1¼-inch and 1½-inch pipes may be increased twenty-five per cent.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—H. W. Pierce is growing a number of Fordhook bush Lima beans, two in each 3-inch pot, the idea being to take advantage of the late season. He had the pots idle and believes the crop will be a good experiment.

The Market.

Most of the cut flower dealers are bragging about Mothers' day business, which was better than last year. Some of the retailers made a feature of plants, "the kind mother likes."

We are now enjoying real summer weather, but there has been no oversupply in any kind of stock. In fact, carnations are still short of the demand and are bringing $4 per hundred. Roses are more plentiful, but lilies still are on the short side.

Various Notes.

The plantsmen now all are busy, as it is customary to have the cemeteries planted before Memorial day. The cold weather held the work back, so all are rushed.

Randolph & McClements report that the week preceding Mothers' day was busier than at Christmas. Several weddings and other social affairs, together with the Mothers' day trade, kept them working night and day. They also say there is a big demand for porch boxes.

The A. W. Smith Co. says its landscape department is far behind in its orders. There is more business in this line this spring than ever before.

Mrs. E. A. Williams has been exceptionally busy. Besides social functions, there has been much funeral work.

Mrs. Karl Koenig has started work on a range of greenhouses on her new place on Thompson Run road. She will put up four 200-foot houses and a service or pottery house this summer. She expects to move her stock into the new houses this fall. Next year she contemplates increasing her establishment.

John Koenig has purchased an auto truck for the delivery of plants.

Fred Burki attended the auto races at Uniontown last week.

T. P. Langhans has moved into his new home, the lawn of which runs to Riverview park, giving him a city park for a back yard.

It seems certain that blooming plants will be scarce for Memorial day. Calls for this class of stock this spring have been heavier than usual. Clarke.

Butte, Mont.—The five florists here combined to purchase a half-page ad in the best daily just before Mothers' day and consider it was one of the principal factors in obtaining the big increase in business they all had.

The Market.

Last week showed one of the quick changes that the flower market is subject to. Of course, at the beginning of the week there was a marked scarcity of stock on account of the big demand for Mothers' day, which drained every source of supply for that time. Prices remained steady until about Wednesday, when the effects of the warm weather became manifest. The supply showed a material increase, while the demand dropped back to normal or below. Stock began to accumulate, and while the business was fairly good, the demand was not sufficiently large to take up the increased supply. There was a material drop in price toward the end of the week and bargains were again obtainable.

The cut of carnations was good and the quality was fine for this time of the year. Roses sold well and their quality was excellent.

There was an overabundance of sweet peas, and, while prices were ridiculously low, the market could not be kept cleared of them. Only the fancy stock moved well. Bulbous stock was in heavy supply and prices showed a marked decline under those of the previous week. Advance orders are already coming in quite heavily for Memorial day. Of course red and white carnations are in greatest demand, but all colors come in for a good call. Sweet peas and roses are also being ordered quite heavily in advance and peonies are coming in for a good share of the orders placed for this occasion.

From present indications, Memorial day should surpass all previous marks in volume of business done. As stock apparently will be about right for that time, an enormous quantity of stock should be moved. Local peonies will probably not be in for that time and it looks as though there will be a shortage of this stock. Spring plants are having an exceptionally good sale; large blocks of stock are being moved daily.

Various Notes.

The big event of the week was the Shriners' ball, which was held at the Auditorium May 19. The big hall was decorated with smilax and American flags. The various committeemen, of whom there were quite a number, were in full dress, and each wore a red carnation. The affair was informal and this retarded the display of corsages to some extent. The A. F. Kellner Co. had charge of the decorations.

KANSAS CITY, MO.

The Market.

Business has been excellent during the last week, wedding, social and funeral work having been heavy. Bedding plant sales are ahead of last year and all think that they will be sold out by Memorial day, in face of the fact that there has been but one week warm enough for planting out.

Roses have been in oversupply, and in consequence prices have dropped to low levels. Fair roses can be bought as low as $1.50 per hundred. While the prices of the best stock hold up well, the quality is not so good. Carnations, sweet peas, lilies and other cut stock are plentiful. Some peonies are arriving in the market. They are of good quality. Outdoor perennial stock also can now be obtained.

Various Notes.

Eric Frandsen is building three new houses, 38x300, on his range east of Independence, Mo. He will grow roses exclusively.

James Masson had the decorations for the conventions of the Kansas Bankers' Association and the Osteopaths at the Baltimore hotel.

Samuel Murray had a busy week with wedding and funeral work.

W. J. Barnes planted Fairmount park last week, using more than 2,500 plants in the beds, as well as thirty hanging baskets of ferns. His greenhouses show that much spring bedding business has been done.

Adolph D. Mohr has his new bungalow about ready for occupancy. He reports business better than ever before. His houses look well, especially a fine lot of young begonias.

Arthur Newell reports business is good and he expects a big Memorial day trade.

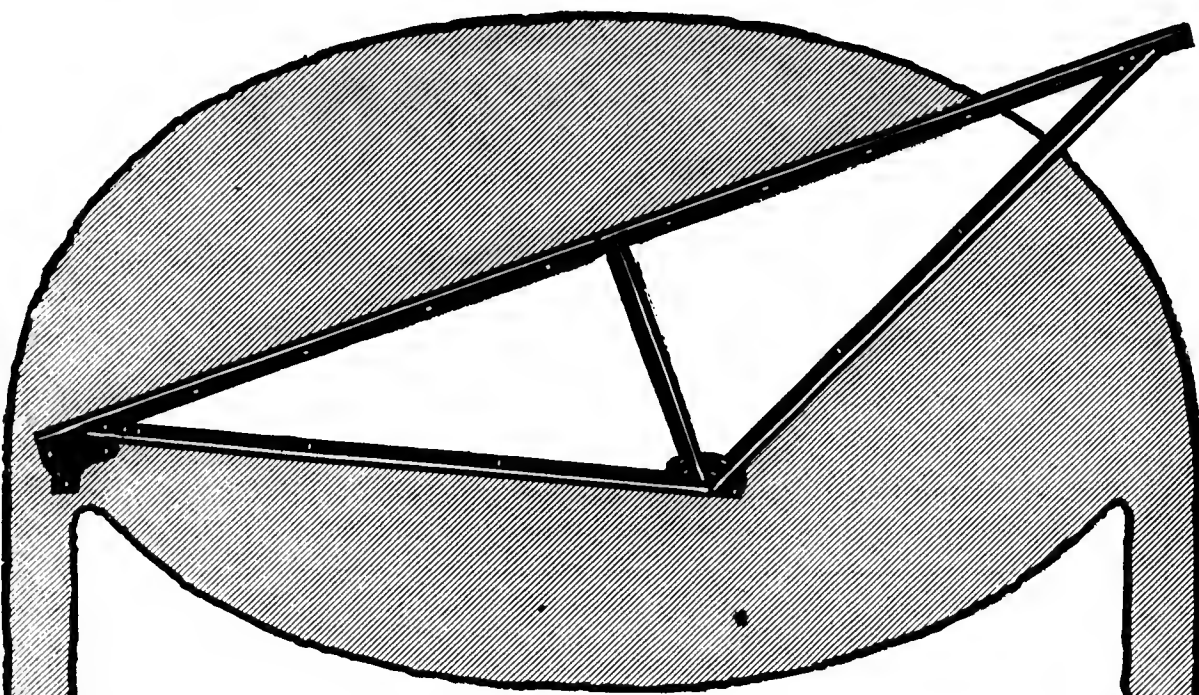

Charles Thomas has had a big run of funeral and social work.

James Payne has sold about all of his bedding stock.

T. J. Noll & Co. are handling a fine lot of home-grown cut peonies.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. is now cutting a large quantity of roses. Carnations are not so plentiful. Funeral work has been heavy with this company all the week.

W. J. B.

SPEED

We Have Solved It.

SEE that greenhouse truss framing above? That's the way we shipped it from the factory. It is all bolted together and fast to the rafter, ready to hoist up and drop right into place between the ridge and column.

For the assembling of the frame, we have a specially designed portable traveling crane that yanks the frame up into position in a jiffy.

With our method of preparing material and erecting, it is possible to put up the complete frame of one house a week, 61 feet or so wide and 500 long.

Of course, no one can overcome delays caused by shortage of materials or railroad hold-ups. But we can make up for a lot of them by erection speed.

You know we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

Club Meeting.

Because of the lateness of the peony crop, it was decided at the meeting of the Rochester Florists' Association, held May 14, to postpone the peony show scheduled for June 15 and 16 to June 22 and 23. It was feared that if the show were to be held as early as was originally intended, many plants would not be in bloom.

In the conduct of the show, the association will cooperate with the Rochester branch of the Red Cross, and the net receipts will be donated to the latter organization. It is expected that besides the large number of local exhibits, several large out-of-town exhibits will be made. If present plans mature, the show will be one of the most brilliant affairs of its kind ever held in the city. The women's auxiliary of the Florists' Association will serve tea at the show.

Because of the varying opinion of florists on the amendment to the penal law, to prohibit, with certain exceptions, the sale of flowers on Sundays, it was decided at the meeting to lay the matter on the table indefinitely. If the amendment, which has been introduced in the Assembly, becomes law, the sale of flowers will be limited to Easter and the Sundays nearest Christmas, New Year's and Memorial day, and on any Sunday from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. for florists located near any cemetery in which burials have not been discontinued.

In a talk on trade conditions Ambrose H. Secker, secretary of the association, said that he believed that there would undoubtedly be a falling off in the sale of flowers during the war, and he advised growers to so plan that they will be able to keep their heads above water until normal conditions are once more restored. Mr. Secker further advised florists to engage in the production of flower and vegetable seeds.

ANNUALS FOR CUTTING.

Kindly tell me what annuals will be suitable to grow for cut flowers in a greenhouse during the winter season. I usually grow calendulas, centaureas, mignonette, nasturtiums and snapdragons, but would like to know some other kinds to grow.

N. T.—Mich.

The following annuals, in addition to those you mention, succeed well under glass: Larkspurs, lupines, nemesis, clarkias, Gypsophila elegans, Statice Suworowii, stocks, candytuft, Mexican poppy, or Hunnemannia fumariæfolia, schizanthus, sweet peas, salpiglossis. All of these can be used for cutting.

A PUBLISHER'S DREAM.

Once upon a time there was an advertiser who got his copy in ahead of closing dates; he gave the publisher time for careful composition; making of cuts was never left until the "last gun," with the printer holding the presses and running up the publisher's bill. There were no disputes about typographical errors and inadvertent insertions. And this advertiser was always pleased with the attention and service the publisher gave him.

SELECTED STRAINS of FLORISTS' FLOWER SEEDS

SPENCER SWEET PEAS

New Giant Waved or Spencer SWEET PEAS

There is no other flower that ranks greater in importance to the florist than Sweet Peas. Since the introduction of Countess Spencer some years ago, they have steadily grown in favor. The florist may obtain any of his favorite colors of the Grandiflora type in the Spencers.

Flowers gigantic in size (often 2 inches in diameter), stems stiff, 12 to 15 inches long; the foliage and flower extraordinary in appearance.

ARE YOU READY?

ONCE upon a time, so the story goes, an Irishman and a German started out to rough it together. Neither had any money and they lived by the same means as any other hobo. During one day's foraging, Fritz turned up with a fine looking sausage, and brought it back to divide with Mike. They hit upon the novel plan for dividing it of each taking an end in his mouth and pulling until the sausage parted. Wherever the break happened to come, that was the division. After each had taken a good hold, Mike hissed through his teeth, "air ye reddy?" Whereupon Fritz opened his month to say "jah," and just then Mike gave a jerk and claimed the whole sausage as his own. Wouldn't the Allies like to catch the Germans napping like that on the west front? Oh, boy!

But that isn't what we started out to tell you. We meant to ask about your Chrysanthemum beds. When will you have them ready to receive the plants? When you get them to that point, we will be ready to ship you the finest young plants you ever benched. Here is a list of all good commercial sorts:—Early Frost, Roman Gold, Mrs. Rager, Dolly Dimple, Lena Baum, Oconto, Lynnwood Hall, Unaka, Comoleta, Chrysolora, Chieftain, Nagoya, Wm. Turner, Robt. Halliday, Mistletoe, Mrs. J. C. Neil, Harvard, Monarch, Baby, Diana, Croesus, F. Wilcox, Leota, Rufus, Acto, Lillia, Golden Climax, Savannah.

WEDDING WINDOWS WIN WITH WOMEN

Impressing the feminine mind, so that when a girl becomes engaged and begins to plan for her wedding she will go to a certain store for her decorations and bouquets, has been the inspiration for many striking wedding windows. A new and attractive wedding window display is illustrated and described on this page.

T

HERE is no girl about to marry and who plans to have a "real wedding," whether it be in church or at her home, but has many girl friends as excited about the coming event as is she herself. Every detail of dress, of the ceremony, of the wedding breakfast, dinner or supper, and of the floral decorations and bouquets — the latter being the subjects we are particularly interested in — is discussed for weeks before, exclaimed about at the time and talked over afterward.

The bride, undoubtedly, had attended the weddings of many of her friends. She had been impressed with the beauty of the flowers at these ceremonies and had decided that she, too, must be married amid equally elaborate surroundings. And being like the average girl, she had decided not to be outdone by her friends.

These human traits have made wedding decorations and bouquets an important part of the retail end of our business. And as the wholesaler and grower are dependent on the retailer, the connecting link with the consumer, weddings hold a considerable interest for the whole trade.

A bride is a symbol of happiness. Her joy is contagious. That is why we all take so much interest in brides and weddings. We get a reflection of the happiness that attends the event, to the details of which we give more than a passing notice.

Appeal to Women.

But weddings make an especial appeal to the feminine mind. It is doubtful if there is a girl or woman but who has, at some time in her life, carefully considered the details of her own wedding. She has pictured in her mind's eye her gown, the flowers she will carry and the setting of her marriage.

The girl, of course, has the final say about the flowers for her wedding. Consequently, when we florists go after wedding work, we must make our appeal to women, especially young women.

During the last few years florists have been capitalizing this interest in weddings each spring by turning the display window into a church chancel, installing a wax model dressed in a wedding gown and surrounding it with floral decorations and the attractive accessories which are used. The whole has been effective, but lacking in that personal element which is so necessary in sales-producing advertising. The wax model is pretty. So is the gown. But to the girl who halts before the window the display is only a display, without that human element which would hold her interest and make a deep impression upon her mind.

Brides' Pictures Get Crowds.

Suppose it had been possible to secure the young society woman, whose wedding the week before had been an event, to pose in that window. The newspapers had given much space to her wedding and to descriptions of the gowns of the bride and the bridesmaids, and to the decorations of the church.

Thousands of girls, engaged girls, un-engaged girls who would like to be engaged, and matrons, young and old, to whom the wedding had recalled their own, had read these accounts.

But reading about and seeing are different. The first is an abstract, the second a concrete, method of conveying a picture to the mind. Would not the appearance of that bride in the window be a wonderful advertisement?

Of course turning this dream into a reality is well-nigh impossible. Some clever retailers, however, are using the next best thing. Instead of putting the society-girl brides, themselves, in the window, they are displaying photographs of them in their wedding gowns. Such a display recently was made by Penn, of Boston, and proved attractive. The window is pictured in the accompanying illustration. E. A. Seidewitz, of Baltimore, also recently had a wedding window in which photographs of prominent brides of that city were features which drew crowds.

The decorations in the Penn window included hydrangeas, Easter lilies and azaleas. The bride's bouquet was of lilies of the valley and orchids. The crook of the maid of honor carried marguerites and asparagus and the bridesmaid's basket matched it. Neither the maid of honor's gloves nor hat were overlooked, the hat being trimmed with little Sweetheart roses and tulle. Here and there in the window were photographs of some of the prettiest brides of recent seasons and their bouquets.

Wedding Work Pays.

Photographs come as near as anything inanimate can to producing a sense of the personal in a window. The onlooker, should he or she discover the picture of a friend or an acquaintance, would go away with a more or less lasting impression. And it is the lasting impression that the florist wants to make. That is what brings his store to mind when flowers are needed.

And it is the lasting impression that the florist wants to make. That is what brings his store to mind when flowers are needed.

There is not a question or a doubt that window displays help the florist to a good bit of the special work. This sort of business is valuable, not only because there is usually a considerable sum involved in the one transaction, but because the work, if well done, adds a new customer to the retailer's list. A wedding means another family and in the years to come the bride of today will always have a warm spot in her heart for the florist who provided the decorations for her wedding and the wedding bouquets. That is, of course, he will stick in her memory if his work pleased her.

There is a whole lot of truth in that old phrase, "A satisfied customer is our best advertisement." Can you not imagine the bride at her first "at home," telling her friends, as they go over the glories of the wedding and discuss the floral decorations, that "Flora & Co." supplied the flowers and were they not beautiful? That is convincing publicity—the kind that gets customers and makes them confident that your judgment in selecting and skill in arranging flowers can be relied upon.

Gives Creative Genius Sway.

The feature of wedding work which is the most interesting to the florist who is really an artist, is the designing of the decorations and bouquets. Here he has an opportunity to give his creative genius full sway. True, there are not many ways by which the general effect can be altered, but here and there little in advance of their use. Thus only the best stock should be used, so that there will be no danger of the flowers looking anything but at their best. One faded bloom is more noticeable than a hundred perfect ones.

Helps Sales in Slack Time.

There is another phase of the subject of spring weddings which makes it all the more important for the retailer to bend his efforts to educating his customers and prospective customers to come to him for work of this character. Weddings, especially June weddings, come at a time when sales of cut stock are slow and one or two of them will put the balance for the month on the right side of the ledger. Flowers are plentiful. Indeed, in the smaller towns the abundance of blooms leads to a temptation to amateur decorating.

But the florist can supply what the layman lacks—experience in handling and selecting flowers, knowledge of color combinations and the ability to work up the different blooms into a harmonious whole. Besides, he has artistic baskets, pretty vases and bowls and the other accessories which are necessary to make complete to the last detail the decorations for elaborate weddings. Thus is the handicap of a profusion of flowers offset.

As the scale of social functions has advanced during the last quarter of a century, hosts, and hostesses especially, have learned that the florist's services ness of the trade and the development of its members.

People Have Plenty of Money.

Despite the high cost of living and the war, there will be just as much, if not more, wedding work this year. The more prosperous class of people has been the class which has profited most by the great commercial and industrial prosperity of the country during the last two years. Besides, there are many who have suddenly acquired wealth and much of this wealth is being put into circulation by its owners. People, too, have been educated to spend, which is not difficult knowledge to acquire. They have the money and will let go of it. It is up to the individual florist to provide value received and the work will come to him.

So let us in the trade go after business instead of waiting for business to come to us. Profit by the experience of other members of the trade with window displays; adopt their ideas and at the same time keep your brains working and go them one better by adding an original touch. Be not backward about keeping your business in the minds of the people in your town. Then you will be so busy you will not have time to hear the jarring note of the chronic pessimist, who is bound, once in a while, to break in on the big chorus of optimists, made so by a record season in our business. Costs are higher, but so are prices and the number of flower-buyers is increasing all the time.

A TIP FROM GOTHAM.

Like the fashions—and the cost of food—decorations change. People have not the ideas about house and church decorations they had a few years back. For instance, the accompanying illustration typifies a new treatment of the embellishments for a church wedding. It will be noticed—but here is Max Schling's description of his work:

"Church decorations are not as they used to be—just a bower and a lot of palms, with a heavy, set background; ribbons drawn along the aisle, a big bunch of Easter lilies on each aisle post or each pew, and a fancy tree-form shape above the aisle, just like an arbor behind our grandfather's farmhouse.

uries, but, as the prophets said, we should worry; as it seems to be a cut and dried matter that for all occasions in which joy, welcome, love, sorrow, condolence and remembrance enter, flowers really are well-nigh indispensable. Witness as proof of this the Mothers' day business. One is able to explain the unusual increase in business for the day only by the belief that people are seeing the futility of extreme retrenchment and refusing to forego the pleasure of purchasing what might be considered by some to be luxuries.

That was Mothers' day, and now June with its brides is here. From the facts on hand, it is obvious that, war economy or no war economy, the June bride will have her flowers. A woman's wedding is the most important event in her life, an event that sticks in the memory, and on such an occasion those in charge usually are free-handed in their expenditure for wedding flowers. It is difficult to draw a line between the beauty and utility of wedding flowers; these attributes are inseparable.

Make It a Good Job.

The important role which flowers play in the wedding ceremony should furnish the florist with his cue, that an order for wedding work is a key to greater patronage. A wedding order is a business-bringing opportunity par excellence. It brings the florist into contact not only with the new home or family, but also with the families of the bride and bridegroom. Other weddings in either of the two families, funerals, anniversaries and the flower days may contribute a large share toward building a bigger business. If one were to multiply the possibilities for future business in each wedding order by ten, twenty, thirty or fifty such orders per year, the significance of pleasing the June bride and her relatives would be brought home more forcibly.

Admittedly, if there is any work that is worth doing well, it is wedding work. Wedding flowers are subject to almost as critical a survey as the bride's gown, so it behooves the florist—if he be the kind that plans for the future—to strive hard to please the bride and bridegroom. Whether church or home decoration, whether the bride's or the bridesmaid's bouquet, everything must be worked out carefully, with brain as well as with hand. Wedding anniversaries come each year to remind people of their wedding day, and among the remembrances may be that of a florist's good work.

The Illustrations.

Of course, good stock is essential to good work of any kind, but it is particularly necessary when it is held in the hands of a bride or when it serves as a background at the altar. Some retailers have been known to sacrifice part of their profits on wedding work in order to give their customers complete satisfaction. The florist should have a full equipment of wedding accessories, such as vases, gates, kneeling stools, aisle posts, wedding rope, ribbons, baskets, etc. The retailer who is ready to execute any and all kinds of wedding work surely makes a better bid for success than one who has to "hunt" his accessories.

One of the accompanying illustrations shows how Mrs. M. E. Irby, of Memphis, Tenn., improvised an altar for a home wedding. The other picture depicts the interior of Calvary church, Memphis, after Mrs. Irby and her assistants of the Flower Shop had completed their work.

TREATMENT OF FORCED PLANTS.

Can you tell me how to treat my azaleas, rhododendrons, hydrangeas and spiræas so that they will flower again next year?—C. A. M.—Mich.

Remove all the seeds from your azaleas and rhododendrons and put the plants outdoors where you can readily reach them with the hose in warm, dry weather. A coldframe is a suitable place for the azaleas. Set the plants in a mixture of loam, leaf-mold, sand and a little old manure. Plant them firmly and keep them well syringed and watered. There is no reason why the azaleas should not be bristling with buds next fall, and, unless all signs fail, azalea importations the coming season will be nil. The rhododendrons will only set buds moderately, especially that fine variety, Pink Pearl, and may require to be carried a second season. Spiræas can be planted out in good garden soil, grown a couple of seasons and then reforced. Hydrangeas, both Otaksa and the French varieties, can be cut back well, planted outdoors, dug up and repotted in early fall. Give them a good soil to grow in. C. W.

tion or a doubt that window displays help the florist to a good bit of the special work. This sort of business is valuable, not only because there is usually a considerable sum involved in the one transaction, but because the work, if well done, adds a new customer to the retailer's list. A wedding means another family and in the years to come the bride of today will always have a warm spot in her heart for the florist who provided the decorations for her wedding and the wedding bouquets. That is, of course, he will stick in her memory if his work pleased her.

There is a whole lot of truth in that old phrase, "A satisfied customer is our best advertisement." Can you not imagine the bride at her first "at home," telling her friends, as they go over the glories of the wedding and discuss the floral decorations, that "Flora & Co." supplied the flowers and were they not beautiful? That is convincing publicity—the kind that gets customers and makes them confident that your judgment in selecting and skill in arranging flowers can be relied upon.

Gives Creative Genius Sway.

The feature of wedding work which is the most interesting to the florist who is really an artist, is the designing of the decorations and bouquets. Here he has an opportunity to give his creative genius full sway. True, there are not many ways by which the general effect can be altered, but here and there little in advance of their use. Thus only the best stock should be used, so that there will be no danger of the flowers looking anything but at their best. One faded bloom is more noticeable than a hundred perfect ones.

Helps Sales in Slack Time:

There is another phase of the subject of spring weddings which makes it all the more important for the retailer to bend his efforts to educating his customers and prospective customers to come to him for work of this character. Weddings, especially June weddings, come at a time when sales of cut stock are slow and one or two of them will put the balance for the month on the right side of the ledger. Flowers are plentiful. Indeed, in the smaller towns the abundance of blooms leads to a temptation to amateur decorating.

But the florist can supply what the layman lacks—experience in handling and selecting flowers, knowledge of color combinations and the ability to work up the different blooms into a harmonious whole. Besides, he has artistic baskets, pretty vases and bowls and the other accessories which are necessary to make complete to the last detail the decorations for elaborate weddings. Thus is the handicap of a profusion of flowers offset.

As the scale of social functions has advanced during the last quarter of a century, hosts and hostesses especially, have learned that the florist's services ness of the trade and the development of its members.

People Have Plenty of Money.

Despite the high cost of living and the war, there will be just as much, if not more, wedding work this year. The more prosperous class of people has been the class which has profited most by the great commercial and industrial prosperity of the country during the last two years. Besides, there are many who have suddenly acquired wealth and much of this wealth is being put into circulation by its owners. People, too, have been educated to spend, which is not difficult knowledge to acquire. They have the money and will let go of it. It is up to the individual florist to provide value received and the work will come to him.

So let us in the trade go after business instead of waiting for business to come to us. Profit by the experience of other members of the trade with window displays; adopt their ideas and at the same time keep your brains working and go them one better by adding an original touch. Be not backward about keeping your business in the minds of the people in your town. Then you will be so busy you will not have time to hear the jarring note of the chronic pessimist, who is bound, once in a while, to break in on the big chorus of optimists, made so by a record season in our business. Costs are higher, but so are prices and the number of flower-buyers is increasing all the time.

A TIP FROM GOTHAM.

Like the fashions—and the cost of food—decorations change. People have not the ideas about house and church decorations they had a few years back. For instance, the accompanying illustration typifies a new treatment of the embellishments for a church wedding. It will be noticed—but here is Max Sehling's description of his work:

"Church decorations are not as they used to be—just a bower and a lot of palms, with a heavy, set background, ribbons drawn along the aisle, a big bunch of Easter lilies on each aisle post or each pew, and a fancy tree-form shape above the aisle, just like an arbor behind our grandfather's farmhouse.

Mr. Sehling points out that the darker the background, the more prominent the bride in her white gown.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS

The Spraying Season.

We have reached the season when insect pests once more will give us considerable trouble. Thanks to the cool season, their ravages up to date have been comparatively negligible. But a burst of heat would send them forth in incredible numbers and we must have our spraying outfit in condition and have the necessary poisons and insecticides on hand when needed. For leaf-eating caterpillars, such as cankerworms, gypsy moths, brown-tail moths, elm beetles, etc., arsenate of lead at the rate of four pounds to fifty gallons of water is the best remedy. If dry arsenate of lead is used, only half the weight need be employed and I have found it fully as efficacious. For black and green aphids, a nicotine or soap spray answers well. White fly can be killed by a contact spray, but the trouble is that it is too restless. The lace-wing fly on rhododendrons can be destroyed by a soap spray, but it is necessary to use a nozzle ejecting a fine, misty spray and sending it upward, as the pests are all found on the lower sides of the foliage. Two or three sprayings are necessary to keep them in subjection. Hellebore dusted on the bushes while the foliage is damp will get the rose slug and currant worm. For cutworms a poisoned mash of fresh shorts, molasses and water with sufficient Paris green to color it, scattered about the haunts in the evening, will destroy large numbers.

The Rock Garden.

A feature in American horticulture, which is rapidly becoming a dominant one, is rock gardening. A year or two ago any idea of successful rock gardening here was pooh-poohed, but it has been conclusively shown that, in spite of our hot summers and severe winters, we can grow hundreds of varieties of rock and alpine plants. Many people have land which is not adaptable for the culture of shrubs, annuals, or the stronger growing herbs. By the use of some old field stone, well weather-worn, it is not difficult to start a little rock garden on such land and, once established and planted in an informal way, the delights are sure to encourage the grower to develop a little each year. Florists should encourage and assist in developing this branch of gardening and in no better way can they do it than by planting a small rockery themselves. The majority of rock plants need full sun. Some, like the primulas, need partial shade. The bulk are readily raised from seed. At present in the rock garden the Phlox subulata and divaricata, aubrietias, saxifragas, violas, myosotis, primulas, some campanulas, cerastiums, epimediums, geums, dwarf iris, hardy candytufts, alyssums, arabis, anemones, trilliums and many bulbous subjects make a glorious show and fresh varieties are opening daily. There is a vast undeveloped field here. Why not help to develop it and raise a good batch of suitable plants for the purpose?

Of course, quite a few evergreens are available for rock gardening; so are occasional tall growing plants, like eremuri, yuccas, foxgloves, verbascums and lilies, but the bulk of the plants are low growing and wonderfully beautiful.

Some Useful Annuals.

If you have not sown all the annuals needed, the present is a good time to start a batch for late summer flowering of such plants as hennemannia, Shirley and other poppies, Gypsophila elegans, larkspurs, lupines, clarkias, nemesias, candytuft, coreopsis and many others. Also start some asters and stocks in a frame and give these a transplanting before placing them in the field. Keep the cultivator going persistently among all flower crops. The deficiency in plant fertilizers can be overcome in large measure by keeping the surface soil constantly tickled.

Left Over Spiræas.

If you have any left over Spiræa Gladstone, astilboides, Ceres, Peach Blossom, Queen Alexandra or other good spiræas, plant them out in good soil now. Do not try to force them again next winter. If you wait until the fall of 1918 you can safely dig up and force them again, and your clumps will be vastly ahead in quality of any you can buy. As there is a probability of no Dutch bulbs or roots coming in next fall, we should try to grow some few subjects ourselves and anyone with good soil can succeed with spiræas.

Cold Storage Lilies.

Longiflorum lilies are useful when there is a call for design work right through the summer. Now is a suitable time to secure and pot a batch of these cold storage bulbs. Do the potting as soon as possible after the bulbs are received. It spoils these bulbs quickly to let them lie around in a dry shed. They should go in 5-inch pots and, if fairly moist loam is used, they need not be watered. Stand them on a shed floor, on a cellar floor or below a greenhouse bench, provided it is free from drip. They will soon start to make both roots and growths, when they can be moved to a bench in a warm house. It does not pay to start too many of these lilies at a time during hot weather, as they come along quite rapidly. You will know how many your trade will use and pot them accordingly. Many bulb dealers specialize in cold storage lilies and you should get them in small lots from these dealers as needed.

Evanston, Ill.—George M. Meier is overhauling his place at 1210 South boulevard and preparing for another season. He has had excellent success with callas grown from big bulbs planted out in the benches.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS FOR SOUTHERN FLORISTS

GIGANTEUMS IN THE SOUTH.

These lilies are an important crop in the south during the summer months. Two or three bulbs may be potted in a 6-inch pot and the pots placed under a bench until well started, when they may be brought into the light. The main thing to watch in their culture, besides proper watering, is to see that the aphids are thoroughly kept away. It is surprising how quickly this pest can ruin a whole batch if allowed undisturbed possession for a few days. Insure the crop by keeping this pest down. L.

BOUVARDIAS IN THE SOUTH.

Bouvardias do remarkably well in the south, but to do their best they should be planted indoors. Now is a good time to plant. They seem to do equally well on either solid beds or benches. A good carnation soil will suit their requirements. Space the young plants 12x14 inches. Two-year-old plants that have been cut back will require a little more room. Keep them clear of weeds and stir the surface soil occasionally. They require quite a lot of water when growing freely.

Keep the shoots pinched until the end of August or later if the crop is wanted to last until the holidays. A night temperature of 55 degrees suits them better than a lower one. The plants want support exactly like carnations. L.

HARDY PLANTS FOR THE SOUTH.

Now is a good time to sow seeds of many of the hardy plants, such as feverfews, campanulas, hollyhocks, larkspurs, Shasta daisies, foxgloves, gypsophilas, etc. The seeds can be sown in a cold frame and handled in pots until big enough to be set out in the field, where they will make fine clumps for next spring's sales. The campanulas are probably better grown in pots entirely, especially if wanted for early spring blooms. This plant sells readily as a pot plant and the blooms of the blue variety also find favor. There seems to be an increasing demand each year for plants like these and there is really more money in them than in many of the soft spring plants. Cultivate the plants each week in the field and you will be surprised at the result. All of these will not succeed in the more southern states, but in the northern section they do well. L.

MEMORIAL DAY ECHOES

LOOKING BACKWARD.

To View the Future.

Memorial day, the last of the holidays that mean added business for the trade before the summer season, is past and during the next few months our business will have no artificial stimulant. Therefore it appears to be an opportune time to look back and analyze the activities of the last eight or nine months, check up on the business done and the profits earned and from this analysis map out our course for the future.

Retrospection invariably brings introspection. We look back over the things we have done and take stock of what our activities have accomplished. We see where we have won and where we have lost; we realize why we have succeeded and usually can put our fingers on the causes of our failures. Thus, by the process of elimination, we know what is best for us to do in the future.

Repeated statement of the same fact is supposed to give it emphasis; therefore let it here be repeated that business with florists—growers, wholesalers and retailers—never has been so good; in fact, it broke all records to smithereens. And the cause for this effect is that never has the trade, individually and as a whole, done so much to increase the demand for flowers, not at any particular store or group of stores, but at all stores.

During the last several years The Review has been preaching the cause of publicity to florists. Week after week and year after year, its columns have told of the successes made by this retailer and that retailer through the use of advertising space. Look back over the last, your most successful year, and consider what the trade as a whole has done in the way of publicity for flowers. Individual florists and groups of florists have spread the gospel, "Buy flowers." Flowers for Christmas, flowers for St. Valentine's day, flowers for Easter, flowers for Mothers' day and flowers for Memorial day—that has been the burden of their advertising. And the public has bought.

It does not take long for the average human to realize the joy to be derived from the good things of life. Those who bought at Christmas for the first time, bought again at Easter and at Mothers' day. Next season they will have the flower buying habit, if they have not it already.

What the Future Holds.

It is a wise man who profits by the experience of others. What has been done to help the trade as a whole by the individual florists and the organizations of florists is only a starter in what can be accomplished. It has been demonstrated that advertising pays; that it means dollars to the florist to go after business instead of sitting tight and waiting for business to come to him.

There is no need to recite what can be accomplished to the progressive members of the trade who have blazed the trail for their less imaginative fellows. They know what they have done and what it has meant to their business. Next year they will follow out the policy that has proven itself a winner, only more intensively. They will help in the campaigns of national publicity—the success of the Mothers' day campaign presages others of its kind—and will continue to advertise as individuals.

What are you going to do?

NEHRLING'S NEAT AD CARD.

Experience in teaching the science of growing flowers appears to have taught A. H. Nehrling, formerly professor of floriculture at the Massachusetts Agricultural College and now manager of McDonald & Co., florists at Crawfordsville, Ind., the science of selling flowers, as the accompanying illustration of a Memorial day advertising card, sent out by Mr. Nehrling, will show.

The text of the advertising matter on the card deals with the sentiment of the day and uses an up-to-the-minute condition in our national affairs to accentuate that thought, with a flag to illustrate it; next the advantage of ordering early is impressed and finally

The text was: "Memorial day, May 30. A tribute to the loved ones. Flowers in the home." Stickers, one of which is reproduced in the illustrations on page 15, carried the same words.

There is food for thought in the words "flowers in the home." Here the Detroit florists are expanding the Mothers' day idea to the Memorial day sales. Not only are they urging plants, wreaths and flowers for the cemetery, but are bidding for sales of cut flowers and plants for home decoration.

That Mothers' Day Campaign.

Albert Pochelon, chairman of the publicity committee of the Detroit Florists' Club, has issued a statement of the receipts for the Mothers' day campaign and of what his committee did in the way of newspaper advertising and other publicity. Subscriptions for the Mothers' day push amounted to $1,118, of which $717.16 was spent. Of this amount, all but $216.60 was spent in the Detroit newspapers, the first ad appearing Tuesday, May 8, and the last May 12, the day before Mothers' day.

"While your committee is perfectly satisfied with the results derived compared with the amount of money spent," Mr. Pochelon says in his report, "yet we wish to hear from all of you and are looking for your criticism. * * * Remember we need your coöperation, not alone in a financial way, but also in new ideas. We already have under way a still stronger campaign for Memorial day, which, you will all agree, is not nearly enough exploited in Detroit, compared with what is done in eastern cities."

The report gives a list of the contributors, who numbered 205, and the amount each gave. Also, there is an appeal for funds to carry on the work of the club's publicity committee, as, the report says, "there is a chance for you to help to make our fund larger so we may keep up this advertising campaign for several days during the year."

From this report it will be seen that the Detroit florists are satisfied that co-operative campaigns for special flower selling days pay and that the trade there is going to overlook none of its opportunities.

HOW HOLLAND BULB IMPORTS DOUBLED

AN OFFICIAL RECORD.

Covering Four Years' Business.

Last autumn The Review showed its readers how the imports of bulbs were going ahead of all previous records and last week this paper published the official figures of the United States government for the six months from July 1, 1916, to December 31, 1916, indicating the following totals for the half year:

Hyacinth bulbs, astilbe, dielytra and lily of the valley clumps..... 33,148,000
Lily of the valley pips, tulips, narcissus, begonia and gloxinia bulbs..187,400,000
All other bulbs, roots, root stocks, corms and tubers which are cultivated for their flowers or foliage... 44,293,000

This week the official figures of the exports from Holland are available, supplied to Frank W. Mahin, United States consul at Amsterdam, April 23, by the General Society of Bulb Growers.

The Consul's Comment.

"According to the official figures," says Mr. Mahin, "the foreign bulb trade of Holland was unusually small in quantity in 1916. The exports of bulbs were not materially less than the average of preceding years, but the imports were barely twenty per cent the quantity during the last peace year. How-tions or materially alter the quantities.

"The decline in the total quantity of exports," notes the consul, "was due to the smaller shipments to the British Isles, which country prohibited the importation of bulbs. The export to the United States and Canada is totaled into one, but the records of the consulate show that only a small part went to Canada.

"Although prices obtained in 1916 were apparently high in comparison with peace prices, they were in reality unsatisfactory when unfavorable rates of exchange and other war factors were taken into account. Cost of production was also unusually high in 1916. It is said that at least 2,000,000 kilos of bulbs were sold at prices below cost at the end of the season.

This Year's Outlook.

"The prospects for 1917 are uncertain. Although the United States and Scandinavia took an unusually large quantity of bulbs in 1916, it is feared that the quantity will be unusually small in 1917. Facilities for transportation to the United States are uncertain, and the export to Scandinavian countries depends upon their doubtful ability to obtain the fuel necessary to ernment aid has been asked and will be extended so far as may be practicable.

"The past winter was so severe that many bulbs were frozen, and the spring is so backward that the development of bulbs in the ground is seriously retarded."

Holland's Imports.

In normal years Holland imports a considerable quantity of bulbs, but the importations almost ceased last year. The record of imports for the last four years is as follows, from the United States and the total of all imports, the quantities being in kilos, which equal 2.2 pounds:

| Year      | From U. S. | Total     |
|-----------|------------|-----------|
| 1913..... | 167,400    | 2,177,700 |
| 1914..... | 131,900    | 1,377,600 |
| 1915..... | 62,500     | 863,300   |
| 1916..... | 53,700     | 468,800   |

The decline of imports was, of course, due to the war, which diverted bulb industries to other purposes in belligerent countries and limited cargo space from the United States to Holland.

Doubled Up On America.

It will be noticed that the weight of bulbs sent to America doubled in four years; that is, in the last peace season the exports to this side of the Atlantic were slightly less than half what they were in the third bulb season of the war, the increase having been considerable in the first and second seasons, but extremely heavy, nearly 3,000,000 kilos, last season, after the British government shut off the traffic.

Everyone knows that the imports of bulbs in 1916 were greater than could readily be used in this country, that the ordinary methods did not suffice to move them and that many expedients were adopted to work off the surplus.

The Result.

The result was a large overproduction of bulbous flowers this spring, a production that made bulb forcing unprofitable for the average grower who depends on a wholesale market and which depressed the values of all other cut flowers while the bulbous flowers were in season.

ever, imports are of far less consequence to Holland than exports of bulbs."

The table shows the exports during the last four years, in kilos of 2.2 pounds each. Packages of bulbs transmitted by mail are not included in the table, but they would not change the proporwarm the hothouses where bulbs are flowered. Further, Germany and Austria now prohibit the import of bulbs, which alone can reduce the total exports of Dutch bulbs by twenty to thirty per cent.

"The situation is considered so unsatisfactory for the industry that gov-country this winter and spring. One of the factors against them was that their houses in Holland felt the necessity of obtaining war-time prices for bulbs in the face of the fact of restricted markets and their necessity of working off their surplus in America. Many growers and jobbers who undoubtedly will use large quantities of bulbs have refrained from placing orders, feeling sure that if transportation is available the quantity of unsold stock on the market will depress prices, as Consul Mahin notes and the trade all knows it did at the end of last season.

Germany's Supply also Coming.

But the most important item in Consul Mahin's communication, for it is news, relates to the German market having been closed to the Hollanders. Germany normally takes twenty per cent of the Holland bulb crop, but last year took thirty per cent, while America normally takes twenty per cent and last year took almost fifty per cent.

With the German market closed by embargo the United States will be the only large market open to the Holland bulb exporters. Great Britain normally uses twice as many Holland bulbs as has the United States, Germany as many as we and France an appreciable quantity. It seems, therefore, that the Hollanders will seek to find conveyance to America, and a market here, for a quantity of bulbs four times as great as in 1913, the last peace season. There may be a considerable reduction of the output in Holland this year, due to the various factors that have been at work, but there is not the slightest indication or intimation that the crop will be reduced in anything to compare with the quantity of bulbs ordinarily taken by the markets now closed to them by order of the belligerent governments.

It is reported that the British Board of Trade now has absolutely prohibited the importation of bulbs and has given notice that no special licenses to import will be given for any reason whatever.

Britain's Complete Embargo.

The 1916 crop of Holland bulbs was excluded and the quantity of Japanese bulbs admitted was reduced one-half, but French bulbs were admitted without restriction, although the principal cargo of Paper Whites shipped to England last year was submarined in the Mediterranean and was lost.

As a market for the world's output of bulbs, the British Islands have been of greater importance than any other, taking more Dutch and French bulbs and, until recently, more Japanese lily bulbs.

Unless it should appeal to the government of the United States to follow the lead of England, France and Germany, it is apparent that the trade in the United States will be asked to handle practically all the bulbs produced in the world so long as the war lasts.

WIND AND HAIL HIT THE TRADE AGAIN

ILLINOIS THE STORM CENTER.

Central States Suffer Once More.

The greenhouse trade in the central states sustained many losses by wind and hail Saturday and Sunday, May 26 and 27, two storms following each other in such quick succession as to confuse those who had to deal with the disaster. Beginning in Kansas May 26, a wind storm moved eastward, assuming cyclonic proportions on the prairies of central Illinois and spending itself as it approached the Indiana line. But next day Indiana and other states to the south and east were visited by the heaviest hail in many years.

As is usual in such cases, the florists in the affected districts were among the chief sufferers, but in Indiana and other states the market gardening fraternity also was hard hit, the hail being so fierce as to cut up all soft stock in the open ground.

The trade's losses by the second storm were greater than by the first, for the reason that the hail fell in districts that have more and larger greenhouses than are found on the Illinois prairies.

Mattoon, Ill.

Mattoon, lying just south of the center of Illinois, bore the brunt of the storm May 26, which here assumed cyclonic proportions. The path of the storm was narrow, but, passing over the northern part of the city, it caught most of the greenhouse establishments.

A. D. King was the worst sufferer. His greenhouses and dwelling were demolished and he received slight personal injuries.

A. L. Kirchgraber, whose place on Lafayette street was on the edge of the storm, will be able to replace his broken glass for $50.

J. W. Shrader, on Charleston street, has the largest range of glass in Mattoon and he, also, was out of the direct path of the cyclone. He says he will be able to replace the glass that was broken at an expense of $50.

sons were killed and hundreds injured. Mattoon has 15,000 people.

Charleston, Ill.

Charleston is a city of 7,000 inhabitants just east of Mattoon. It was in the direct path of the cyclone that hit the larger city and suffered as badly.

Miss Etta J. Nott, proprietor of the Charleston Greenhouses, is the only florist in the town itself. She had about 5,000 feet of glass and the establishment was practically destroyed by the wind. No hail fell.

The Review's other subscribers at Charleston are located on rural routes. Hardy F. Hill has 5,000 feet of glass on Route No. 7. C. E. Eaton, whose specialty is dahlias, has no greenhouses.

New Castle, Ind.

The establishment of Peter Weiland was on the edge of the tornado which hit several of the big growers there only a few weeks ago, but he was in the direct path of the hail that fell in unprecedented quantities May 27. Mr. Weiland estimates his loss between 400 and 500 boxes of glass. There was some loss on stock in the greenhouses, cut by falling glass, but, aside from the breakage of glass, the greatest loss was in the field. The acres of young carnation plants were badly broken down; it is yet too soon to tell how great the loss on this item will be, but it will be considerable. In the great field of peonies the plants were stripped of two-thirds their foliage and buds, with the result that the crop will be almost a total loss.

The hail was followed by heavy rain, which continued most of the following night and day. This ruined the cut flowers not damaged by falling glass, the sweet peas suffering especially.

Mr. Weiland has nearly 100,000 feet of glass. He had $5,000 of tornado and hail insurance, $3,000 on the glass and $2,000 on the stock, including that in the field.

The other growers at New Castle are located at some little distance from the Weiland range.

Terre Haute, Ind.

Terre Haute is almost due east from Mattoon and Charleston, but the losses here were by hail instead of by wind. The hail was the heaviest ever known in this section and was general over the city, so that not one greenhouse escaped. The losses range upward from $100 to $3,000 for the florists, with the loss of the Davis Gardens, growing vegetables in great glass houses, running much higher.

The florists here, with the approximate amount of glass operated by each, are as follows:

Terre Haute Rose & Carnation Co., 75,000 feet.
Heinl & Weber, 30,000 feet.
J. G. Heinl & Son, 18,000 feet.
Cowan Bros., 15,000 feet.
F. Wunker & Sons, 12,000 feet.
H. Graham, 10,000 feet.
N. B. Stover & Son, 5,000 feet.

There are several other places that do retail trade only, some of them having no glass at all.

The growers who lost glass were nearly all members of the Florists' Hail Association and their losses on glass, from $100 to $3,000, are well covered with insurance.

Much the largest greenhouse range at Terre Haute is that at Davis Gardens, the vegetable forcing establishment started here only a few years ago by J. W. Davis, of Davenport, Ia. These are Lord & Burnham iron frame houses of the most modern construction. The range consists of service building and five houses, each 80x600 feet, but work is under way on another set of houses just doubling the range. Of these five new houses two were practically completed, a third was ready for glazing and the two others had the frames nearly up. There therefore were seven houses with the glass exposed to the hail. The breakage was approximately 40,000 feet, or two carloads of glass, but the loss is estimated much higher, at $15,000, the cucumbers in the older houses being badly cut up. Glass and other glazing material already have been ordered for repairs.

Nashville, Tenn.

Hail hit Nashville. The wind did no damage and hail fell only in spots, so that some of the growers escaped without the loss of a single pane, but at the new place of McIntyre Bros., where the construction is thoroughly modern, three-quarters of the glass was broken. At the old place of this firm the damage was less severe, not more than one-third the glass breaking. In all the firm has about 150,000 feet of glass and the loss will be considerable.

Louis Haury, who has about 60,000 feet of glass, was hit nearly as hard as the new McIntyre place.

L. M. Smith and other vegetable growers lost considerable glass.

The Joy Floral Co., which has the largest range in Nashville, was not in the direct path of the storm and escaped with small loss.

The loss on stock in the greenhouses will not be as heavy as it would have been at some other season of the year.

North Vernon, Ind.

About 7:30 p. m. May 26 a hail storm passed over North Vernon, breaking nearly all the glass, or about 100 boxes, in the greenhouses of Warren Huckleberry, who is the only florist in the town.

There are reports of losses by wind and especially by hail from many other towns, in Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Tennessee, Kentucky, Missouri and Kansas, and no doubt the complete story of May 26 and 27, when it comes to be known, will show the trade's losses to be greater in number and extent than any heretofore recorded within an equal space of time.

Wilmington, N. C.

Hail visited Wilmington earlier in the week. It was about 4 p. m. May 23 that the third of the storms of the day passed over the city, the final one striking the range of Miss Lucy B. Moore, on Market street, where the greenhouses were practically demolished, and the stock injured to some extent. According to a statement made by Miss Moore, the damage to the stock will not be serious, although the loss on the greenhouses will amount to approximately $2,000. Work of rebuilding was begun at once.

The greenhouses of Will Rehder, on Red Cross street, and Mrs. L. P. Fowler, on South Fifth street, were also considerably damaged, the former to the extent of $300 and the latter $150.

LET THE REVIEW KNOW.

If the wind and hail have done any damage to the greenhouses in your vicinity, or to the florists' outdoor crop, stop long enough at this busy season to drop a line to The Review. Everyone in the trade will be watching next week's paper for fuller information regarding the losses sustained. Let's hear from you. And do it now!

HYDRANGEAS NOT FLOWERING.

I have some hydrangeas carried over from last year. They are fine plants, but have no blooms on them. They were bought last year in small pots and planted out, making nice plants. Shall I cut them back and root the tips or will they bloom? They are the French and Otaksa varieties. J. G. C.—Mo.

You must have either frozen the flower buds on your hydrangeas, or subjected them to unsuitable storage conditions in winter, so that they have damped off. Hydrangeas during winter must be kept tolerably dry at the root and just clear of freezing. The French varieties are somewhat more tender than Otaksa, but both are of such easy culture that it is difficult to see how you could have failed to flower them at all. Cut back well, plant outdoors in good soil, pot up in October, keep outside so long as frost keeps off them, place in a frostproof cellar, pit or frame and air on all favorable occasions through the winter. C. W.

SOUTHERNERS GET IN THE GAME.

The Southern Floral Co., of Houston, Tex., is making arrangements with northern wholesale houses for the distribution of its large crop of cut gladioli, the stock to be handled by only one house in each of several of the larger flower centers of the north. The company, aside from its range of greenhouses, has farms in several localities in keeping with the various crops it wishes to produce. The gladiolus crop this year will consist of about 750,000 spikes.

A. E. Kutschbach, who stands at the left in the accompanying illustration, is president of the Southern Floral Co., and J. B. Flynn, who is at the right, is secretary.

A SHORTAGE OF PARIS GREEN.

A probable shortage of Paris green this year, depending largely upon the extent of the ravages of potato bugs, is forecast by manufacturers and dealers. The price of Paris green advanced sharply recently to from 40 cents to 45 cents a pound in kegs, standing at from 3 cents to 5 cents a pound above the quotation at the beginning of the month, and representing an advance of about 10 cents a pound over the price a year ago. This condition is ascribed to the difficulties in obtaining white arsenic, the principal material used in making Paris green, which is scarce and high at present.

The opinion is generally expressed in the trade that there would be about enough Paris green to accommodate the normal requirements, but in view of the plans for extensively increasing the cultivation of the potato to prevent a food shortage it is feared that the supply will not be ample to fill the demand. The representative of one of the largest houses manufacturing the poison said that its entire supply had been sold out some time ago and that all inquiries were being turned away.

The bulk of Paris green is manufactured during the winter months, as its production is highly dangerous, requiring that the workers be closely confined, and warm weather would make the risk to workers too high. Moreover, the lack of white arsenic will prevent any large increase in the output. If there is a scourge of potato bugs, such as comes in some seasons, the plants will probably suffer, particularly if the cotton crop demands a large part of the supply for the extinction of cotton pests.

Independence, Kan. — After a two weeks' honeymoon, P. A. Bunyar is back on the job with greater ambitions. The lady in the case was Miss Esther Knight. P. A. is son of Robert Bunyar, proprietor of the Independence Greenhouses & Gardens.

SUCCESS.

MILDEW ON RAMBLER ROSES.

We are daily receiving calls from customers asking our advice about mildew on roses. Dorothy Perkins and Crimson Rambler especially have been hard hit by this fungus, which each year greatly damages the crop of flowers. Will you please tell us of a remedy that has proved successful?

H. W. S.—Tex.

There are several probable causes for mildew. Two or three hot, forcing days followed by a raw, damp spell will assuredly start it. Cold drafts are largely responsible for it. Watering overhead too late in the day and insufficient moisture at the roots or poor drainage are other causes. Sulphur blown from a powder bellows is one of the best remedies. Bordeaux mixture is also a good fungicide. There are also a number of other proprietary remedies said to be effective in combating this disease.

C. W.

ROSES FOR EASTER.

I want to force some rambler roses for Easter and would like to know what kinds to buy. Shall I buy them now and set them out, or carry them over in pots?

J. G. C.—Mo.

For early forcing it pays to grow some ramblers or baby ramblers over summer in pots. These should be cut back well after potting and kept under glass until early July, then plunged outdoors and kept well watered. The usual plan is to plant stock outdoors, cut back quite hard. Reduce the number of shoots which come up, retaining four or five of the best. Tie these up to stakes to insure better ripening, dig up and pot about the end of October. Such true ramblers as Tausendsehn, Dorothy Perkins, exelsa, Hiawatha and American Pillar force well; so do all the so-called baby ramblers or polyantha type. The latter force more easily than the true ramblers.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Robert Pyle, chairman of the Washington Rose Test Garden committee, has issued the following notice regarding the annual outdoor meeting of the American Rose Society, which will be held June 4 at the National Rose Test Garden, Arlington, Washington, D. C.:

The good florists of Washington as well as the amateur rose growers of the locality look forward to a larger crowd than ever to attend the third annual outdoor meeting of the American Rose Society in the National Rose Test Garden, June 4.

Visitors are reminded to meet at Gude Bros., 1214 F street, N. W., at 9 a. m. Automobiles to the garden will be provided. Those coming kindly notify W. F. Gude, 1214 F street, N. W., Washington, D. C., or Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa., chairman of the National Rose Test Garden committee.

Mr. Pyle also announces that invitations to speak have been accepted by Carl Vrooman, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, and J. Horace McFarland, president of the American Civic Association. Distinguished visitors from New York, New England and other distant points also are expected.

WINNING THE TRADE.

[A paper read before the Fort Wayne Florists' Club, at its meeting May 9, by Edgar Wenninghoff.]

We florists are all striving for more business and certainly there is no better way to secure it than to attract and interest the public by displaying the highest quality of flowers.

A clean and well arranged window, with fresh flowers well displayed and the arrangement frequently changed, is the best bid for trade the florist can make. In fact, an attractive window is the florists' best advertisement. A fine display in the window is an active medium in winning new customers. We want the non-flower-buying public to realize more and more that flowers are always an appropriate gift, whether it be for an occasion of rejoicing or in a time of sorrow.

Novelty Excites Comment.

Plants which attract unusual attention, such as the calceolaria, blue hydrangea, yellow calla, and fancy-leaved caladiums, displayed in the window, arouse interest and stimulate trade. I notice that these oddities are particularly interesting to the men. If we arouse and hold their interest we have gained a good class of trade.

Invariably a great many buyers become discouraged at holiday time, on account of the necessary advance in prices on cut flowers and the volume of business, which makes it difficult to give the service desired to new customers.

After the window display has attracted our first-time customer into the store, we must hold up our reputation by supplying only the best quality of flowers and giving good service, so that the new customer will become a regular patron.

Another fact that discourages a great many purchasers of cut flowers and plants is the perishability of the stock. For this reason it is always an advantage to both the wholesaler and retailer to sell only fresh flowers.

The newer varieties of roses have helped wonderfully in promoting the sale of cut flowers. Induce your customers to buy the better roses, consid-

The opinion is generally expressed in the trade that there would be about enough Paris green to accommodate the normal requirements, but in view of the plans for extensively increasing the cultivation of the potato to prevent a food shortage it is feared that the supply will not be ample to fill the demand. The representative of one of the largest houses manufacturing the poison said that its entire supply had been sold out some time ago and that all inquiries were being turned away.

The bulk of Paris green is manufactured during the winter months, as its production is highly dangerous, requiring that the workers be closely confined and warm weather would make the risk to workers too high. Moreover, the lack of white arsenic will prevent any large increase in the output. If there is a scourge of potato bugs, such as comes in some seasons, the plants will probably suffer, particularly if the cotton crop demands a large part of the supply for the extinction of cotton pests.

Independence, Kan. — After a two weeks' honeymoon, P. A. Bunyar is back on the job with greater ambitions. The lady in the case was Miss Esther Knight. P. A. is son of Robert Bunyar proprietor of the Independence Greenhouses & Gardens.

SUCCESS.

MILDEW ON RAMBLER ROSES.

We are daily receiving calls from customers asking our advice about mildew on roses. Dorothy Perkins and Crimson Rambler especially have been hard hit by this fungus, which each year greatly damages the crop of flowers. Will you please tell us of a remedy that has proved successful?

H. W. S.—Tex.

There are several probable causes for mildew. Two or three hot, forcing days followed by a raw, damp spell will assuredly start it. Cold drafts are largely responsible for it. Watering overhead too late in the day and insufficient moisture at the roots or poor drainage are other causes. Sulphur blown from a powder bellows is one of the best remedies. Bordeaux mixture is also a good fungicide. There are also a number of other proprietary remedies said to be effective in combating this disease.

ROSES FOR EASTER.

I want to force some rambler roses for Easter and would like to know what kinds to buy. Shall I buy them now and set them out, or carry them over in pots?

J. G. C.—Mo.

For early forcing it pays to grow some ramblers or baby ramblers over summer in pots. These should be cut back well after potting and kept under glass until early July, then plunged outdoors and kept well watered. The usual plan is to plant stock outdoors, cut back quite hard. Reduce the number of shoots which come up, retaining four or five of the best. Tie these up to stakes to insure better ripening, dig up and pot about the end of October. Such true ramblers as Tausend schon, Dorothy Perkins, excelsa, Hia-watha and American Pillar force well; so do all the so-called baby ramblers or polyantha type. The latter force more easily than the true ramblers.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

Robert Pyle, chairman of the Washington Rose Test Garden committee, has issued the following notice regarding the annual outdoor meeting of the American Rose Society, which will be held June 1 at the National Rose Test Garden, Arlington, Washington, D. C.:

The good florists of Washington as well as the amateur rose growers of the locality look forward to a larger crowd than ever to attend the third annual outdoor meeting of the American Rose Society in the National Rose Test Garden, June 1.

Visitors are reminded to meet at Gude Bros., 1214 F Street, N. W., at 9 a. m. Automobiles to the garden will be provided. Those coming kindly notify W. F. Gude, 1214 F Street, N. W., Washington, D. C., or Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa., chairman of the National Rose Test Garden committee.

Mr. Pyle also announces that invitations to speak have been accepted by Carl Vrooman, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, and J. Horace McFarland, president of the American Civic Association. Distinguished visitors from New York, New England and other distant points also are expected.

WINNING THE TRADE.

[A paper read before the Fort Wayne Florists' Club at its meeting May 30, by Edgar Werninghoff.]

We florists are all striving for more business and certainly there is no better way to secure it than to attract and interest the public by displaying the highest quality of flowers.

A clean and well arranged window, with fresh flowers well displayed and the arrangement frequently changed, is the best bid for trade the florist can make. In fact, an attractive window is the florists' best advertisement. A fine display in the window is an active medium in winning new customers. We want the non flower buying public to realize more and more that flowers are always an appropriate gift, whether it be for an occasion of rejoicing or in a time of sorrow.

Novelty Excites Comment.

Plants which attract unusual attention, such as the calceolarias, blue hydrangea, yellow calla, and fancy leaved caladiums, displayed in the window, arouse interest and stimulate trade. I notice that these oddities are particularly interesting to the men. If we arouse and hold their interest we have gained a good class of trade.

Invariably a great many buyers become discouraged at holiday time, on account of the necessary advance in prices on cut flowers and the volume of business, which makes it difficult to give the service desired to new customers.

After the window display has attracted our first time customer into the store, we must hold up our reputation by supplying only the best quality of flowers and giving good service, so that the new customer will become a regular patron.

Another fact that discourages a great many purchasers of cut flowers and plants is the perishability of the stock. For this reason it is always an advantage to both the wholesaler and retailer to sell only fresh flowers.

The newer varieties of roses have helped wonderfully in promoting the sale of cut flowers. Induce your customers to buy the better roses, considering both the keeping qualities and their surpassing beauty. Convince them that the same amount of money expended for the higher quality of roses gives them better value and more satisfaction.

Charge for Time Also.

I cannot recall any other business in which it is so often expected that work shall be done without pay, as in the various lines of the florists' business. A great many florists are donating their time. A wreath or spray is arranged, never considering the actual time it takes to execute the work. It would be a good plan to charge for our time and this policy would add a great deal of dignity to the florists' business. We are engaged in a business dealing with perishable goods; we must give service and time, so we ought to be paid accordingly.

There has been no advance in the selling price of cut flowers, considering the improvement in the quality and variety of our flowers today.

THE PLANTS IN THE FIELD.

Giving Them a Good Start.

By this time you probably have your young carnation plants all in the field. If you have not, lose no time in getting them out. The month of May and early June are usually ideal for making growth and the young plants should be given every opportunity to get an early start, especially where early housing is practiced. This spring has been unusually backward. But, while the young plants have not made much top growth to date, yet the roots are getting a good start, thanks to the frequent rains, and when warm weather does set in you will almost see them grow. Unless it becomes unusually hot and dry in the next few weeks, we expect to see the finest carnation plants in years.

Getting the young plants into the field is a big job and we invariably breathe a sigh of relief when it is finished, but we must never get the idea that once the plants are out they can shift for themselves even for a short time. That is a mistake which is made too often by those who do a general retail plant business. During the bedding season, which follows closely upon the carnation planting season, the carnation field is neglected and the young plants do not get started off as they should.

Between Rains.

At this season rains usually are frequent, and unless the soil is worked between rains, it will pack down and form a hard crust that cannot be broken up properly until the next season's plowing. We make a practice of going over the field with the cultivator as soon after each rain as the soil is dry enough to work properly. This keeps the soil pulverized and helps to hold the moisture, which is of great benefit to the plants during any dry spell. With good plants to start with and a few good rains after they are set in the field, you can get along with little rain if you will keep your cultivator going. It will give far better results than most of the artificial watering that is done. There are methods of artificial watering which are really a success and I may have something to say about them in the near future. Many growers have been driven by sheer desperation to install them and in most cases are getting good results.

Early Benching from Pots.

If you are planning to plant some of your beds from pots, make every possible effort to get the plants established before hot weather sets in. We had a good illustration two years ago of the advantage of early benching from pots. We planted one bench about the middle of May and the other about the middle of June, using Enchantress Supreme for the early bench and Rose-pink Enchantress for the other. Both were from 4-inch pots and all the plants had been shifted into the 4-inch size at the same time. Although the later benched plants were not unduly potbound, the earlier planted bed gave better returns through the whole season than the other. We attributed it entirely to the early planting, as we could discover no other reason for it. Use the same soil as you would use for the field-grown plants and prepare the bed in the same manner as regards the manure in the bottom, etc. Select for this purpose the beds that will get the best ventilation during the summer, as it gets hot enough for them at best.

A Conference of Growers.

During the last season, or I might say for several seasons, many carnation specialists have found it rather difficult to make both ends meet. Unsatisfactory market conditions, coupled with poor growing weather during the summers, have made it impossible for them to produce a revenue commensurate with the effort put forth. This is not as it should be, as a flower which is as indispensable as the carnation should afford the grower at least a fair livelihood. There may be a number of contributing causes, which could be remedied through a better understanding between the several parties interested in the crop from the time the blooms are cut until they reach the ultimate consumer. President Vesey is calling a meeting for the purpose of getting these various interests together for a general discussion of the subject of better revenues for the grower. Not only are the carnation men invited, but growers of all other crops are interested and his plan is to get a large gathering of all branches of the trade in the middle west. Everyone should be interested, from either a selling or a buying standpoint, and a representative meeting should result. The meeting is called for June 19 and 20, at Chicago. Lay your plans to be there.

CUT OUT THE FROLIC?

Make It a Business Convention.

Comment has been created by the publication of the statement that the florists and allied interests in New York and vicinity are at work raising a fund of possibly as much as $10,000 to be expended on the social and amusement features of the August convention of the Society of American Florists. To a number of members of the society it appears that this is not the time for a convention of the character these preparations would seem to indicate. With the country just entering what threatens to be the time of greatest stress in its whole history, with pleas to patriotism on every hand for men and money, it seems to many that the trade will do itself no credit in the eyes of the public by expending a large sum for a purpose that might be perfectly justifiable when the country was not at war.

There are many members of the S. A. F. who believe the picnic feature of the annual convention has outlived its usefulness and that the outing would better be omitted from all conventions. To these members it seems that this year affords a splendid opportunity to break away from custom. In the first place, the proprieties justify a strictly business convention. In the second place, New York city itself affords sufficient attraction and distraction so that the attendance at the convention should not suffer by the elimination of entertainment for the convention as a body.

On to New York.

In this connection, President Kerr has addressed the following letter to each of the state vice-presidents of the S. A. F., under date of May 25:

I am this day appointing you chairman of the "On to New York" convention committee. Your duty will be to stimulate a large attendance at the convention in New York this August.

You possibly realize that this is the most important convention we have had in years. Due to the fact that serious conditions confront our country at this time, the florists of the country should get together and must show our coöperation with the government in the present crisis. The florists' business is looked upon by the warring nations as an unnecessary business during the time of war. It is up to us to convince the people that our business is very necessary and absolutely essential in this crisis. We should go further and devise ways and means of growing such stock as will assist the government in food conservation. Therefore, at this convention, these various matters can be taken up and discussed.

Impress upon the members in your state the vast importance of the coming convention and I trust that you will take unusual interest in circulating the members of your state. Just a suggestion: Get up a state delegation, concentrating at some central location in your state, and proceed to the convention in a body.

Please advise me by return mail what I may expect from you in this work.

The sale of space in the trade's display for the New York convention is said already to be about $4,000, indicating confidence that it will be an excellent business meeting.

Users of the booklet will be inclined to think that the secretary's statement partakes too much of the nature of an apology. Most

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

GEORGE W. KERR.

WHEN the sweet pea enthusiasts gather at the annual convention and exhibition of the American Sweet Pea Society at Boston, July 7, they may expect to see some new specialties in Spencers. If they do not, George W. Kerr, president of the society, will have to do some tall explaining. For Mr. Kerr, superintendent of the Fordhook Farm trial grounds of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., at Doylestown, Pa., has produced many specialties in early-flowering varieties and a few more would cause no surprise. Mr. Kerr has been at Fordhook the last nine years, coming there from Scotland, where he was born. His father, the late William Kerr, was a seedsman at Dumfries, Scotland. When a young man, Mr. Kerr left Dumfries and went with Dobbie & Co., now of Edinburgh, and later was with Messrs. Baker, of Codsall, Wolverhampton. He has many gold medals and silver cups for sweet peas, dahlias, roses and herbaceous plants.

readers will find something interesting in every one of the thirty-six pages and will probably be conscious of no sameness in the contents, except in the sense that the same high quality is maintained throughout.

First in the bulletin is a report of the April meeting of the American Peony Society's directors, with a copy of the premium list for the coming show in Philadelphia. The pronouncing list of peony names, "mostly French," will be a boon to many who, though not good French scholars, would like at least to "make a stagger at" the right pronunciation, without having their efforts bear too close a resemblance to what veterinarians call "blind staggers." The article entitled "How to Exhibit Peonies" seems to be practical as well as timely. C. S. Harrison's contribution, already referred to, has reference to the history of the peony. About half a dozen pages of the bulletin are devoted to a review of Mrs. Edward Harding's "The Book of the Peony."

Secretary Saunders invites suggestions "as to what should be done to improve the bulletin." His address is Clinton, N. Y.

BALTIMORE.

Robert Graham's Career.

This week I am going to write about a visit made to see our friend Robert L. Graham at Waverly. If I keep on people will begin to think that Tate is some old man, but I was 7 years old when I first met Bob, and that was forty-one years ago. At that time he was 18, having served an apprenticeship of four years with Bolgiano in the seed business, and was then starting to serve an apprenticeship as a florist with Robert Paterson. After serving four years here, he took a position on a private place near Hagerstown and stayed there two years.

But Bob had a vision of an establishment of his own, and, with the little he had saved, he started in 1880 for himself with a lean-to house 15x60 and a small packing shed at one end on part of the site of his present range. I shall never forget that shed, for the first money I ever earned was for white-washing it. Thus was the business of Robert L. Graham launched, with a young man ambitious to succeed at the helm. We sat and talked it over after all of these years and he looked back over the road he had traveled, at the fair weather and the storms.

"With all," he said, "the fair weather has predominated and, while the fight has been strenuous at times, I never doubted that I would succeed. Tonight I feel that the feature most responsible for any success that I may have attained is the fact that one year after I started in business I married the daughter of the man with whom I served my time.

How Stock Was Marketed.

"In those days the only way we had to dispose of the stock we grew was in the markets. Many a time in the spring of the year I would be in the old Marsh market and have a load of stuff sold to the hucksters (they were dealers who bought in the market and sold from house to house) by half past 5 in the morning; then home and back by 7 with a load for my regular patrons. The better part of the afternoon would be spent in fixing customers' yards, then to work on my own place until it was time to go to bed."

I asked if such things were done now, to which he replied that he did not think the young man of today was willing to pay the price.

"Well, about this time," he continued, "I had an opportunity to buy an old house from a man who had given up the fight, and with this material I erected another house 18x60. When I took stock of my resources, I also took heart, for was I not progressing? I had a wife, two fairly good houses and a horse and wagon.

"We went along this way, adding a house from time to time. Then the children began to come. September 19, 1892, we opened what proved to be our best venture up to this time. That was the store at 622 Aisquith street. This was where Mrs. Graham had an opportunity to impress her personality on the business, for, like her sister, Mrs. Johnston, she is a born saleswoman. With the store, we had another outlet for our stock. Gradually I gave up the markets and devoted my entire time to the greenhouses. While our store venture was humble at the start, it was a success. It was here that the children were trained. In 1908, when this section of the city had become changed, the old residents having moved and foreigners taken their places, we opened our North avenue store and put Robert, Jr., and Margaret in charge. Mrs. Graham, however, would not leave the place where she had built a successful florists' business from a small beginning.

New Store a Success.

"Time has demonstrated the wisdom of this location on North avenue. While the trade is different from that in the Aisquith street store, the children were young and soon adapted themselves to the change. The new store also required a change in the growing end. The demand in our downtown store was for cut flowers for funeral work and the like, but we found that for North avenue we were obliged to have blooming plants of the better kind and nothing but the best quality in cut stock."

It has been the writer's pleasure to see, on several occasions of late samples of Miss Margaret's work. She also has the qualifications of a saleswoman, patient, accommodating and anxious to please. Robert, Jr., is a husky young fellow. He keeps the window an example of the decorator's art, has a head just teeming with new and original ideas and has the nerve to try them out. Together they are making a success with the store. Mrs. Graham practically has retired, going down only on fine days. That is the history of what is today one of the successful florists' businesses in the city.

As I sat in his happy and comfortable home, I said: "Bob, was it worth the early struggle?"

His reply was: "Everything is worth just what it costs; it was the struggle and work that makes it all so dear to me today."

In his busy life he has had time to help his fellow man, as he is the type to whom people go for advice. While maintaining his personal opinion, he respects the fact that individuals have a right to their own. He has a broad vision, but is exceedingly practical in everything he does. Mr. Graham has been twice president of the Florists' Club, one of the organizers of the Florists' Exchange and one of its directors for many years. He has, on several occasions, refused to be a candidate for political office. Mr. Graham is an ardent Mason, having attained the Scottish Rite degree. He was one of the judges at the International Flower Show in New York this spring, and last, but not least in his estimation, is an elder in the Presbyterian church. One of the first rules he made in business and has lived up to was that he would sell no flowers on Sunday. If late Saturday night or early Monday would not do, he could not fill the order. Tate.

Allentown, Pa.—John H. Sykes is one of the conservatives who, when he cannot foresee the distant view, believes in going steadily. He has proved the wisdom of such action.

Hamtramck, Mich. — Detroit is the country's automobile metropolis, and Hamtramck is not so far from Detroit, so P. G. Sulewski calculates that his new store ought to attract some transient business, in addition to a good local patronage.

OBITUARY

Fred P. Collyer.

Fred P. Collyer, who operated the only greenhouses at Falmouth, Ind., is dead, of goiter. He was 36 years of age and had never married.

Hilan Harrington.

Hilan Harrington, a pioneer Pacific coast florist, died at his home, Vashon Island, Wash., Monday, May 21. For fifteen years Mr. Harrington conducted the greenhouses on Vashon Island, which until he retired in 1914 were known as the H. Harrington Co. range. The same company owned a retail store at Seattle.

Mr. Harrington was born in Steuben county, New York, sixty-six years ago and removed from Norwich, N. Y., where he was in the florists' business, to Vashon in 1899. He built the Vashon range of greenhouses, which are known throughout the northwest. He left a widow, one daughter, Mrs. L. C. Beall, Jr., and two brothers. B. G.

Alexander Siegel.

Alexander Siegel, a retired retail florist, died at his home, 4272 Moffatt avenue, Friday, May 25, after an illness of a year. Mr. Siegel conducted a store at Sixth and Washington avenues until a year ago, when sickness forced him to retire. He was well known among the trade, both in St. Louis and Chicago. Mr. Siegel was a member of the St. Louis Florists' Club and was prominent in the Masonic lodge. He is survived by his widow, a sister and two brothers.

The funeral was held May 28 from the home and was attended by members of the St. Louis Florists' Club in a body. Many beautiful floral designs were sent by friends in the trade. The burial was in Bellefontaine cemetery. J. J. B.

BORDER FOR CANNA BED.

Can you give me an idea for a flower bed twelve feet square in which cannas will occupy the center? H. W.—N. J.

If scarlet cannas are used and you want a bed of one color, use Salvia Bonfire, but if yellow cannas are planted the red salvias would make a good contrast. Either Pennisetum longistylum or P. Ruppelii makes a nice border for a canna bed. It would be best to use cannas for the whole bed, with the exception of the border. C. W.

XANTHOSOMA BATAVIENSIS.

Among ornamental plants which have large leaves, the aroides, or arum family, have long been favorites. Caladium esculentum is the best known of this class. Others not as well known, but which are even more attractive, are the aloecias or xanthosomas, and X. Bataviensis is the handsomest of them all.

This beautiful plant has a broad, arrow-shaped leaf of a distinctive bluish green shade, much more handsome than caladium, and has large dark purple stems which add much to its attractiveness. They do not make so large bulbs as do the caladiums, but even with a small bulb or plant, if given plenty of moisture and rich soil, they soon reach a large size. We had a bed of them planted in the convention gardens at Houston, Tex., last year and they were awarded a certificate of merit. Every florist should give them a trial and in planting them should remember that all of this family of plants are voracious feeders, requiring not only rich soil, but a plentiful supply of moisture, and I feel sure they will be pleased with the results. L. H. Read.

WESTERLY, R. I.

S. J. Reuter & Son, Inc., is among the unsecured creditors of John Moore, of Norwich, Conn., who last week filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy.

Conrad Schulz was a business visitor in Providence and Boston last week. He was accompanied by Mrs. Schulz.

Louis J. Reuter spent several days of last week in New York and Philadelphia on business.

James Bliven has severed his connection with Conrad Schulz. W. H. M.

WOONSOCKET, R. I.

Washington Street Greenhouses, at Franklin, have a good trade in bedding and potted plants, of which there is an unusually large supply.

Boucher Bros., landscape gardeners and foresters, 81 Union street, have been engaged by Tree Warden Michael Crane to spray and prune the trees of the city, which will take about two months.

E. A. Chipman, who has been in business since 1875, announces Chipman's Greenhouses as "The same old man; the same old corner; the same old style of treatment." W. H. M.

VEGETABLES AND FRUITS DEPARTMENT

CLUB ROOT ON TOMATOES.

Under separate cover I am sending you a dozen tomato plants that are suffering from some kind of root disease. I grow several thousand plants, but this variety, Magnus, and a few of the variety Stone, are the only ones affected. The plants were grown in hotbeds in which wood soil was used. Other varieties, grown in the same beds, within six inches of the plants sent, were not affected. Can you tell me the cause of this disease and how I can overcome it? C. E. M.—O.

The tomato plants show unmistakable signs of club root, also called club foot, or Plasmodiophora brassicae. This disease attacks the cabbage, cauliflower, turnip, radish and other vegetables, in addition to some of our common weeds, like hedge mustard and shepherd's purse. Your tomatoes have probably taken the disease from infected soil, the spores of the disease persisting in living over winter in the soil. There is no known cure for this disease, but all affected plants should be destroyed. Soil that breeds club root should not be planted to crops likely to take the disease, at least not for a couple of years, and it will help in some measure to plow the land and leave it rough over winter, at the same time giving it a good application of lime, at the rate of 2,000 to 3,000 pounds per acre. C. W.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

"By their fruits ye shall know them," observed H. N. Hoffman, of Elmira, N. Y., while engaged in labeling a stocky batch of fruit trees. "This certainly has been a great season for planting, and we were never so busy in the nursery," reported Mr. Hoffman. His honor still fills the mayoralty chair, and says that between business and the pleasure of making garden allotments, there is no rest; but he enjoys it. Two husky sons are home from Cornell, and are a big help. One, Allyn P., is a landscape engineer and strong in perspective. The other, Arthur, bids fair to follow in the mayor's footsteps.

A. H. Bool, of Ithaca, is reported as having additional greenhouses on the tapis, finding the demand beyond the supply. There has been quite an increase since he returned to the fold.

Robert Craig makes daily trips between Philadelphia and the Norwood establishment by automobile. I met our veteran friend passing through Darby. He observed that "keen though one's vision may be, to attempt to predict the future is folly. The most sensible view is to keep steadily at it and hope for a speedy end." Robert Craig, Jr., notes excellent plant sales.

G. A. Strohlein, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Riverton, N. J., mentioned that "history is repeating itself in the palm line, as it were. Some years back it was customary to import arecas from the tropics. Now they are being shipped. By the way, Adiantum gloriosum is reproducing finely from seed."

William Wunder, of Pittsville, Pa., hung up the receiver with the remark that "it is the small things that annoy. We recently received an offer of $6,000 per acre for our place of seventeen acres and feel strongly tempted to accept it."

John Welsh Young, of Philadelphia, observed that the war apparently had frightened the many applicants for the greenhouses at Upsal. The question of taking the glass and piping for use at the Enfield plant is under consideration. There is ample room there and stock does splendidly.

Louis Dupuy, of Whitestone, L. I., has presented each member of his family with a Liberty bond of comfortable denomination. Should business continue as satisfactory as in the past, the distribution will be extended to every member of the establishment.

Satow & Suzuki, of Whitestone, L. I., are working up a big line of Japanese specialties, on the theory that it will be difficult to import such stock direct from Japan later on. W. M.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Officers for 1917: President, Robert C. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; vice-president, A. L. Miller, Jamalca, N. Y.; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.
Thirty-third annual convention, New York, N. Y., August 21 to 24, 1917.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

THERE remains more bedding out to be done in June than in any previous season.

ANOTHER of the scarce items is insecticides, and with these may be included the chemicals of which weed killers are made.

It can no longer be said that there is a standard price for 4-inch geraniums, but by next season it is to be hoped 10 cents will be recognized as the standard price, just as 8 cents was for years.

EASTERN growers, who are known to be less quick to change than those of the middle west, this season are following the lead of the westerners, cutting down on American Beauty and planting more of Mrs. Russell.

THE outdoor tulips never gave more show for the money. The cool season has kept them in bloom weeks past the usual time, and the general satisfaction resulting should make for easy selling in the bulb season next fall.

THERE are indications that canna roots will be excellent property next winter. The canna has been gaining in popularity, but the excellent demand this season does not appear to have encouraged the Carolina growers, who produce the greater part of the trade's supply, to increase their acreage.

THE country is being warned that preparation must be made for years, not months, of war, and as time passes and military needs increase it no doubt will be the policy of the government to squeeze so-called non-essential industries for the men and materials necessary for carrying on the great conflict.

THE dove, emblem of peace, is out of favor just now, even on funeral flowers.

THE open season for the bombardment of greenhouses with pellets of ice is drawing near. How about that membership in the Florists' Hail Association?

THE indications are that the summer supply of cut flowers will be smaller than in recent years. In the first place, millions of gladiolus bulbs failed to get by the U-boat blockade. In the second place, asters have discouraged growers and the supply of seed practically was limited to home production. In the third place, a good crop of potatoes on the place will at least feed the family.

THE other man's ideas always are worth consideration; frequently they show the way to better prices. For instance, there are a number of retailers who are ready to pay a little extra money for roses that got their long stems without being pinched. The idea is that the water does not flow freely through the hard joint at the pinch, as it does through a good, long, straight stem that has not been stopped. It is worth while separating the single growths from the stock with the knots.

LOGIC IN ADVERTISING.

One of the things in England that most surprises the American visitor is the way Englishmen attempt to heat their buildings.

With few exceptions the English office buildings and hotels, and with nearly no exceptions English homes, are still heated by open fires. This means that a good deal of the heat goes up the chimney, and what remains does not get far away from the fireplace.

Now, some advertisers waste their advertising money in the way the Englishman wastes his heat. They scatter it in several open fireplaces where it does little good, instead of concentrating it in a central heater that would distribute it evenly and thoroughly throughout the trade.

Of The Review, 12,500 copies are printed each week. How many florists do you think there are who do not read The Review? The results are big, at small cost, like this:

Please discontinue our salvia ad. We are getting more orders than we can handle.—Simanton & Pence, Falls City, Neb., May 22, 1917.

Stop our sweet potato plant ad. We are swamped with orders!—Kring Bros., Fairbury, Ill., May 22, 1917.

ADMINISTERING BROMIDES.

A Boston man advised the audience at a mass meeting held recently at Hingham, Mass., to "tear out the flower beds and plant vegetables," and expressed the hope that "every florist would be put out of business." Needless to say, the remarks struck no responsive chord among his hearers and later William N. Craig, who was in the audience, "took pleasure," to use Mr. Craig's own expression, "in helping to spike the guns of the anti-florist orator."

This is the type of hysteria that the best minds in the country are trying to provide a sedative for. The doses of bromides they are administering come in the form of advising the people to continue their daily activities as in normal times. "Don't waste," is good advice in times of peace as well as war, but much of the so-called economy advocated by well-meaning, but misguided orators, would bring about the condition we are trying to avoid.

Putty-colored buckskin or kid pumps are not necessary to the welfare of the women of the United States; flat-heeled, broad-toed footwear would keep the feet off the ground more effectively and would cost some $7 or $11 less per pair. Much of the prosperity of New England, of which Boston is "the hub," is due to the love of the feminine member of the family for pretty shoes.

Why not tear out the machines for making these shoes? Why not hope that every maker of fancy shoes gets "put out of business"? Because, if this condition should come about, there would be few now employed in the shoe manufacturing trade with money enough to buy flowers. Put the florists out of business and some thousands of them would be unable to buy shoes.

Every business is a cog in the country's great economic machine. Break one of these cogs and the machine will be out of kilter.

LABOR, NOW AND A YEAR AGO.

Labor conditions in the trade, as reflected by the want ads printed in the last issue of The Review, are practically the same as they were a year ago. That is, the calls for help are more than double the calls for employment, which was the situation in May, 1916. Last week The Review contained thirty-three help wanted and fourteen situation wanted ads. In the corresponding issue a year ago, there were thirty-two help wanted and thirteen situation wanted ads.

From these figures it may be concluded either that the war has had no effect upon the labor market as it affects florists, or that it is too soon since the declaration for the war to have an effect. Because of the experience and knowledge required, it may be assumed that a majority of the expert growers are men past the conscription age of thirty; consequently not many of this class of workers will be called. A large per cent of the advertisements appearing in The Review are for growers; thus there seems to be little cause for the range owner to worry over the situation as regards skilled labor.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

As sudden as was the fall in the condition of the market after Mothers' day, from a pinnacle of strength to the depth of debility, so sudden also was the change again to the former firmness. The middle of last week found the market in a weak condition, but May 26, as the orders for Memorial day commenced to pour in, prices stiffened all along the line, stock became somewhat shorter and the market became possessed of snap and vigor.

From all quarters come the reports of heavy business for the holiday, shipping and city trade alike being heavy. The demand from out-of-town buyers was so heavy that May 28 city buyers found it difficult to buy. Although, of course, nothing can be stated definitely until all the figures are on the books, indications are that the Memorial day business will come up to the splendid record of increase made by Mothers' day.

There is not a superabundance of stock on the market and yet it can not be said that a scarcity exists. There are, of course, exceptions, certain items developing a marked shortage. Taken by and large, it is safe to say that stock generally is of good quality and in supply just about enough to meet the demand.

American Beauties are scarce and clear readily. All other varieties of roses clear easily at good prices. There are many Russells of exceptionally fine quality to be seen, but the demand for them has not been entirely satisfactory. Carnations are in good supply and of fair quality. They are finding a ready sale and prices have held up to an unusually high mark considering last week's poor market.

Sweet peas are in oversupply and are not selling well. Peonies, on the other hand, are a little short, which is an important factor in strengthening all the other lines, as the peony is the big item in this market for Memorial day. They are finding a ready sale at good prices. Gladioli are in good supply, but not in heavy demand. Lilac clears easily. Lilies and callas also sell well. Good snapdragons are in fair demand, but poorer quality stock moves slowly. Good quantities of feverfew reach the market and find a ready sale. Cape jasmines are not a factor this year, the crops in the south having been hit by frost.

Greens remain scarce and hold firmly to quotation prices.

The Business in May.

Except for one or two intervals of light demand and large oversupply, caused principally by one or two unseasonably warm days in the midst of a cool season, May has been an exceptionally good month. The record is somewhat variable, because some houses did not have their usual supplies of stock in May, but on the whole the market did more business, in dollars, than in May of any previous year. Mothers' day was big and Memorial day, in recent years among the best of special flower days, again showed an increase. The times between holidays, while they were both good and bad, were fully up to the best previous May. Consequently, if business will continue as good as it has been in May this market will be cheerful.

But there is a feeling that a slump is imminent. The season has been unusually cool and it has held back all kinds of flowers, but especially peonies. A change to warm, bright weather can not be far away and with it will come a deluge of flowers, peonies in particular, carnations to a scarcely less extent, affecting the salability of roses even if the supply is not so large. The peony season, however, is likely to be short this year except for the stock put in storage.

Various Notes.

Miss Elsie Schnapp, who joined the staff of W. J. Smyth last autumn as saleslady and designer, was his first woman employee, but Mr. Smyth thinks women will occupy a place of steadily increasing importance in the trade. There now are only two or three stores in Chicago where the employees all are men.

It was by a narrow margin that C. J. Michelsen escaped being laid up during the Memorial day rush. He was carrying so large a load of peonies, May 24, that he could not see over them and stumbled over a truck that someone had left in an aisle of the Amling store. The contusions resulting would have put him in bed at any less busy time.

Ophelia is well liked by nearly all growers, but there are few with whom it succeeds as it does with Meyer & Dramm Co., at Elmhurst. Not only does one pinch give long, strong stems, but the flowers have great substance and keeping quality, due to an unusual number of petals.

There is some uncertainty in the market as to how war will affect the trade, but H. B. Kennicott says that if we may judge the future by the past there is no cause for alarm. Mr. Kennicott means by that to emphasize the point that the business of Kennicott Bros. Co., of which he is president, has been larger since war with Germany was declared than it has been at any time previous.

At Park Ridge, Emil Buettner confines his attention to roses, except for a crop of chrysanthemums and another of Easter lilies, which serve to keep the benches busy when not occupied by young rose plants. A few years ago Mr. Buettner tried cold storage lilies as an all-the-year-round crop, but concluded the conditions of the market were not propitious. This year he will try it again, believing the market for lilies has improved.

Although a sprained ankle has caused

Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, much pain, he was nevertheless on the floor helping to get out the exceptionally large number of orders which the firm shipped for Memorial day.

Joseph Ziska & Sons report a large call for wooden easels. This item, John Ziska says, is proving a most profitable one and he wonders at the fact that other firms have dropped or diminished their stock of wooden easels as being unprofitable.

All planting has been finished at the greenhouses of Peter Reinberg. The carnation field has also been planted.

That the trade throughout the country is looking for good business in the next year despite the war is the opinion of Clifford Pruner, of Poehlmann Bros. Co. Of course, he says, there are always the lugubrious blue men who Peter Schousboe, general foreman of Peter Reinberg's greenhouses, has moved his home to 5450 North Robey street, the old Reinberg residence occupied by Emil Reichling while superintendent of the greenhouses.

Making hay while the sun shines, the American Bulb Co. has displayed an assortment of bedding plants at its enlarged store on Wabash avenue. Although geraniums now are selling well, tomato plants are said to be in greatest request. A basket of eight readily retails for 50 cents, where six for 25 cents was the usual price of other seasons.

Kennicott Bros. Co. employed its new store in the Le Moyne building for the handling of its city trade for Memorial day. F. F. Benthey was in charge.

G. M. Reburn thinks that the Bermuda growers, if they can free the bulbs from disease, will find a quick return of popularity for the Harrisii lily. Mr. Reburn is impressed by the number of growers who ask about it.

Frank J. Rioux, of the store fixture division of the A. L. Randall Co., says that business is humming in his department. Refrigerators have been shipped within the last two weeks to the Flower Shop, Rock Island, Ill.; Joy Floral Co., Chattanooga, Tenn., and The Fernery, Omaha, Neb.

Counter trade has been most satisfactory at the new store taken over last week by A. Henderson & Co. The store is located on the same block with the company's old quarters and has a frontage on both Lake and State streets. A large line of bedding plants is moving nicely.

John Kruchten has almost completely recovered from his rheumatism.

"It has been April all through May," is the way John P. Degnan describes conditions at Winterson's Seed Store.

Visitors.

B. C. Blake, of Springfield, O., who specializes on ferns for the wholesale trade, was a visitor May 28.

Marion Uhlsehmidt, of Grimm & Gorly, St. Louis, was a visitor last week, in quest of orchids for a high class funeral job. He found almost everything else plentiful.

W. J. Vesey, Jr., of Fort Wayne, Ind., was in town last week. He expects to consign large quantities of orchids to this-market next season.

INDIANAPOLIS.

The Market.

A retrospect of last week's conditions shows how unstable is the market. The first part of the week stock was overplentiful; carnations, roses and lilies could be had in any quantity at low prices. At the end of the week, stock was in short supply, with the demand heavy. Numerous weddings, funerals and social functions caused an active demand and, owing to the dark, chilly weather, no new stock was brought in.

Memorial day stock is greatly retarded. Peonies, the usual standbys, will come about two weeks after the holiday. The early purple iris is about at the end of its season and the later varieties will not make it. Candytuft, feverfew and stocks will be scarce at this time. There will, however, be a good supply of roses, carnations and snapdragons, but, it is thought, not enough to supply the demand.

Roses range in price from $3 to $15 per hundred; carnations $3 and $4 per hundred, with fancies at $5; callas $1 per dozen and Easter lilies $10 per hundred.

The northern part of Indianapolis was visited May 26 by a terrific storm followed by hail. It was the most severe storm of the year and did considerable damage to the outdoor stock of a number of florists.

The Indianapolis News entertained the retail florists at luncheon, May 24. Plans were made for a full-page advertisement for Memorial day.

John Chisholm, formerly of Cincinnati, now is located at the Circle Flower Store. This store is doing a good business in garden supplies.

PHILADELPHIA.*The Market.

Weakness marked the trading in the cut flower market until May 25. Then came an improvement. Excellent shipping orders took some of the best of the fresh stock, while the quantity buyers carried off all that was salable of four days' accumulation of all kinds of flowers. Between these two classes, the purchasers of the high and the low grade, came an increased demand from the great medium class of buyers, who form the backbone of the market. The result was that by the time business ended May 26 the market was clear of salable flowers. This started matters well May 28, but, owing to the necessity of going to press a day earlier than usual, further report is delayed until next week.

The serious feature of the cut flower business for Memorial day this year is the absence of peonies. Many advance orders already have been declined because the flowers cannot be obtained. Hardly any local peonies will be ready, few from Baltimore and only a part crop from Washington. While this will strengthen the balance of the market, taken all in all it is a detriment. Some orders for peonies will allow of no substitute. Then again, the presence of a heavy crop of peonies after Memorial day is apt to seriously impair values.

The cool weather has kept flowers in good shape. Carnations particularly have been more than usually satisfactory for the season. Spanish iris, so popular earlier, has been in oversupply. Beauties are going off crop. There has been no special call for valley or for sweet peas. Lilac and blossoms have been popular. There are sweet peas from outdoor vines. Cornflowers are becoming more plentiful. Given cool, bright weather, Memorial day will be a busy occasion.

Vegetables Under Glass.

Much has been thought and said lately by some of our florists regarding the wisdom of helping produce food for next winter, by devoting some of the space in their greenhouses and hotbeds to growing vegetables. Will it pay? To answer this question correctly is the problem. To throw some light on the matter, the case was laid before Charles H. McKubbin, of Henry A. Dreer, Inc. He answered emphatically, "No, the florist had better stick to flowers."

When further urged that florists were adept growers, not novices, Mr. McKubbin said that success with vegetables required a life study, just as does success with flowers. Most vegetable growers, he thought, are specialists with one or at most a few crops and they know every detail connected with the culture of these crops. In a general way Mr. McKubbin thought the chances nine to one against the inexperienced person making a commercial success of food products under glass even at this time.

Continuing on this same subject with a grower who has been successful with both flowers and vegetables under glass, it was learned that skill is required in selection of crops and time for growing and marketing them, as well as in their cultivation. For instance, radishes, he said, have been profitably grown after chrysanthemums, when the radishes are not too closely planted. They may be followed by lettuce and these in turn by tomatoes. Only a mere jumping into vegetable growing helter-skelter will not do. Success demands care.

Coal.

A florist who was deeply interested in the burning question called at his bank a few days ago in search of information.

"Do you think," he asked the cashier, "that government control of the coal miner would affect prices?"

"What do you know?" the cashier asked.

Bernard Gloekler Co.
Pittsburgh, Pa.

There is no change in orchid prices and there were too many last week for the demand. The best gardenias held at $2.50 to $3 per dozen. A good deal of outdoor valley is here, poor enough in quality and most perishable, but greenhouse flowers have been pulled down from their high estate to $5 per hundred and under. The market has been carrying a large supply of longiflorum lilies and a big supply was left over May 26. On orders for the present week, nevertheless, prices were hardening and $8 to $10 seems a probable range for Memorial day supplies.

The southern lilac is done, but the local cut is on and great quantities are being disposed of. Shipments from farther north will help to prolong the season. In fact, the temperature is not yet even springlike, so what was good for the lilac was detrimental to the peonies and there were few good ones for Memorial day.

Callas profited by the shortage of peonies and there were plenty of them, the best being worth $8 per hundred. Daffodils seem to have received a new lease of life and are of good quality. There is no end of irises and sweet peas. Baby gladioli are popular. Daisies, calendulas, pansies and stocks are abundant.

Many wholesale cut flower houses are displaying flowering plants, especially geraniums.

Wholesalers Organize.

A meeting of wholesale florists was held May 26, on the second floor of the Coogan building, thirty-four being present. A permanent organization was formed under the name Wholesale Cut Flower and Allied Trades Association. Eugene Dailedouze was elected president; W. G. Badgley, vice-president; Charles Sehenek, treasurer, and P. B. Rigby, secretary. Various committees were appointed and it was decided to commence closing Sundays on the first Sunday in July.

Various Notes.

A. J. Guttman states that Guttman & Raynor, Inc., have leased adequate space in the well equipped and commodious store of the United Cut Flower Co., 111 West Twenty-eighth street, which arrangement takes effect June 1. This move is a clear manifestation of the trend of the times toward practical economy and the attainment of maximum efficiency, while at the same time bringing the overhead expenses down to a minimum.

Walter Mott, of Schenectady, was in New York several days last week, completing a long southern and western trip, which he says was an encouraging success.

Frank McCabe, on his way to Boston after a successful canvass of New York and vicinity, was a recent visitor, representing the Chicago house of A. L. Randall Co.

Patrick Welch, of Boston, was in the city several days last week.

A. J. Guttman has added a new auto to his "staff of assistants," for his runabouts and visits to the firm's Long Island growers.

Sunday closing was up for settlement at a special meeting of wholesalers, largely attended, May 26. The verdict in its behalf was practically unanimous.

The Florists' Club's meeting June 11 will be an important occasion, with its rose exhibits, the announcement of the progress made in behalf of the S. A. F. convention and J. Otto Thilow's illustrated lecture on Hawaii.

R. J. Irwin says all florists should inform themselves as to the war tax planned for foreign merchandise. A. L.

Certified by the Roads of U.S.A. GOODRICH BLACK SAFETY TREAD TIRES

THE Goodrich trade mark on Goodrich Black Safety Tread Tires is CERTIFICATION that they are the best fabric tires made, tested and found the best on the roads of our nation.

It certifies millions of miles of wear and tear tests vouch for those matchless fabric tires—millions of miles of hard roughing it to try the souls of tires.

It certifies that the UNIT MOLD, unbroken cure fabric construction, Goodrich always championed, has vindicated itself in the hardest test put to tires—the Goodrich Test Car Fleet.

Before Goodrich sells a tire to you, tires like them are belabored week after week through the Test Car System.

With heavy car and light car, two sets of drivers batter them sixteen hours a day over sand, rock and gravel.

Amidst the mountains of Yellowstone and Glacier Parks, in Dixieland, on the Pacific Coast, in the lake region of Minnesota, around Kansas City, over New England hills, SIX fleets of Goodrich Test Cars grind out the best and worst in Goodrich Tires.

The BEST, backed up by Goodrich Fair Treatment guarantee you get in Goodrich Black Safety Treads you buy.

the bulk of the demand. This was supplemented by a good call for wedding decorations and bouquets, and flowers for the hospitals. The demand for bedding plants fell off during the cool weather and the advance sale for Memorial day has been small.

The outlook for Memorial day business in cut flowers is good. Outdoor flowers will be scarce; in fact, there will be no home-grown peonies on the market. There seems to be a good supply of indoor flowers for Memorial day, but the advance orders are heavy and some growers predict a shortage. Carnations are not expected to be so plentiful as roses. The supply at present is equal to the demand. Peonies, shipped, are on the local market. Snapdragons are meeting with a splendid call and calendulas and Darwin tulips also are selling well. Mosses, cattleyas are in plentiful supply, and outdoor valley is meeting with a good demand. Other flowers on the market in variety are Peach Blossom gladioli, daisies, forget-me-nots, sweet peas, candytuft, German irises, which are new to the local market, and pansies. Calla and Easter lilies have been meeting with a splendid demand for funeral work. Magnolia wreaths are being made up in large numbers for Memo-

Other flowers on the market in variety are Peach Blossom gladioli, daisies, forget-me-nots, sweet peas, candytuft, German irises, which are new to the local market, and pansies. Calla and Easter lilies have been meeting with a splendid demand for funeral work. Magnolia wreaths are being made up in large numbers for Memo-also are cutting an excellent crop of roses and carnations.

W. J. Vesey, Jr., spent several days in Chicago on a business trip.

A representative of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, called on the florists here last week.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting some fine Cattleya Mossiae. Their rose cut is large, but they predicted a shortage of carnations for Memorial day. There is a fine showing of all kinds of bedding plants at their greenhouses.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

There was a shortage of flowers for Memorial day, although the supply of potted plants was large enough to meet all demands. The lateness of the season has greatly curtailed all outdoor flowers, while the dark, sunless days of last week checked the greenhouse products. Carnations were especially short and commanded as high as $10 per hundred. Roses were plentiful. A few peonies and some lilies are in the market.

In potted plants the greatest demand was for geraniums, but several of the downtown stores made specialties of made-up rustic baskets that brought good prices and found ready sale. Magnolia leaf wreaths with wax flowers were also heavy sellers.

Various Notes.

Walter Lowe has moved into a new store at 2202 Broad street, Pawtucket. He reports an exceptionally busy month in outdoor work.

John Johnston, of Johnston Bros., made a business visit to Boston last week.

More than 100 laborers in the public park department, under Superintendent Fred C. Green, went on strike May 22, demanding an increase of 25 cents per day. A compromise has been effected.

Mr. and Mrs. Timothy L. O'Connor will spend the summer at the Mathewson House, Narragansett Pier.

Domenico D'Acchioli, who was manager of the Seamans Farm, on Atwood avenue, where he grew large quantities of carnations, died suddenly of heart disease May 21. He was 53 years

TO OUR MEMBERS, SPECIAL NOTICE:

The AMERICAN MUTUAL CYCLONE & HAIL INSURANCE COMPANY, of which you are a member, has grown and prospered beyond the greatest expectations of its founders; we now having over $3,500,000.00 of an assessable capital. A sufficient loss fund to take care of ordinary losses, not in debt a single dollar, every loss (in which the proofs have been returned to the office) are paid in full to date. The officers are proud of the condition of this company and are proud of you for helping to make this company the strong institution it now is. Now it is up to us and you to make this company Bigger, Better and Stronger. We propose to do this in the following manner:

1st. To reorganize the company under the Insurance Act of 1915 of the State of Indiana. This will place the company under the direct supervision of the Insurance Departments of each and every State where we have members; thus assuring you of a wider protection, including Fire on your Dwellings and Out Buildings as well as Cyclone and Hail on your entire plant and crops. The demand for Fire Insurance on this Company has been very great, coming from Greenhouse owners, but under the law that we now operate, we can not protect our members against loss by fire.

2nd. This will enable us to divide the surplus profits each year with our members, by way of cash dividends or a reduction in the cost of their insurance.

3rd. The Re-organization will in no way affect your present membership, but will better it, it will not cost you a single dollar more or less to consent to the reorganization, and besides it will give us the right to have our members of each state to elect one of their number to our Board of Directors.

This action is granted by the unanimous consent of the Board of Directors of the American Mutual Cyclone & Hail Insurance Company, of Muncie, Indiana, and is in harmony with the resolutions passed by said Board of Directors at their meeting, held at the Home Office of said Company on the 14th day of May, 1917.

THE AMERICAN MUTUAL CYCLONE & HAIL INSURANCE COMPANY,
Oscar E. Anderson, Secretary.

The Market.

The week before Memorial day was, as usual, a somewhat quiet one. Arrivals were comparatively small. Considerable accumulations of pickled stock will appear, as usual, just before the great holiday and late shippers of such flowers will once again fail to make good. There is no likelihood of any oversupply of flowers. The season is about three weeks late here and no lilies, Spiraea Vanhouttei, deutzias, German iris, Hemerocallis flava and other hardy flowers will this year be available, with only a limited number of Darwin and cottage tulips. But a good many of the early tulips and a fair number of short trumpet narcissi will be available. Many growers of spiraeas, candytuft, stocks and other Memorial day flowers have failed to get crops in on time, which means considerable loss.

Roses are in good supply and they are cleaning up nicely. The quality is splendid, thanks to continued cool weather. Carnations are bracing up, but will not equal Mothers' day prices. Snapdragons, gladioli, irises, sweet peas and yellow marguerites are in good supply and demand. Lilies are good and have made a good advance in price. Candytuft, feverfew, spiraea, stocks and gypsophila are all in active demand, mostly selling at 50 cents per bunch. A good number of early tulips and daffodils are still available, with fewer Darwins than had been expected. Outdoor valley did not come in on time. Cattleyas go rather slowly at $5 to $6 per dozen. Asparagus has sold quite well. The call for forget-me-nots, pansies, daisies and other spring plants is good, with a better call for the more tender bedding plants. The call for artificial wreaths seems to be as heavy as ever; not only are they offered by

Outdoor Flower Show.

The most important horticultural event of the year in Boston is the big open-air flower show which opens June 1 on the grounds of the Wentworth Institute, Huntington avenue. In spite of the cold, inclement season, there is every indication that all available spaces will be occupied. All plants but orchids will be planted out or plunged in the ground in the several roomy marquees, paths of verdant lawn ten feet wide being left for visitors. The arrangement of exhibits and general layout is most attractive and artistic, color harmony being carefully considered.
Farquhar's rock and water garden is a grand feature, while the orchid collections of Roehrs, E. B. Dane, A. N.
Cooley, F. J. Dolansky and others, and wonderful specimen azaleas, rhododendrons, trachelospermums, calceolarias, Canterbury bells, wistarias and other seasonable plants are to be seen. Outdoors the display of conifers is a most valuable and imposing one.

No cut flowers will be staged. No awards will be made, everything being contributed by prominent horticulturists to give horticulture a big fillip.
June 1, Red Cross day, the admission price is $5; on the remaining ten days, well advertised, a large attendance is a

Various Notes.

At the time of writing wholesalers and retailers were never so rushed with Memorial day orders. The economy campaign has certainly not checked business for this great floral occasion.
Flowers are not abundant, few outdoor ones being available owing to the late season. Artificial wreaths alone have been advertised by local retailers and sales of these unsentimental tokens again reach tremendous proportions.
About every kind of store now offers these artificial substitutes, but a few of the high-class flower shops decline to handle them at all.

At Horticultural hall May 26, Victor Heurlin showed a fine collection of narcissi and tulips, which were awarded a gratuity. John L. Smith, gardener to A. W. Preston, had a collection of narcissi and Miss Grace Sturtevant a nice collection of dwarf irises and spring bulbs. It will probably be necessary to postpone the rose, peony and strawberry show, scheduled for June 23 and 24.

The W. W. Edgar Co. had a fine cut of Darwin tulips from outdoors. Frames were placed over them to advance them.
The season caused the spiraea crop to come rather late. Bedding plant trade is now extremely active.

Wax Bros. made a fine casket cover of Hadley roses and valley May 26 for the funeral of D. B. Smith, of Gloucester. They have orders booked for over a dozen June weddings. Memorial day business has come with a rush and is keeping all hands on the jump.

At Welch's wholesale store, 280 Devonshire street, a splendid lot of seasonable flowers were noted this week, the roses, carnations, valley, spiraeas and snapdragons being grand. All hands were busy here with an avalanche of Memorial day orders.

William H. Elliott, from his Brighton establishment, is getting some of the finest roses coming to the Boston market. The varieties are Beauty, Kaiserin, Russell and Miller. From Madbury, N. H., Ophelia, Hadley, Sunburst and Stanley are showing up specially well.

At Penn's, Memorial day advance orders are, as usual, tremendous. Heavy advertising has brought a flood of orders from all parts of New England for artificial wreaths, but the call for natural flowers also is good. June wedding orders booked were well ahead of former years.

Owing to the failure of a shipment of 5,000 roses from England to arrive, Thomas Roland will be unable to fill the entire rose tent at the big flower show in Boston this week. He had planned to occupy an entire tent with a rose garden.

At Patrick Welch's I noted fine shipments of southern peonies, splendid large-flowered gladioli, candidum lilies, American Beauties, orchids and a big assortment of choice Memorial day flowers.

Mr. Welch said business was proving to be the best ever.

John McFarland had a fine lot of longiflorum lilies, valley and spiraeas for Memorial day.

The florists of Greater Boston used an effective half-page ad in the Boston Sunday Herald May 27. Those contributing to this advertisement were Fine, Silverman, Zinn, Wax Bros., Penn, Boston Cut Flower Co., H. R. Comley, Houghton-Gorney Co., J. Newman & Sons, F. E.
Palmer, Harold A. Ryan, Harry Quint,
Thomas J. Clark, Waban Rose Conservatories, W. A. Riggs and W. C. Bowditch.
Fresh cut flowers were emphasized in this ad.

Harry Quint always does heavy Memorial day advertising and this year is no exception to that rule. He has been operating a temporary downtown store at 515 Washington street for the better display of his wreaths, and both there and at his Boylston street store reports heavy orders. His bulb displays on the lawn fronting his Boylston street store have been fine.

The beautiful estate of Gen. S. M.
Weld, Rockview, in Dedham, was opened to the public May 25 to 27, for the benefit of the Red Cross, and a substantial sum netted. The extensive rock garden was found in fine condition.

At Carbone's artificial wreaths are never handled, but large Memorial day orders for fresh flowers are reported.
Garden furniture and other accessories are moving well in spite of all economy talk and general business is good.

Julius Heurlin, of the Blue Hill Nurseries, has a notable contribution of 124 varieties of conifers and other evergreens at the great flower show in the Wentworth Institute grounds.

The Rawson Conservatories had a fine cut of spiræas, carnations, candytuft and bulbous flowers for Memorial day.

Some of the finest Halley gladioli I ever have seen are being handled by W. H. Carr from Mr. Shepardson, of Mansfield.

J. A. Nelson, of Framingham, in addition to his heavy cut of carnations and snapdragons, had 2,000 bunches of double feverfew for Memorial day.

The display of pyrus in the Arnold Arboretum was at its best this year, May 28. The crab apples, or malus, will not be well opened before June 3, while present indications are that it will be June 8 to 10 before lilacs are well opened. These are phenomenally late dates. Two good shrubs now in flower are Fothergilla major and Viburnum Carlesii.

The display of tulips in the Boston public gardens was at its best May 26, which is eighteen days later than in 1916. Pink Beauty is the finest of all the early bedding tulips here, but white Joost van Vondel, Chrysolora, Keizerskroon, Couleur Cardinal, Duchess of Parma and Proserpine are good.

Seed stores continue busy in the vegetable seed department, but flower seed business has been far below normal. There is a great demand for vegetable plants of all kinds, while seed potatoes still are being called for. Bedding plants sell well.

have sold best, as the weather has been too cold and unsettled for bedding out. Memorial day promises to be up to its usual standard, but lack of outdoor stock will make it difficult to supply the demand for cheap bunches.

Daily shipments of roses continue to be good, the quality in all grades being high. The better grades include Francis Scott Key, which is always a good seller; Ophelia, Hoosier Beauty, Russell, Sunburst and Killarney, the latter being long in supply and short in demand. Carnations appear to be not up to the standard. The demand for Easter lilies has not been large and the market is well filled. They are specially fine. Lavender and yellow irises are plentiful and sell well.

Pansies and forget-me-nots are used for individual decorations. A quantity of red, pink, white and lavender German stocks reach the market and are in demand. Sweet peas remain popular. Good stock clears easily. Yellow and white daisies are selling well. Candy-tuft and sweet alyssum are good and are used in funeral work. Darwin tulips still are plentiful. Greens are in good supply.

tail branch of the trade for nearly thirty years, is opening a wholesale cut flower and supply house at 43 Stone street, under the name of the Wilson Floral Co. The store has been redecorated and a large icebox installed.

The J. B. Keller Sons' store had an attractive window last week, yellow irises being featured. Hanging baskets were filled with the flowers, as were baskets on gilded pedestals. Bowls of yellow daisies and pansies surrounding a bird bath were on the floor.

James Vick's Sons are doing a big business in seeds. Sales in May were far ahead of April, despite the bad weather. They have just purchased another farm of 120 acres, which will be devoted to seed growing. The crop at the firm's greenhouses is extra fine, but sales of bedding plants have been light, owing to the unseasonable weather.

Frank McLuis, who conducted a flower store at 111 East Main street, was declared bankrupt May 1.

E. R. Fry, of West Main street, reports a good business, with a large amount of funeral work.

A large wreath of victory, decorated with palm leaves and a flag, was a feature of the window display at H. E. Wilson's store. Palms and ferns made the background. H. J. H.

Toll of the Storm.

Temperature conditions now are normal and everything in the open is doing its best to make up for lost time. May 25 we had a hail storm in many places that damaged crops in the field heavily. Some of the market gardeners report that cabbage and other tender vegetables that were almost mature, are practically ruined. Fortunately, the storm's path was narrow. The storm, however, struck several greenhouses. So far as it has been possible to ascertain, the following were the conditions after the storm: Geny Bros. suffered practically no loss; neither did Louis Haury & Sons. At the Joy Floral Co. range, the total breakage was replaced for less than a dollar. McIntyre Bros.' old place and a large range belonging to a neighboring market gardener had possibly one-third of the glass broken. L. H. Smith, formerly a florist, but of late years confining his efforts entirely to vegetables, had about three-fifths of his glass destroyed. McIntyre Bros.' new place was in the direct path of the storm and nearly three-fourths of their glass was broken and much damage done to the growing stock inside. Louis Haury, who established a place something over a year ago, suffered as heavily.

At Centennial park there was practically no damage and Charles Tritchler also was fortunate enough to miss the hail. The houses at Ward Belmont suffered heavily, but were not quite so hard hit as McIntyre Bros.' old place, which is a mile beyond. Corbett escaped damage. Mt. Olivet suffered heavily. It has not been learned how much of this damage was covered by insurance, but hail is so rare here it is probable that a majority of the growers carried no insurance.

Various Notes.

Bedding plants were never more nearly sold out at this season of the year than at present. It is certain that the war has not hurt business in this city.

Lilium tenuifolium made its debut as a cut flower on this market this spring. It is certainly worth a place among our best flowers, the coral blossoms attracting attention at once.

The Joy Floral Co. reports its roses are at their best now. The new store in Chattanooga opened auspiciously.

Geny Bros. have a rose that bids fair to be a winner if they can hold it. They are cutting a few now and are propagating all they can. It is a yellow sport of Ophelia. The color is similar to Lady Hillingdon.

The parks of the city are using Chinese wool flower freely this season. This plant has a great future, both as a bedder and as a pot subject, as soon as the trade learns how to grow it to perfection in pots. F. B.

The Market.

The supply of stock for Memorial day is good. Advance orders show that business will be excellent and should take up the receipts of cut flowers and plants for that day.

Roses and carnations are in good supply. Easter lilies are plentiful. Sweet peas are abundant and of good quality.
Gladioli are in heavier supply and excellent snapdragons are to be had.
Other offerings include lily of the valley, cornflowers, callas, irises and cape jasmynes. The peony supply is far below normal. Greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

William Gardner, of Richmond, Ind., has been shipping some excellent gladioli to C. E. Critchell.

The William Murphy Co. reported having booked an unusually large number of orders for carnations for Mem-

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.;
Secretary-Treasurer, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-fifth annual convention, Detroit, June 19 to 21, 1917.

NAVY beans are selling readily at $14 per bushel for good seed stock.

JAMES VICK'S SONS, Rochester, have purchased another farm of 120 acres for seed growing.

THE acreage of caladium bulbs in the south is said to approximate sixty per cent of a normal planting.

TURNIP seed continues to advance in price and a shortage is beginning to develop. It sells at from 75 cents to $1 per pound wholesale.

OFFERS made by growers in the south indicate that there is a considerable surplus of tuberose bulbs, with small prospect of finding a market.

NEVER in all its history has the seed trade done so much business in May as has been the case this year, but the same is true of April in most of the stores.

THE acreage of Harrisii bulbs, now maturing in Bermuda, is even less than last year, but it is claimed the quality will show another step toward the disease-free days of old.

IT is reported in the food trade that the acreage of beans in Michigan has almost doubled, while in California it has increased fully fifty per cent. In the seed trade the marvel is that the seeds were found.

THE British Board of Trade has prohibited the importation of French bulbs into England this year, which will mean that the United States will be the only market for the French crop of Paper Whites and Romans.

R. B. HOWE, of the W. W. Barnard Co., Chicago, who holds a commission of captain in the quartermaster's division of the reserve army, has been called to Fort Sam Houston, Tex. He will be on furlough from the company until released from his military duties.

SEEDSMEN are urging their first-time gardening customers not to neglect the plants now that the seeds are germinated. A failure means much this year; it not only will defeat the purpose of the gardening movement, but it will cause the waste of the seeds used and the discouragement of the planter.

KIRBY B. WHITE, president of the American Seed Trade Association, asks The Review to give publicity to the inquiry of Dr. W. A. Taylor with regard to those who wish to become familiar with the technique and practice of seed testing at the Department of Agriculture. Dr. Taylor's letter was printed on page 60 of The Review for May 24.

A SEED warehouse will be erected this summer at Sigourney, Ia., by August Bruns & Sons.

IN Trenton, N. J., Satterthwaite's Seed Store recently filled the better part of eight pages in an issue of the Evening Times with advertising of seeds and farm and garden supplies. The advertising appeared in the form of catalogue pages, four on a newspaper page.

ATTORNEY ROYAL F. CLARK, of Randolph, Wis., representing the Wisconsin Pea Packers' Association, announces that the case brought by the state of Wisconsin upon the relation of the Attorney General, against the association on the ground that it was in many respects a trust, has been dismissed and judgment has been entered in the Circuit court for Dane county, Wisconsin. The evidence showed the members of the association put up eighty per cent of the peas packed in Wisconsin and that Wisconsin packs thirty-seven per cent of the total output.

THE JOHN H. ALLAN SEED CO.

E. M. Parmelee, who is in his seventy-seventh year, sold his interests in the John H. Allan Seed Co., Sheboygan, Wis., August 8, 1916, believing he had served his time in the seed trade. The business was established in 1856 and has gone along steadily for more than sixty years. Incorporation was in 1892. Recently the company has been licensed to do business in certain western states, the growing of peas and beans being its specialty. There has been no change in the corporation. The present owners are T. H. Hopkins, manager of the St. Anthony, Idaho, branch; F. C. Maynard and the officers: President, D. D. Rowlands; vice-president and treasurer, W. B. Lucas; secretary, A. L. Sommer.

A CANNER'S VIEW.

The Optimist in its latest number quotes one of the biggest seed concerns in the east as declaring they are selling a hundred per cent more seeds this year than ever before.

"This apparently forecasts a goodly crop of garden 'sass' in private gardens," says the Campbellite. "And if so, it is all to the merry. The country will need all of such help it can get to keep prices off the aeroplane route this year. It is to be hoped that enough men will be left at home to attend to these gardens after they are planted.

"In the happy event that the war clouds are soon dissipated we predict that a large proportion of these 'gentleman farmers' will raise an additional crop of blisters and backaches, together with implement costs and other incidental expenses, which, before the season is over, will drive them to seek more inspiring and economical diversion. They will in all probability come back eventually to the well-demonstrated modern hypothesis that the can-opener is mightier than the hoe.

"Moral: Another optimist is the fellow who believes the pictures on his package of seeds."

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

S. M. Isbell & Co., of Jackson, Mich., are enjoying tremendous business, according to Manager A. H. Luck, who stated that in addition to having a good supply of the leading kinds of seeds, they were fortunate in securing additional acreage for future contracts.
Their farmers are averse to growing small-seeded kinds, such as radish, so that, unfortunately, and for climatic reasons, these must be imported. From the present outlook the list of vegetables for next season's catalogues will be severely restricted.

Kendel's Seed Store, at Cleveland, is, to use a provincialism, "up to the balcony in business." "I do not believe," said A. C. Kendel, "that business will amount to more than the usual in volume. There is so much packet trade and farmers are sowing less. Peas, for instance, are not selling so freely as formerly. Scarcity of labor is the reason. Never before have we done such a counter trade. While many of the amateur gardeners undoubtedly will be disappointed with the results of their labor, the press, a committee of which I am a member, has taken great pains to instruct the amateurs as plainly as possible, even to the extent of setting aside the advice sent out from Washington. This advice, unfortunately, is founded solely on theory, local conditions and situations being ignored. We have done some local advertising, but the boost given by the dailies has undoubtedly stirred up enthusiasm and, as I have already stated, our committee has done, and is doing, much, by the daily chart issued.
We needed rain badly in this neighborhood and the moisture of the last few days has done great good. Now if old Boreas will let up and old Sol will beam down we shall have a banner season to report at the annual meeting of the Seed Trade Association. And the meeting is going to be a hummer," concluded Secretary Kendel.

The Theilmann Seed Co., of Erie, Pa., is of the opinion that the advent of carloads of seed potatoes from out of town has taught the farmers a good lesson against hoarding up their stocks in the future, and the company regrets that the idea was not adopted earlier.
Many others view the subject in the same light.

TACOMA, WASH.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds is easier than it was last week, probably owing to the slight improvement in weather conditions. Sweet peas and snapdragons are now up to the demand. Stocks are coming in nicely and are helping out in funeral work. A few gladioli are also shown. Tulips are practically out. Lilac is in quantities, but is meeting only a slow demand. Carnations are scarce, but, owing to a better supply of sweet peas and other small flowers, they are not so badly missed as they were earlier in the season. Indications are that by careful selling there will be no great scarcity of stock for Decoration day. The lack of home-grown peonies, which are late this season, will probably be felt the most. Local growers are disposing of large quantities of good cucumbers at a fair price. Lack of sunshine is keeping back the tomatoes.

At Gray's Harbor.

A recent trip to the Gray's Harbor district found things humming down there. Wm. Crammatte, of the Home Florists, of Aberdeen, was in the midst of making up a large casket cover, besides a number of other large designs for a funeral that afternoon. He was not too busy to talk, however, or to accept help. A trip through his greenhouse showed some good carnations, sweet peas and bedding stock; also a fine house of cucumbers, for which he has a splendid demand. At Hoquiam, a few minutes' ride from Aberdeen, H. T. Pierson had a banquet table to decorate and was kept busy with his counter trade. Mr. Pierson does only a retail business and was troubled somewhat over the scarcity of stock. At Montesano, Mr. Johanson and his wife were busy selling bedding stock. A trip through the greenhouse showed a nicely kept stock of carnations, lilies and other cut and bedding stock. Mr. Johanson reports business good.

Various Notes.

A report of the death of Hilan Harrington will be found in the obituary column of this week's issue.

"When are you going to wire me to report?" This is the query which came over the long distance phone last week to Capt. Horace Carter, of the Fourth company, C. A. C., from William Forsythe in Detroit. The message cost $25, too. The Detroit man is a florist and joined the company last summer when he was in Tacoma to visit Capt. Carter, with whom he went to school. Forsythe has closed up his business affairs with the idea of being in the field a long time. He will be a sergeant in the company.

The Tacoma Rose Society is appealing to the adjutant general's office in an effort to obtain the use of the Armory for the annual rose show. The plea is based on the fact that the proceeds go to the Red Cross. Heretofore, the Armory was turned over to the rose society, but last year, through some new ruling, the officers of the Armory refused to permit any other than regular army affairs to be held there.

B. G.

LOS ANGELES.

The Market.

A cool spell struck us last week. It will probably have the effect of shortening up stock for Memorial day. But what is lost in quantity, will be made up in quality. The greenhouse carnations now in the market are rather poor and probably will be until the new crop comes in, but the field stock is excellent. In yellow flowers some excellent coreopsis is shown and this, with cornflowers and blue delphiniums, is making a fine showing in the windows.

Outdoor roses have been decidedly poor this season and the quality of the indoor stock is only fair. A few early dahlias are in and make a nice display and asters are becoming more plentiful and better in quality. Some valley is in. Orchids are fine and plentiful, especially Cattleya Mossiae. Some nice gladioli are in the market and meet with a ready demand, the best sellers, as usual, being America and the hybrids of gandavensis. In spite of the number of spring flowers in the market, strawflowers of the helichrysum and acroclinium types sell well.

In greens there is an abundance of plumosus and huckleberry, also maidenhair, but Sprengeri is scarce some days. Good Boston and other ferns are scarce and there are few other plants worth mentioning. The different varieties of statice are good sellers now.

Various Notes.

Among the visitors last week were Arthur Gleave, of Gleave's Flower Shop, and E. Rowe, the famous landscape gardener, both of Santa Barbara. Mr. Rowe, unfortunately, had to visit a sick relative as well as attend to his business of buying stock for his work in the beautiful section around Santa Barbara. Mr. Gleave also was looking up stock for his rapidly increasing business, but as both are busy men, their stay in the city was short. Mr. Rowe drove both ways in his automobile.

Tom Wright, of Wright's Flower Shop, reports business especially good for this season, a large wedding order and a big quantity of funeral work in one day keeping the staff as well as a truck or two busy to handle the work.

Fred Rafferty, of Santa Ana, who has been in the city for a few days, says that while his cut flower business has kept up well, there is no doubt that the war has resulted in hindering his bedding plant business, as so many people are giving their attention to vegetable growing.

F. Sperry, manager of the L. A. Floral Co., took a party of friends to Baldwin and Bear lakes last week, driving his car the whole distance. The desert road was the one used in going and the picturesque crest route the one coming back. Although one day was stormy and the lake too rough for fishing, everyone had a good time up among the big pines. Snow three to four feet deep was encountered in some places and the sudden drop to the valley below, with its bright sun and high temperature, was marked.

"We wish to thank you for the shipments of stock which we received for Mothers' Day. It came through in fine condition and was carefully packed, and evidently carefully selected for us. The prices were right also, and we appreciate such treatment.

"Please advise us by return mail what the outlook is for Decoration Day stock and quote us prices upon the same."

Having gone over the desert sands and ascended above the clouds, Mr. Sperry now feels himself a full-fledged autoist.

Several additions have been made to the staff of S. Murata & Co., the shipping business keeping up remarkably well. Advance orders for Memorial day are away beyond those for last year. Business in fertilizers also has been good.

The H. N. Gage Co. has been handling a fine line of Teddy, Jr., ferns and so well have they sold that it has been difficult for the growing department to keep pace with the sales. Some fine hydrangeas in pots also hit the Memorial day market just right.

J. M. Grant, who has been working up a landscape business since he left his position as city forester of Santa Barbara, says he has as much as he can do in this line.

John Fincken has the Washington street nursery looking fine and his stock in good condition. He reports business excellent.

C. A. Brazee, of Wilmington, has about finished his cut of bulbous flowers and is well satisfied with results and the prices obtained this season.

Frank Lichtenberg has just returned from a trip to Idlewyld and reports the fishing good. Mrs. Lichtenberg accompanied him on the trip.

H. R. Richards.

SAN FRANCISCO.*The Market.

The supply of stock has threatened to become burdensome at times. There is an abundance of practically all seasonable flowers and the regular demand has eased off somewhat with the opening of the vacation season. The situation does not promise to become acute right away, however, as the extra demand for Memorial day in all likelihood will take care of the heaviest offerings possible on that day and the close cut then will curtail the offerings to a considerable extent during the remainder of the week. Gladioli are late this year, as has been the case with most of the outdoor flowers on account of the backwardness of the season. There is only a meager cut for Memorial day, whereas the market is usually flooded with both the large and small-flowered gladioli by the end of May. Peonies are the principal feature just now. The cut is heavy and the blooms show splendid quality. Other items that figure largely in the daily offerings are coreopsis, gaillardias, stocks, marguerites, marigolds, snapdragons, gillyflowers and mignonette. There is a nice lot of delphiniums and these are well received. Irises still linger and maintain their popularity well.

Sweet peas have been opening rather slowly, but they will come freely from now on. There are plenty carnations to be had, but the average quality is hardly up to standard. Roses leave nothing to be desired either in quality or quantity. American Beauties are fine and the demand leaves no ground for complaint. Ophelia is excellent and the same may be said of Russell and Hadley. The market is well supplied with gardenias. Any extra demand for orchids causes a shortage, as the offerings are none too plentiful at any time. Fine oriental poppies have appeared at some of the stores and in no instance have they failed to attract favorable attention.

J. A. Axell, manager of the E. W. McLellan Co., says that the demand for roses is well up to normal and, taking the business as a whole, that he has no complaints to make. The volume of business so far this year has shown an increase over the corresponding period of 1916, and last year was better than 1915, the exposition year.

J. Gilmore, formerly with the Hillsborough Nursery, has accepted a position with Domoto Bros. and will have charge of this firm's rose growing, which means that he will have twenty-eight houses of roses to look after. He was with Domoto Bros. some five or six years ago.

Though not recovered from his recent illness sufficiently to resume his duties as manager of the B. M. Joseph store, Fred J. Bertrand spends a little time every day at the flower market, which shows where his interests lie.

Charles F. Shellgrain, manager of J. B. Boland's store, reports business seasonably good.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. have arranged for a big cut of peonies and are making a splendid showing of these flowers at their store on Kearny street. A. J. Rossi says they are having a fine call this season. He is devoting considerable time and attention to the work of the city playground commission, of which he is a member.

Podesta & Baldoecchi have been making a special feature of Irish Elegance roses, and Victor Podesta says this variety is gaining in popularity rapidly. He considers this year's blooms of better color than ever before.

Henry Avansino, of Avansino Bros., took a little vacation last week in order to make some improvements at his place in Marin county, where he makes his home. He is preparing for a big business Memorial day.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee is shipping a great many strawflowers. She reports that the retail business is up to expectations.

Robert Newcomb was a recent visitor, in the interests of the American Bulb Co., of Chicago.

Miss B. K. Rolfes has bought the florists' business of the B. W. Perks Co., at 2315 Telegraph avenue, Berkeley, which is one of the best known stores in University city. She is reported to be doing nicely.

The flower show committee of the Pacific Coast Horticultural Society postponed the meeting it was to have held last week on account of the inability of some of the members to attend. It is planned to meet in the near future, however, in order to get plans under way for the proposed show for next spring.

Fred C. Jaeger, of MacRorie & McLaren, and his son are taking a little motor trip into Lake county, preceding the Memorial day rush. Walter A. Hofinghoff spent last week at his ranch near Cazadero, in Sonoma county. He reports the landscape and nursery business quite active for this time of the year. His firm is now working out extensive plans for a large estate in the Sacramento valley.

Prof. E. W. Stevens, of the University of California, formerly with MacRorie & McLaren, has been appointed landscape engineer for a large estate at Santa Barbara.

The Menlo Park Horticultural Society is preparing to hold a sweet pea show at Menlo Park June 9 and 10.

Extensive preparations are being made for the second annual dahlia show, to be given August 25 and 26 under the auspices of the Park-Richmond Improvement Association. The Dahlia Society of California has been invited to participate in this show and will lend its assistance.

The Cottage Gardens Nurseries, Inc., of which C. W. Ward is head, has been granted permission by the state corporation commission to issue 1,462 shares of stock to Mr. Ward, in payment of indebtedness, and to sell 738 shares at par, the proceeds to be used for the further development of the business, which is conducted in Humboldt and Santa Clara counties.

James Knox, for nine years buyer and assistant manager of the Hobbs-Parsons seed business at Stockton, Cal., has bought the interests of his former employers, and has moved to a new location at 223-225 East Weber avenue, where he has more room for carrying a larger stock.

Much interest is being shown in the movement for the planting of thirty model gardens under the supervision of

The lateness of the season is brought to notice by the fact there are no peonies, roses, delphiniums or gaillardias for Memorial day and in the memory of the oldest member of the trade there never has been a prospect for such a shortage of stock for this holiday. The lateness of the season has kept all sorts of outdoor stock in good condition and there will be a few tulips, Narcissus albus plenus odoratus and N. poeticus offered. This is the first time in many years they have held on so late. Outdoor valley was never better than it is now.

Forty-second annual convention, Philadelphia, Pa., June 27 to 29, 1917.

GEORGE C. PERKINS, of Jackson & Perkins Co., Newark, N. Y., has left for a trip to the Pacific coast states, expecting to be absent five or six weeks.

STUART PERKINS, a son of George C. Perkins, of Newark, N. Y., has entered the officers' training camp at Madison Barracks, Sacket Harbor, N. Y.

"SCARCELY a nursery in the country," says a writer in a British trade paper, "has been able to propagate a normal quantity of ornamental stock, and when the demand comes, as it will do, for stuff to make good this year's losses, most of the nursery stock of specimen size will have suffered through want of transplanting, and there will be a gap in the on-growing stocks through the suspension of propagation. From one point of view this may not be as unfortunate as first thought would suggest, for when demand coincides with shortness of stock, the improvement in prices which has long been yearned for will automatically come about."

STARK'S CONCLUSIONS.

"I don't know how the conditions in the east have been this year," says L. C. Stark, vice-president of the

SIM'S HYBRID YELLOW POLYANTHUS

This is one of my houses, 20x300 feet, of National Flower Show Gold Medal Polyanthus. These have been in bloom constantly since November and will continue into May.

I had two houses of Giant Yellow Polyanthus in full crop at Easter. A Review correspondent saw them March 31st and wrote:

"They include some beautiful varieties, which are being carefully marked and saved for propagation. One bed 300 feet long, of a pale yellow polyanthus, true to type in every plant, was particularly fine. I measured individual flowers two inches in diameter and many of the stalks stood eighteen inches high. Two houses, each 300 feet long, are devoted to this crop, and a glorious sight they are."

But the best of it is they had a glorious sale. You can do as well next season if you order your stock now.

Strong divisions ready in May.

agency or salesmen's business will suffer, perhaps, where the salesmen or agents cannot be found in sufficient quantities, but where salesmen are working I believe they will be able to do a good business.

"The labor situation, of course, is one of the nurseryman's big problems. The freight situation is another problem; however, these, like all other problems, will be solved somehow.

"I note a tendency towards pessimism in some quarters. This to my mind is all dead wrong. Now is the time to be conservative, of course, but pessimism won't help, and it will hurt a lot. There are, on the contrary, many causes for optimism in nursery circles.

"First and foremost, the farmer, who buys most of the nursery products, is a favored son as never before; both the government and the banks are holding him up and the government will undoubtedly supply him with labor. On the other hand, the man who plants ornamentals in a large way, in many cases has more money than ever before and he probably will continue to buy. The first year probably will be worse than the succeeding ones if Canada furnishes us a fair example. In the meantime, we nurserymen must do what we can to line up the agricultural colleges, the agricultural publications, the Department of Agriculture, etc., and get them to urge production and conservation of fruit food products and incidentally this will help the planting of orchards."

Rockford, Ill.—The flower and market gardening business of the late George H. Chamberlain has been acquired by J. K. Dawson.

LANCASTER, PA.

Club Meeting.

At the monthly meeting of the Lancaster County Florists' Club May 17, Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., entertained the members, their families and friends with an illustrated lecture on "Dahlias," which proved to be most instructive. The club decided to hold its annual picnic at Hershey park June 21. The committee in charge of the outing is composed of L. S. Landis, Harry K. Rohrer and De Barry Heinitsh. After the meeting refreshments were served and an hour was devoted to social entertainment.

Various Notes.

Owing to the continued cool weather

there were practically no outdoor flowers for Memorial day. In this section only a few officinalis peonies, irises and pyrethrums were in bloom. Several hot days and Lancaster county would have had the usual thousands of herbaceous peonies.

The weather continues dry and most of the carnation plants in the field have had no soaking rain since they were planted.

Mrs. Albert M. Herr successfully managed a garden party at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Brown, for the benefit of St. Joseph's hospital.

At Charles M. Weaver's home on Philadelphia pike there is a huge bed of Darwin tulips which attracts much attention and is a credit to Mr. Weaver.

Enos W. Kohr's new automobile is a beauty. His carnations continue to be among the best sent out of the county.

P. J. Murphy's Memorial day window display for B. F. Barr & Co. was one of the finest ever shown in the city.

Ira H. Landis, of Paradise, is cutting some choice sweet peas from outdoor planting.

H. K. R.

Allentown, Pa.—Andrew Yeager still takes an active interest in the business, although his son-in-law has proved a most valuable assistant.

East Bridgewater, Mass.—Speaking for J. K. Alexander, his son, J. H. Alexander, says business in dahlia roots has been better than ever before, sales having doubled last year's record, with all surplus stock cleaned up.

MILWAUKEE.

The Market.

The weather last week did not make it appear that Memorial day would bring much business for the florists, but the first part of this week brought sunshine and warmth, just what was needed in advance of the holiday. There were rain and hail May 26. Due to this weather there were practically no tulips in the market. Daffodils are about gone and peonies are extremely scarce.

The cool weather, however, has kept carnations in good shape and the quality is excellent. The supply is large and whether or not the demand will take care of it depends on late orders. So far orders for Memorial day have been slow in coming. The rose crop is beginning to show the effects of the dark, cool weather, both in quality and color. There is a sufficient supply, however, in everything but red roses. The supply of sweet peas, too, has been reduced, but there should be no shortage.

The sale of plants has been brisk and many establishments are entirely sold out.

Various Notes.

Louis Manos, proprietor of a store in the Merrill building, has been confined to his home with rheumatism, an illness that has affected several of the local florists recently.

Miss Ruth Holton, daughter of F. H. Holton, has been ill during the last week with a cold.

Adam Zender, of Rogers Park, Ill., has been the guest of F. H. Holton.

BUFFALO.

The Market.

Stock of all kinds has been plentiful since Mothers' day. At the same time everything has been selling at good prices. American Beauties are of good quality and the demand has been excellent. Carnations have been abundant, as has been all seasonable stock. Greens have been in demand.

Various Notes.

Every florist is busy, and has been for some time, assisting the Allied Bazaar at the Broadway Auditorium.

The Colonial Flower Shop has added another auto truck to its delivery equipment.

Raymond House, formerly with W. J. Palmer & Son, called on his friends in Buffalo last week. He is associated with John Breitmeyer's Sons, of Detroit, as manager of one of the firm's branch stores.

The members of the trade extend their sympathy to W. J. Palmer in the loss of his sister, Mrs. Goetz, who died recently at her home in Lancaster, N. Y.

John Cramer has purchased of Joseph Sangster the latter's store on Jefferson street.

Growers are complaining of shortage of labor and about the high price of coal and inability to get an adequate supply.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

WANTS A HIGHER TEMPERATURE.

Kindly tell me how many more 2-inch pipes will be required, in houses that now have a temperature of 55 degrees, to raise the temperature to 64 degrees in zero weather.

L. G.—Ill.

To increase the temperature that can be maintained in a greenhouse from 55 to 64 degrees, we would increase the amount of radiation at least twenty-five per cent. That is, if there are now twelve pipes we would put in three more. We would add the same number if there are now either ten or eleven pipes. The addition of two pipes where there are nine at present would answer if it is an easy matter to secure 55 degrees, but otherwise it will be more satisfactory to add three pipes.

When an increase in the number of return pipes is made, care should be taken not to overtax the flows. It will probably be safest to add one or more flow pipes in each house. A 2-inch flow will handle two 2-inch returns in houses up to 100 feet in length, while a 2½-inch flow will carry three or four 2-inch returns in a house 150 feet long.

A HOUSE FOR SWEET PEAS.

Will you please give me some information in regard to piping my greenhouse for hot water heat? All the beds will be solid and will be used for growing sweet peas. The house is of pipe-frame construction and is 29x75. It is seven and one-half feet high to the eaves and fifteen feet to the ridge. There are four feet of glass in each side wall, above three and one-half feet of wood. The boiler shed is at the north side of the house. I am planning to use three 2½-inch flows. How many returns will be needed? Can 1½-inch pipe be used for the returns? What size of boiler will be required? It will be set in a pit, below the level of the greenhouse floor. I want a temperature of 56 degrees in zero weather.

A. J. M.—Mich.

While we prefer to use 2-inch pipes for the returns in houses that are seventy-five feet long, good results can be obtained with 1½-inch returns, provided they are at least three feet above the top of the boiler.

We would suggest the use of three 2½-inch flow pipes, placing one upon each plate and the other three feet below the ridge. For the returns we would use fifteen 2-inch or nineteen 1½-inch pipes, and would use five pipes on each side wall, connecting them with the flows on the plates. The other returns should be joined with the flow under the ridge, and may be run in each direction along the end of the house to the corners and then along the side walls under the other returns back to the boiler. It is sometimes desirable to have a little more overhead heat, in houses as wide as twenty-nine feet, than would be furnished by one flow pipe, and this can be obtained by running one of the returns back under each of the purlins, or on the purlin posts.

We would select a boiler rated for 1,200 square feet, or with about six square feet of grate surface, although this will vary with the boiler.

good some days, but it made no impression on the large consignments that came in daily. The wholesalers had a hard time disposing of the supply at anything like a good price. The stock that arrived showed plainly the effects of the warm weather. This week, however, business should be good, as quite a number of advance orders for Memorial day already have been booked. Prices will stiffen up considerably, as the growers will be off crop on carnations and indoor sweet peas will shorten considerably. They are about through for the season. The wholesalers expect a big cut of peonies from local and southern growers. A heavy crop of roses, too, is expected to help out considerably. Easter lilies are in big supply and $5 per hundred was the prevailing price last week. Valley is in great demand, but is quite scarce in this market. Cape jasmines from Texas are arriving in large quan-

CAST IRON BOILERS WASTE FUEL

I had a cast iron 8-section boiler before, but was afraid it would crack to pieces. The Kroeschell Boiler is certainly a fuel-saver. My coal bill to heat 5000 sq. ft. of glass surface with your boiler is less than last winter's coal bill, when I had only 2050 sq. ft. of glass, heated with the 8-section cast iron boiler.

Your boiler burns any kind of fuel. I would not have any other boiler than the Kroeschell, and will recommend whenever I get a chance.

Various Notes.

W. A. Rowe, president-elect of the St. Louis County Growers' Association, says he expects a large attendance at the installation meeting, to be held June 6 at the Eleven Mile House. Jules Bourdet, state vice-president of the S. A. F., will address the association on important matters.

August Hummert, of the St. Louis Seed Co., and Frank Weber, of the H. J. Weber & Sons Nursery Co., are planning to attend the conventions.

The Schoenle Floral Co., on South Grand avenue, is making attractive window displays of outdoor plants. Mrs. Schoenle says the month of May shows a big increase in business over last year.

A big supply of cut gladioli is expected this season from the Kirkwood growers. A few indoor-grown gladioli are coming in at present. C. E. De Wever, Phil. Goebel and Joseph Deutschmann are among the heaviest growers of these flowers.

Charles Young, president of the C. Young & Sons Co., reported a great many advance orders for Memorial day from nearby towns in Missouri and Illinois. Walter Young, secretary of this firm, has joined the aviation corps. He formerly was a member of Battery A and saw service on the Mexican border.

PLANT TUBS

EVERLASTING VIRGINIA WHITE CEDAR

EVERYBODY agrees that Plant Tubs made of everlasting Virginia White Cedar will best resist rot or decay. The "Keystone" brand of White Cedar Plant Tubs are made of this celebrated wood, and these goods are painted inside and out with best oil paints, a rich green.

They are bound with heavy steel hoops for the large size, and electric-welded wire hoops (galvanized) on the small size. The large sizes are trimmed with handsome drop handles and metal feet, and have perforated, removable bottoms.

These Cedar Tubs are made in all sizes, from 24 inches top diameter down to 6 inches, amply large for a Bay Tree and small enough for a Hyacinth. Every one guaranteed. Booklet in colors, with prices, furnished upon request.

MINNEAPOLIS.

The Market.

Business was quiet during the first part of last week, but Memorial day gave it an impetus. There has been little social work recently, due, it is thought, to the war. Weddings, too, have been few and none of them elaborate. Toward the end of last week, however, buying began to increase and business opened briskly May 28, orders for Memorial day coming in. There was ample stock of good quality to take care of the holiday business.

Excellent Russell and other roses are in the market. Prices range from $4 to $10 per hundred. Orchids are scarce. Carnations are of good quality and a large supply reaches the market daily. Valley of the best quality is scarce and prices are light. There is some outdoor valley, but it is not good. Snapdragons, gladioli, daisies, sweet peas, mignonette and lilacs find ready sale. The weather has taken a change for the better and the first part of the week was warm and bright.

Various Notes.

The Lakewood Cemetery Association was busy with Memorial day work.

John Lindberg is cutting some excellent Winsor carnations.

Max Kaiser is adding vegetables to his stock of flowers and plants.

All of the retail stores had appropriate window displays for Memorial day. Several of them were most artistic and attracted considerable attention.

E. M. P.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its spring show in the Neighborhood House May 23. The quality of blooms did not equal those of last year, owing to the inclement weather, but competition was keen in most of the twenty-seven classes. The principal exhibitors were James MacDonald, J. F. Johnson, William Noonan and Robert Jones, but John Dombrosky, Joseph Adler, Alexander Sheriffs and James McCarthy staged some good exhibits and were among the prize-winners. Cultural certificates were awarded to John F. Johnson, for salpiglossis; to James McCarthy, for Yarrowa sweet peas, and to Robert Jones, for a magnificent group of French hydrangeas. Special mention was made of anemones staged by Mr. Johnson.

The judges were James Duthie, E. Westlake and James McCarthy. Robert Jones was manager of the show and his work entitles him to a word of commendation.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

There has been little change in market conditions during the last week. The cold weather has kept stock from developing, but there was no shortage. Gladioli have made their appearance in the market. Bedding plants are plentiful and had a large sale for Memorial day, together with wreaths. Outdoor lilaes are coming in quantities. Roses are good and sell at reasonable prices. Carnations and sweet peas are abundant.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Strobell and family will go to their cottage at Ocean Grove the last part of June.

August C. Begerow has a miniature flagpole in the center of his window display, on which there is an American flag. A concealed electric fan keeps the flag waving.

A movement has been started among the Newark florists to offer prizes for amateur window boxes. R. B. M.

USINGER'S UTTERANCES.

The North Hill Greenhouses, at Akron, O., are preparing to combat the high cost of materials next fall. A 2-ton truck will haul coal to the greenhouses. "They charge $30 per day to haul coal, so why not do it ourselves?" is the question Edward Schwerdtfeger asks.

The Heepe's Sons' store had a fine stock of roses and spring flowers that were displayed so as to attract the eyes of flower lovers and, as Mr. Riley put it, "they are being attracted and buy."

Mrs. E. Suder, of Toledo, O., has her usual rush of spring trade. It is only a question of getting it out, as the weather has almost put a stop to planting and growing.

Schramm Bros., of Toledo, O., are busy getting out their orders for bedding stock. Here, too, the weather is holding stock back.

The Helmer Flower Store, at Toledo, O., is busy with design work and cut flower trade. A beautiful basket of snapdragons and roses, tied with two-tone ribbon, was being sent out to the opening of a new business enterprise when I called.

Metz & Bateman, of Toledo, O., say business has held up well. With Memorial day near, everyone was busy and, from the looks of things, will stay busy.

DETROIT, MICH.

The Market.

The quantity of stock reaching the market last week was considerably shortened by the cold and rainy weather. The popular varieties of roses, such as Ophelia, Russell, Reid, Hoosier Beauty, Ward and other corsage roses, cleared daily. Killarney and American Beauty, with some of the bulbous stock, were inclined to drag. The prices of roses remain good; in fact, they have been rather stiff.

Carnations, the first part of last week, were to be had so low as $2 per hundred, but at the end of the week reached $4 and $5 per hundred. The flowers were small and not plentiful. Sweet peas have shortened in quantity and are only fair in quality. Tulips are good and sell well, being used in funeral and social work. Gladioli have come in, but the sale is not yet strong. The supply of baby gladioli has shortened and clears each day. Peonies are coming in and great quantities are expected for Memorial day.

Various Notes.

George Davis entertained the Detroit Florists' Club May 23.

Raymond House, manager of John Breitmeyer's Sons' Jefferson avenue store, has returned from a trip to Buffalo, N. Y.

A new flower store is to be opened in the Forest theater. It will be known as the Forest Flower Shop.

Mr. Marenz, of Reed & Keller, New York city, called on the trade recently.

M. A. Leganger, representing the A. L. Randall Co., of Chicago, visited the trade last week. H. T.

Erie, Pa.—J. V. Laver says the reason why he took over the houses of the Erie Floral Co. was to secure the supply of roses produced there. By making other changes his glass area will be about as heretofore. The nursery department is progressing, busy now on a large planting contract for the General Electric Co. Ernst F. Hoehl, of S. S. Skidelsky & Co., Philadelphia, was a caller and remarked that, with certain lines of stock running low, it looked as though the salesman would be the bestower, instead of the recipient, of favors.

must be lasting, secure, efficient, properly ventilated

It must be constructed in accordance with the rules which have been approved by knowledge and experience. We have been in the greenhouse manufacturing business for a good many years and our experience is at your disposal. Whether you intend to build your first house or plan an addition, we believe that our suggestions will be of interest to you. Our material is strictly first-class both in grade and workmanship. Our new "Leak-Proof" Gutter is bound to give you satisfaction. Our prices are reasonable. We use only the best grade of Louisiana Red Cypress.

The Market.

Cold weather last week, with frost May 24 and 25, shortened the supply of outdoor stock for Decoration day. There were no local peonies. However, roses, lilies and other flowers, except carnations, were plentiful. The wholesale houses have been overcrowded with stock of almost every kind, particularly Beauties, sweet peas and snapdragons. There is a scarcity of good smilax and Asparagus plumosus and Sprengeri. The majority of the retail stores handle bedding plants and are now quite busy. Business is excellent with the retailers. The plantsmen have had a little trouble in getting good blooming stock for cemetery decoration, for in this city everyone tries to have his cemetery lot planted before Memorial day. The cemetery superintendents have been experiencing difficulty in securing enough labor.

The vegetable plantsmen have been reaping a harvest, asking big prices for poor plants. Seedsmen never before saw such a demand for seeds and if the purchasers get even half their money back in vegetables, we all shall have to be vegetarians to consume the output.

Various Notes.

Bert Huttinger was a visitor in Cleveland last week.

Ed. Weaver, of Randolph & McClements, was ill last week. It is thought he was poisoned by dogwood. His eyes were badly affected.

David Hill, the Fifth avenue florist, lost his father last week. His many friends in the trade extend their sympathies.

Paul Berkowitz, representing H. Bayersdorfer & Co., of Philadelphia, was a visitor here last week. Clarke.

Binghamton, N. Y.—Believing that the common interests of the city's trade could be more effectively promoted through the efforts of an organization, the leading florists of Binghamton recently formed what will be known as the Binghamton Florists' Association, with the following officers: President, William Baker; vice-president, J. W. Beckwith; secretary-treasurer, A. M. Fancher. Meetings were held May 13, at 7:30, and May 28, at 9 o'clock.

ADVANCE VENTILATING EQUIPMENT

is undoubtedly the best on the market.

There are plenty of reasons; here are a few:

Designing is the big essential feature, all parts compact and extra strong; but still the weight is not such that it will make the cost prohibitive.

The Quality of iron that goes into every piece.

If we had you here at our factory we would show you some things about the quality of cast iron that would more than surprise you. You can tell to some extent for yourself by just comparing one of our castings with anything in cast iron.

Then our Service must not be overlooked.

We furnish convenient order blanks and return envelopes, and as soon as your order is received it gets attention. In nearly all cases we ship the same day order is received and we see that the shipment reaches you.

Don't forget that we absolutely guarantee everything we furnish.

Send a card asking for our catalogue.
You will be glad you investigated.

IT IS TRITONIA CROCATA.

Under separate cover I am mailing you a bulb and blossom and would like to know what they are. They are quite uniform in size and color and the large plot we have of them makes a beautiful showing. Are the bulbs of any commercial value? If so, what would you consider a fair price?

R. A. L.—Cal.

It is Tritonia crocata, seen to some extent in better class flower stores in spring, and the true crocata type, orange, is a good seller. Bulbs of T. crocata should be worth $3 to $4 per hundred, wholesale; mixed, about $10 per thousand. C. W.

THE two insertions sold everything I had.—H. M. Morris, Rantoul, Ill.

ARE YOU READY?

ONCE upon a time, so the story goes, an Irishman and a German started out to rough it together. Neither had any money and they lived by the same means as any other hobo. During one day's foraging, Fritz turned up with a fine looking sausage, and brought it back to divide with Mike. They hit upon the novel plan for dividing it of each taking an end in his mouth and pulling until the sausage parted. Wherever the break happened to come, that was the division. After each had taken a good hold, Mike hissed through his teeth, "Air ye reddy?" Whereupon Fritz opened his mouth to say "Jah," and just then Mike gave a jerk and claimed the whole sausage as his own. Wouldn't the Allies like to catch the Germans napping like that on the west front? Oh, boy!

But that isn't what we started out to tell you. We meant to ask about your Chrysanthemum beds. When will you have them ready to receive the plants? When you get them to that point, we will be ready to ship you the finest young plants you ever benched. Here is a list of all good commercial sorts:—Early Frost, Roman Gold, Mrs. Rager, Dolly Dimple, Lena Baum, Oconto, Lynnwood Hall, Unaka, Comoleta, Chrysolora, Chieftain, Nagoya, Wm. Turner, Robt. Halliday, Mistletoe, Mrs. J. C. Neil, Harvard, Monarch, Baby, Diana, Croesus, F. Wilcox, Leota, Rufus, Acto, Lillia, Golden Climax, Savannah.

THE FLORISTS' REVIEW

KEEPING TAB ON BUSINESS HEALTH

Business practices of the successful are always interesting and are worthy of careful consideration. Consequently the trade will be interested in how a Kentucky florist made his growing business grow, how he keeps it growing, and how he knows at the end of every day that its growth is healthy.

IN the vocabulary of Addison J. McNutt, of Knoxville, Tenn., the little four-letter word "grow" plays a leading role. If the subject of this sketch could have had a choice in the matter, he probably would have adopted it as his middle name. He has successfully and successfully grown vegetables, flowers and a business until now he is proprietor of one of the largest and finest flower shops in the south. His standing in the trade may be judged from the fact that he is president of the Knoxville Florists' Society.

Mr. McNutt's father was a market gardener, so he came naturally by his interest in things that nature brings forth from the soil. His one ambition, ever since he gave up hope of being a fireman or an acrobat, has been to develop in the field of endeavor dignified by the activities of Luther Burbank. Except for a flier taken in the candy business, he has been growing in the growing business ever since he was old enough to work.

Credit to Mrs. McNutt.

To Mrs. Addison J. McNutt belongs the credit of inducing her husband to specialize in floriculture. She insisted upon having a violet bed beside the house and, of course, it was up to Addison to weed the garden and otherwise keep it in order during his leisure moments.

It was not long before he was growing the best violets in the neighborhood; his natural ability to grow things just had to assert itself. Mrs. A. J. would give bunches of the flowers to her friends and soon people were calling at the house to buy them. This gave McNutt his hunch. Why not grow flowers to sell? The prices were good and the market lively.

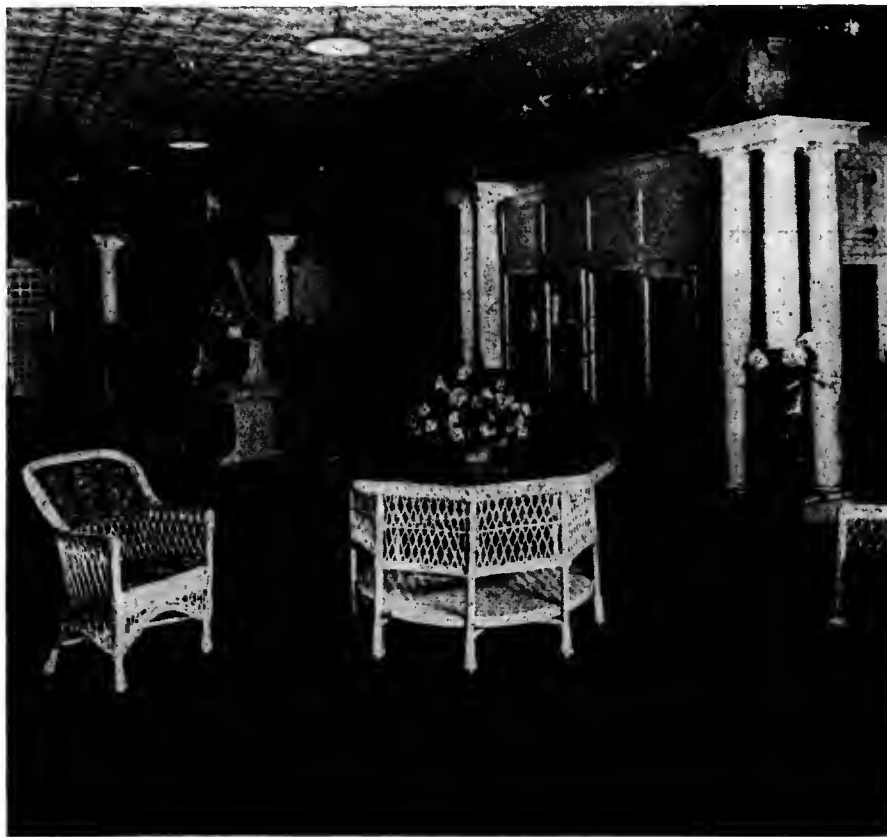

He enlarged the flower bed and spent more of his time with it. His violets were becoming known all over town. Orders were being placed in advance for weekly delivery. Mr. McNutt now fully realized the possibilities of his flower bed. He jumped into the business with both feet, and decided to see if he could not make the business grow, as well as the violets.

Business Grew Rapidly.

His first real marketing experience with his flowers was from a wagon outside the City Market building. The next move was to rent a stall or booth inside the market and, in addition to growing violets, he built greenhouses so as to produce other kinds of flowers and now has a range of seven houses, shown in the illustration on the next page. He gave up growing vegetables altogether.

The Crouch Co. Has a Most Inviting Salesroom.

Mr. McNutt was quite content for a while in keeping his stall at the City market and growing plants and blooms for other dealers in Knoxville. Meanwhile his business was thriving and customers of the large retail florists were coming to him direct for flowers on special occasions.

In February, 1916, he bought out the largest retail florist in Knoxville—the C. W. Crouch Co. The old firm name is retained for business reasons, and C. W. Crouch Co., A. J. McNutt, proprietor, is on the store front and letterheads. He still maintains his stall at the City market.

A. J. McNutt was so thoroughly possessed by the desire to make things grow, that he started right in on the new business. The store was remodeled, painted and decorated. New fixtures and furniture were installed and, as will be seen by the accompanying illustration, the store was made most attractive. He decided right off that he could not afford to be tied up with petty details of the office. There was only certain information that he needed from the books, but he wanted it in clear, condensed figures.

With this arrangement he would know at a glance the exact health of his business every day of the year. Then he would have time to throw his energies into building up the business, furthering sales promotion, and looking after the greenhouse production.

Machine Makes Records.

His brother, G. E. McNutt, has the duties of assistant manager, and keeps all the accounts of the store and greenhouses, in addition to managing the former. The proprietor knows each day what his cash sales amount to, what his charge sales amount to, what his expenses are for the day and how they are distributed. All the ledger posting is done on a machine in the early part of the morning, when business is quiet.

The C. W. Crouch Co. caters to the best and most conservative class in Knoxville. About ninety per cent of its $60,000 a year business is in charge accounts. All these records are handled with a machine.

When a sale is made the clerk makes out a sales ticket in duplicate. At the end of the day, the originals are totaled on an adding machine, showing the charge and cash sales for the day. The duplicate of the sales ticket is filed away in a metal box, made the same size as the ticket, alphabetically by name.

At the end of the month these duplicates are stapled to the back of the statement sent to each customer, which gives the customer a satisfactory check on the items. The customers' accounts are posted in the ledger the following morning. Each customer is represented by a separate ledger card. The charge or credit is entered and the card is put back in the drawer which is used for a file.

While debits and credits are being posted in the ledger (they are posted on separate runs), the amounts are accumulating in the machine, so that when the posting is finished totals for both the charges and credits for the day are obtained. By comparing the totals in the machine with the sum of the amounts on the sales slips and credit slips, which were obtained the evening before, a dependable proof of posting is secured.

The Accounting System.

A. J. McNutt has an interesting form of cash and expense distribution sheet, which is shown in the accompanying illustration. Every item of expense for the upkeep and maintenance of the store and greenhouse is entered in columns under the proper heading. The number of the check paying the expense and the date also are kept.

Totals of all the different items may be had at any time, so that Mr. McNutt can tell the exact amount of each item for any particular month or for the entire season.

The totals of all the credit items also are entered every day. Running totals of these amounts are carried, so that he knows the exact amount of cash received on account, cash sales and charge sales for any period of time.

The firm's statements are mailed on the first of the month. Duplicates of the sales slips for each customer are stapled to the back of the statement, like a bank's return of canceled checks. The statements are the first to get into the customers' hands at the beginning of the new month, which gives them a greater pulling power. The statement is made out directly from the ledger card, only the unpaid, unchecked items being listed. The correct total is printed at the bottom as soon as all the items are listed.

Accuracy Makes for Success.

Keeping books is considerable of a mystery to many florists. If accounting is not a mystery, it is a bore, or at best a tedious task. But it is of prime importance if the business is to be a success. Many a florist, continuing his daily activities firm in the belief that he is earning profits, suddenly has found himself near the rocks of bankruptcy because of ignorance of the real condition of his affairs.

There is no chance that the absence of accuracy in bookkeeping will ever be a cause for the failure of A. J. McNutt. As has been explained, there is no day upon which he cannot at once tell the financial condition of his business.

Many things enter into the success or failure of a florist. An accurate set of books will not, alone, make a success. But it will help to no small degree. Mr. McNutt has found this to be the case, and his discovery is not original by any means.

zing me. I recently purchased two small greenhouses and was given five years in which to pay for them, making yearly payments. A contract was drawn up before a notary public and properly signed by both parties. The party who sold the place reserved a personal property, the hotbed sashes (about fifty) and flower pots, but nothing was mentioned about these in the contract. Now this party is taking a good many potted plants and wants about 100 feet of hose. (a) Isn't this hose considered as part of the watering apparatus and can I keep him from taking it? (b) Can I stop him from taking the potted plants, or are these considered as personal property? Any light that you can give me will be appreciated. T. W. B.—Ia.

The Review's attorney answers both questions in the negative. The oral reservation is of no effect. The written contract on which the parties have agreed is regarded as embodying their final agreement. The result is the same, however, since personal property will not pass unless covered by the description used.

(a) Ordinarily hose is personal property. Our buyer can not stop the seller from taking it unless exceptional facts are involved, such as its being permanently fastened.

(b) It is clear that the seller can retain the potted plants if they are standing on the ground or on benches. It is not so clear if they are sunk in the ground or in soil on benches which are permanently attached to the ground or buildings. In the latter case there is a close analogy, as far as the purpose of the annexor is concerned, to nursery trees which are held under Iowa law to pass to the purchaser as part of the real estate. There is the same intent to transplant in both cases, but the presence of the pots alters the character of the physical annexation to the soil and furnishes the ground for holding that the purchaser of a greenhouse gets no right to ordinary potted plants unless the contract expressly covers them.

Other highly technical questions might arise on contracts such as the one here in question and the saving effected by drawing the contract up "before a notary public" instead of having it drawn up by a lawyer is poor economy.

on the items. The customers' accounts are posted in the ledger the following morning. Each customer is represented by a separate ledger card. The charge or credit is entered and the card is put back in the drawer which is used for a file.

While debits and credits are being posted in the ledger (they are posted on separate runs), the amounts are accumulating in the machine, so that when the posting is finished totals for both the charges and credits for the day are obtained. By comparing the totals in the machine with the sum of the amounts on the sales slips and credit slips, which were obtained the evening before, a dependable proof of posting is secured.

The Accounting System.

A. J. McNutt has an interesting form of cash and expense distribution sheet, which is shown in the accompanying illustration. Every item of expense for the upkeep and maintenance of the store and greenhouse is entered in columns under the proper heading. The number of the check paying the expense and the date also are kept.

Totals of all the different items may be had at any time, so that Mr. McNutt can tell the exact amount of each item for any particular month or for the entire season.

The totals of all the credit items also are entered every day. Running totals of these amounts are carried, so that he knows the exact amount of cash received on account, cash sales and charge sales for any period of time.

The firm's statements are mailed on the first of the month. Duplicates of the sales slips for each customer are stapled to the back of the statement, like a bank's return of canceled checks. The statements are the first to get into the customers' hands at the beginning of the new month, which gives them a greater pulling power. The statement is made out directly from the ledger card, only the unpaid, unchecked items being listed. The correct total is printed at the bottom as soon as all the items are listed.

Accuracy Makes for Success.

Keeping books is considerable of a mystery to many florists. If accounting is not a mystery, it is a bore, or at best a tedious task. But it is of prime importance if the business is to be a success. Many a florist, continuing his daily activities firm in the belief that he is earning profits, suddenly has found himself near the rocks of bankruptcy because of ignorance of the real condition of his affairs.

There is no chance that the absence of accuracy in bookkeeping will ever be a cause for the failure of A. J. McNutt. As has been explained, there is no day upon which he cannot at once tell the financial condition of his business.

Many things enter into the success or failure of a florist. An accurate set of books will not, alone, make a success. But it will help to no small degree. Mr. McNutt has found this to be the case, and his discovery is not original by any means.

BOSTON'S OPEN AIR SHOW

A RECORD FOR AMERICA.

A Success Despite Hardships.

What is undoubtedly the most ambitious effort to stage a large open-air flower show in America opened on the grounds of the Wentworth Institute, Boston, June 1. Three acres are devoted to the tents and open-air displays. The tents alone cover a space over seven times as large as the various rooms at Horticultural hall. Work of preparation has been in progress for several months and some $20,000 was expended before the gates opened. Not since 1871, when the late H. H. Hunnewell made a rhododendron show in tents on Boston Common, has an open air show been held there. The late season, unfavorable weather and the war all conspired against the success of the exhibition, but the committee went manfully ahead and scored a big success.

Rhododendrons and Azaleas.

Two large tents are devoted to rhododendrons. All are planted out and green turf covers the area, so that all seem to be growing naturally. T. D. Hatfield, gardener for Walter Hunnewell, fills a tent 100x200 with a grand display of specimen plants, of which many are half hardy varieties. These will not be in good bloom for at least a week. Mr. Hatfield was awarded a gold medal for his collection. Another large tent contained a collection of 140 varieties of rhododendrons from J. Waterer Son & Crisp, Bagshot, England, and was awarded a gold medal. A gold medal also went to George T. Stewart, gardener to Mrs. Samuel C. Lawrence, for a pair of mammoth greenhouse rhododendrons, twelve to fourteen feet in height. These were grouped in the center of the Waterer tent.

The display of specimen plants of Azalea indica from Charles Sander, gardener to Prof. C. S. Sargent, filled a tent 100x200. These were in good bloom at the opening. Another tent contained quantities of large standard wistarias and large pyramidal trachelospermums from Professor Sargent. He also had a beautiful bed of seedling azaleas of the amcena and Hinodigiri type. For these Mr. Sander received a gold medal. Arranged below the big wistarias were quantities of specimen plants of Calceolaria Stewartii from Peter Arnott, gardener to E. S. Webster, and W. C. Rust, gardener to Mrs. C. G. Weld. Many of these were four feet in diameter. A number of large herbaceous calceolarias also were shown. Mr. Arnott received a silver medal for his calceolarias.

Roland's Roses.

The special rose tent was filled by Thomas Roland. He had wide borders running around the tent planted with baby ramblers, such as Ellen Poulson, Erna Teschendorff, Yvonne Rabier and others, dotted at intervals with standards. A trellis at the back was covered with ramblers. At the ends rustic bamboo houses with seats were erected and looked most effective. Broad gravel walks went around the tent between the side border and the central portion, where beds were cut in the lawn and planted with Ophelia and other hybrid teas, Mme. Edouard Herriot showing up particularly well. The rose tent was extremely attractive and much credit is due Mr. Roland for timing his plants so well under such unfavorable climatic conditions. He was awarded a gold medal.

Orchids the Feature.

The orchid tent contained a wealth of choice plants, the long, sloping banks being effective. This tent seemed to attract more visitors than any other; it far surpassed the display made at the Boston spring exhibition. Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., filled one side with a beautiful display containing over 100 varieties, charmingly arranged. Specimens of choice miltonias and brasso-cattleyas were well elevated to show their individuality. Some of the choicest varieties staged were: Brasso-cattleyas Maronæ, Empress of Russia, Thorntonii and Helen; Odontoglossums Armanvillierense, Wilckeanum, Bictonense and crispum; Cattleyas Keinastiana, Empress Frederick, Mossiae Reineckiana and intermedia alba; Epiphronitis Veitchii; Phalænopsis amabilis; Miltonias Rœzlii and vexillaria; Vandas tricolor, suavis and teres; Cypripedium Maudiae and some choice læliocattleyas, and no less than seventeen varieties of dendrobies. The exhibit was awarded a gold medal.

P. Edwards, gardener to Arthur N. Cooley, Pittsfield, Mass., had a wonderfully choice collection of "beautifully grown specimens. No such odontoglossums and odontiodas had ever been staged in Boston. Some of the gems in this grand collection were: Odontoglossum ardentissimum Zenith, with crimson flowers; crispum Moonbeam, crispum Xanthodes, Charlesworthii, pure white; crispo-Harryanum with fifty-two flowers; artemis, crispum Princess Mary; Odontiodas Gladys, Charlesworthii, Chanticleer, Brewii, Colmaniae and Vuylstekeae with ninety-two flowers on a spike; the pure white Cattleya Mossiae Wagneri nivalis; Brasso-lælia-cattleya Veitchii splendens, Læliocattleyas Aphrodite grandis, Mrs. Temple Domus and Canhamiana alba. The group was awarded a gold medal.

Donald McKenzie, gardener to E. B. Dane, staged a fine group. Included were fine masdevallias, odontoglossums, miltonias, Cypripedium Lawrenceanum, Hyeaenum and Maudiae; Phalænopsis amabilis and Rimestadiana; Brasso-cattleya Veitchii and Warneri Exquisite and some fine forms of Cattleya Mossiae. He was awarded a gold medal.

W. C. Rust, gardener to Mrs. C. G. Weld, received a silver medal for a nice group containing some fine miltonias, cattleyas and brassias. F. J. Dolansky received a silver medal for a nice group of cattleyas, miltonias and odontoglossums. A similar award went to W. N. Craig, gardener at Faulkner Farm, for a group of cattleyas, Lælia purpurata and selenipediums.

W. H. Colby, gardener to E. A. Clark, had some splendid miltonias and Henry Stewart, gardener to Miss Cornelia Warren, a number of big specimens of Oncidium flexuosum. J. T. Butterworth staged a choice group, some of his best plants being Cattleya Mossiae Reinecki- ana var. Mrs. Butterworth, C. intermedia alba, Cymbidium Lowianum concolor, Cypripedium Olivia, Miltonia Bleuana and Dendrobium Jamesianum.

Other exhibits in the tents included a group of Statice Suworowii from W. N. Craig, group of new astilbes in variety from Mount Desert Nurseries and large specimens of Petunia Bar Harbor Beauty from Henry Eaton, gardener for R. M. Saltonstall.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

The most imposing open-air display was the rock and water garden of R. & J. Farquhar & Co. This was quite extensive and its construction and planting took several months. There was about 100 feet of waterway spanned by a rustic bridge. In the rock garden were large numbers of rock and alpine plants, in addition to hardy azaleas, eremuri, Lilium regale and numerous evergreens. The display was awarded a gold medal. Messrs. Farquhar also had a bed of the new Chinese conifers.

William Sim planted a large bed with his special strain of pansies. Other beds contained Canterbury bells, hydrangeas, standard geraniums, etc. The Blue Hill Nurseries received a gold medal for a comprehensive collection of conifers in 124 varieties, the cypresses, firs, spruces and other families being arranged in groups. Philip L. Carbone had a fine display of garden accessories arranged tastefully among evergreens. Henry Penn had a similar display. The North Shore Ferneries had a fine collection of garden furniture.

Will Continue Two Weeks.

The exhibition will continue for at least two weeks and large arc lights give it a charming effect at night. New exhibits are promised from day to day. On the opening day the weather was showery, but 1,500 tickets were sold at $5 each, the proceeds being for the Red Cross. The attendance has been good on succeeding days and the exhibition promises to be a great success. James Wheeler made an efficient manager and in recognition of his services the exhibition committee awarded him a well merited gold medal.

THE HARDY SNAPDRAGONS.

Deserve More Attention.

Among the principal genera of florists' flowering plants, such as alyssums, asters, centaureas, chrysanthemums, dianthus, sweet peas, iberis, cinerarias, helianthus, poppies, verbenas and cheiranthus, we find the annual as well as the perennial type in each genus. It follows that either one or the other was created first, and if either the annual or the perennial is not in cultivation, it is still to be created, or it has been lost in the centuries past and is extinct or may be re-created in time to come. Which one of the two types was originated first we must leave to the scientists to determine; most likely the first was the annual. We must give the credit for perpetuating the annuals, as well as the perennials, to our flower-loving ancestors of the past centuries and, in more recent times, to the seedsmen, principally to those of Europe. Few florists stop to gather seeds; that part of the work is left to the seed grower.

For Border and Rock Garden.

Though the snapdragon has met with increasing favor during the last few years, the perennial forms of it appear to have been neglected and have not been brought to the front as they should have been. It is not generally known that there are two classes of snapdragons and that one is annual, while the other, known as sempervirens, is perennial and endures the most severe winters without cover. As a rock plant it has few equals. The florist can make a good showing with the different varieties of snapdragons now in the market, but the hardy kind is adapted to fill a special demand. It should be advertised for use in rock gardens and hardy borders and should be quoted for such purposes in nursery and seed catalogues. Many people who do not care particularly for snapdragons as cut flowers would plant them in their hardy borders and rock gardens, because they are bright and showy and last more than one season.

Propagation and Culture.

The flowers of the hardy kind are as large as those of the average greenhouse snapdragon, and in the hands of the expert grower all kinds and colors will at length be developed. They are good for cutting and have better lasting qualities than many well known hardy perennials, such as the Canterbury bell, foxglove, iris, etc.

They are more easily propagated than the phlox and flowers from seed are true to color. Now is a good time to plant them out. They will make good-sized plants by fall and some of them should be taken up then, or the cuttings should be taken early in spring, as soon as the shoots are long enough, using the soft wood, as with other snapdragons.

ana var. Mrs. Butterworth, C. intermedia alba, Cymbidium Lowianum concolor, Cypripedium Olivia, Miltonia Bleuana and Dendrobium Jamesianum.

Other exhibits in the tents included a group of Statice Suworowii from W. N. Craig, group of new astilbes in variety from Mount Desert Nurseries and large specimens of Petunia Bar Harbor Beauty from Henry Eaton, gardener for R. M. Saltonstall.

Miscellaneous Exhibits.

The most imposing open-air display was the rock and water garden of R. & J. Farquhar & Co. This was quite extensive and its construction and planting took several months. There was about 100 feet of waterway spanned by a rustic bridge. In the rock garden were large numbers of rock and alpine plants, in addition to hardy azaleas, cremuri, Lilium regale and numerous evergreens. The display was awarded a gold medal. Messrs. Farquhar also had a bed of the new Chinese conifers.

William Sim planted a large bed with his special strain of pansies. Other beds contained Canterbury bells, hydrangeas, standard geraniums, etc. The Blue Hill Nurseries received a gold medal for a comprehensive collection of conifers in 124 varieties, the cypresses, firs, spruces and other families being arranged in groups. Philip L. Carbone had a fine display of garden accessories arranged tastefully among evergreens. Henry Penn had a similar display. The North Shore Ferneries had a fine collection of garden furniture.

Will Continue Two Weeks.

The exhibition will continue for at least two weeks and large arc lights give it a charming effect at night. New exhibits are promised from day to day. On the opening day the weather was showery, but 1,500 tickets were sold at $5 each, the proceeds being for the Red Cross. The attendance has been good on succeeding days and the exhibition promises to be a great success. James Wheeler made an efficient manager and in recognition of his services the exhibition committee awarded him a well merited gold medal.

THE HARDY SNAPDRAGONS.

Deserve More Attention.

Among the principal genera of florists' flowering plants, such as alyssums, asters, centaureas, chrysanthemums, dianthus, sweet peas, iberis, cinerarias, helianthus, poppies, verbenas and cheiranthus, we find the annual as well as the perennial type in each genus. It follows that either one or the other was created first, and if either the annual or the perennial is not in cultivation, it is still to be created, or it has been lost in the centuries past and is extinct or may be recreated in time to come. Which one of the two types was originated first we must leave to the scientists to determine; most likely the first was the annual. We must give the credit for perpetuating the annuals, as well as the perennials, to our flower-loving ancestors of the past centuries and, in more recent times, to the seedsmen, principally to those of Europe. Few florists stop to gather seeds; that part of the work is left to the seed grower.

For Border and Rock Garden.

Though the snapdragon has met with increasing favor during the last few years, the perennial forms of it appear to have been neglected and have not been brought to the front as they should have been. It is not generally known that there are two classes of snapdragons and that one is annual, while the other, known as sempervirens, is perennial and endures the most severe winters without cover. As a rock plant it has few equals. The florist can make a good showing with the different varieties of snapdragons now in the market, but the hardy kind is adapted to fill a special demand. It should be advertised for use in rock gardens and hardy borders and should be quoted for such purposes in nursery and seed catalogues. Many people who do not care particularly for snapdragons as cut flowers would plant them in their hardy borders and rock gardens, because they are bright and showy and last more than one season.

Propagation and Culture.

The flowers of the hardy kind are as large as those of the average greenhouse snapdragon, and in the hands of the expert grower all kinds and colors will at length be developed. They are good for cutting and have better lasting qualities than many well known hardy perennials, such as the Canterbury bell, foxglove, iris, etc.

They are more easily propagated than the phlox and flowers from seed are true to color. Now is a good time to plant them out. They will make good-sized plants by fall and some of them should be taken up then, or the cuttings should be taken early in spring, as soon as the shoots are long enough, using the soft wood, as with other snapdragons.

OUR ALIBI ESTABLISHED

RECITING THE FACTS.

Why Blame the Trade?

On page 23 of The Review for May 17, you printed an article from Prof. S. B. Fracker, of Wisconsin, under the caption "Our Alibi Is Established," in which the correspondent seeks to prove that The Review was mistaken in stating that the insect pests and plant diseases which afflict our forests and crops were not imported on commercial shipments to nurserymen and florists. But the correspondent really proves your case; he confirms your "alibi." What are the facts with regard to the pests given?

First, the learned professor mentions the chestnut bark disease, and tells us it was introduced from Asia by a Chicago nursery firm. But, according to the best authorities, it was first discovered at Queens, N. Y., and its origin was unknown. Anyway, no commercial shipments of nursery stock come from Asia.

Second is the gypsy moth, which, however, was not introduced by a nurseryman or florist, but by a professor, an entomologist. And it should be noted here that the present agitation for an embargo on horticultural importations comes only from a small group of entomologists and forestry men.

Third on the list is the brown-tail moth, but the best authorities state that its origin is unknown, so why blame the nurserymen and florists? The way the last two pests have been allowed to spread in the New England states is certainly no credit to our large force of entomologists and inspectors, who are maintained at public expense.

The Pine Blister Rust.

Fourth is the white pine blister rust. For this pest we must blame the Germans and the forestry men, for it was imported on shipments of pines from firms near Halstenbek, Germany, that produce stock only for forestry purposes. If any nurseryman ever bought this class of stock it was because it was misrepresented to him, for it is quite unsuitable.

On the pine-shoot moth I have no authoritative information, but all commercial varieties of pines have been under quarantine during the last five years, except to the Department of Agriculture.

The correspondent frankly states that the origin of the citrus canker is unknown. All citrus plants also have been under quarantine for some years from all foreign sources. The origin of the red scale is also unknown. The San Jose scale came from Japan, from which country practically no commercial shipments of nursery stock are received.

But why continue? Does not the worthy professor know that practically all commercial nursery stock shipments come from Europe, where are the cleanest nurseries in the world; that each nursery is under the closest inspection and that each shipment is most carefully inspected by trained men at the shipping point and again at its destination, and that if any lonely bug should smuggle its way in, it is a known one and the method of handling it also is known? The contention of the trade is that any pests that have been imported have come from remote parts of the world, from which no commercial shipments come.

Experts Often Mistaken.

We are reminded of the reports made to Washington of the discovery of insect pests on shipments. Of course, if men are hired to find things, and their living depends on finding them, they usually do find them. How many times have the calluses at the base of Manetti cuttings been mistaken for crown gall or root knot by overzealous inspectors, or the fibrous roots of French-grown apple seedlings for hairy root? Given a long scientific name, these things look really vicious. Yet they are no more harmful to the vitality of a tree than a wart on his hand is to a man.

An entomologist's leanings should be destructive only as applied to bugs and helpful and constructive as applied to business. His job is to kill bugs, not business. In the legitimate field of the entomologists every nurseryman and florist is only too happy to cooperate, since his existence depends upon keeping his stock absolutely clean. Why blame the nurserymen or florists for all the insect pests and plant diseases that affect our forests and crops? Why do not the entomologists cooperate with our nurserymen and florists instead of advocating panicky and ill-considered laws that, if passed, would ruin trade without lessening to any appreciable degree the damage done by pests to our vegetation?

CULTURAL NOTES FOR JUNE.

Disbudding and Thrips.

The late spring, with its cool weather, has not been an unmixed evil by any means. While all vegetation is from two to three weeks behind schedule time, and while some of the flowers we usually count on having for Memorial day will not be in for some time, these losses perhaps will be more than offset by the benefit of the cool weather to the indoor crops.

The carnations are now as good as they were early in March, and with proper care should continue fine throughout this month. If you were a little forehanded, you went over your blooming carnations before the spring rush started and disbudded everything closely. In that case you will be cutting nice stock now, and a few hours now and then will suffice to keep the plants disbudded until the season is over. Spraying or fumigation, too, should not be neglected, no matter how busy you are. These are operations one is apt to let slip by during the rush of spring work, simply because the need of them is not so apparent as some other things, until the damage has been done. The weather until now has been ideal for keeping thrips in check, but unless you have continued to apply preventives, thrips will increase rapidly as soon as warm weather sets in, and they can ruin a crop of blooms in short order.

Quality in June Worth While.

The same is true as regards the disbudding. One does not notice the need of disbudding until one cuts sprays of small, button-like blooms, and then it is too late to increase the size to any extent by removing the half-grown buds. There is no time when quality counts more than during the month of June. With thousands of inferior blooms coming into the market, it will pay handsomely the grower who has made an effort to preserve his quality. You perhaps will find here and there a bed that will not pay for the necessary watering and care from now on. If so, better discontinue such beds and concentrate your efforts on the plants which carry a fair crop of buds.

If you mulched any of these beds weeks ago, the plants will appreciate a little food occasionally, to help keep up the size of the blooms. You are giving the plants much water, and thereby leaching out the soil and the manure you applied as mulch, which makes it necessary to replenish the food by means of either liquid manure or a top-dressing. We prefer the latter method. If you have on hand a balanced carnation fertilizer, use it in moderate doses every two or three weeks. In the absence of this, mix some sheep manure and finely ground bone, using four parts of the manure to one part of the other. Sprinkle it over the surface and water it in.

Formula for Shading Mixture.

A little shade on the glass will prevent the pinks from bleaching out. Do not make the shade too heavy, as you merely want to break the extreme heat. You will find whiting preferable to slaked lime for this purpose. Mix the whiting and water to the consistency of thick cream. Then dilute it to the desired state and mix a 3-inch potful of linseed oil with each three gallons. We spray this on the outside with a hand syringe, a method we find quite satisfactory. After a little practice you will be able to distribute it evenly.

Having decided to discontinue a bed, tear out the plants to prevent insects from breeding. Whether or not you take the soil out immediately does not matter a great deal, unless the bed or bench needs repairing. It will be better for the bench to allow the soil to dry on it, than to allow the sun to beat on the bare boards for several weeks.

STORM NOTES.

Additional Losses by Hail.

The wind storm of May 26 appears to have done no damage beyond that recorded in The Review for May 31. A number of additional losses by the hail storms of May 27 have been reported, however. None of these losses were large, but they afford reason for prompt action in the matter of joining the Florists' Hail Association:

Seymour, Ind.

The Seymour Greenhouses, owned by M. A. Barrick, of Seymour, Ind., were severely damaged by the hail storm which visited that section of Indiana May 27. Practically all the glass on the north side of the range of greenhouses was destroyed, while the stock was badly cut up by falling glass. The loss is estimated at $1,000 and is covered by insurance. The loss in stock greatly interfered with Mr. Barrick's Memorial day business.

Owensboro, Ky.

The Nanz Floral Co. had a heavy hail storm May 27, breaking about 600 lights. Heavy rain and wind did much damage to stock. It was the heaviest hail ever seen here. The loss is covered by insurance.

Jamestown, O.

The establishment of H. C. Fenker, three-quarters of a mile east of town on the Jeffersonville pike, was hit by hail May 27, the loss on glass being about $200. There also was some damage to stock and the necessity of clearing up the wreckage and making repairs in the midst of the Memorial day rush caused a further loss, but the sales for Memorial day nevertheless established a new record.

Mattoon, Ill.

The loss of A. D. King in the cyclone May 26 is estimated at $30,000 and Mr. King has not decided to rebuild; he thinks of buying elsewhere if he can find a suitable opportunity. The range destroyed consisted of fifteen houses containing 50,000 feet of glass. In five minutes the entire place was demolished and lay flat on the ground. He had insurance.

Wenona, Ill.

There was a freak storm across eastern Illinois, striking Streator and Kankakee during the night of June 5, but the only damage reported is to the greenhouses of William Metzger, at Wenona, which were hit by high wind. Rainfall of an inch or more in a few minutes caused many losses on stock outdoors.

VINCAS DOING POORLY.

I am sending you a sample of my vincas and would like to have you tell me what is the matter with them.

WHO'S WHO IN THE TRADE—AND WHY

HAROLD B. KENNICOTT.

WITH the death of E. E. Pieser, who since the demise of Flint Kennicott had been managing the affairs of Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, Harold B. Kennicott was called on to continue the business as its president. All the Pieser interests were bought, thus bringing the business back into the Kennicott family. Since that day the history of the company has been one of progress, the latest step being removal to the excellently equipped new store at 174 North Wabash avenue. The secret of the success of the company, which is the oldest wholesale florist in Chicago, is to be found in the qualities which mark its present president—progressiveness tempered with conservatism and a keen appreciation of business ethics.

My soil is a heavy loam, and this year I used a little mixture of steamed bone. I discovered eggs of some insect on the back of the leaves. Could the steamed bone have brought a small worm into the soil? Would you advise the use of this fertilizer for any other plants except geraniums? Up to the present year we have used a fine vegetable fertilizer and never had this trouble.

A. J. W.—O.

I have not tried steamed bone for vincas, but I do not see how it could harm your plants, unless too much was used. I am afraid you have made too lavish use of it. If used at the rate of a 4-inch potful to a bushel of soil, it should give good results with vincas as well as geraniums, callas and other plants I might name. I have not heard of the bone breeding worms in the soil, but an excessive quantity, causing sourness of the soil, might bring about such a result. I failed to find any eggs of insects on the leaves received. With all due respect to bone and vegetable fertilizers, I think some well decayed cow or horse manure would be better for vincas. At least, I find it never fails to give us excellent plants.

Smilax.

While not grown to anything like the extent of a generation ago, there appears to be some return of smilax to favor. The strings realize good prices. It hardly pays to carry plants over in beds a second year; it is far better to give the young plants a generous soil in which to grow. Planting should be done this month if you want good Thanksgiving and Christmas strings, and get strings up to the plants as soon as you possibly can after planting. Once the growths become entangled it is a thankless task to attempt to do anything with them. You need not grow smilax in an up-to-date house; it will thrive just as well in one of the old, heavy-timbered type in which flowers do not succeed.

Asparagus Sprengeri.

With bedding stock gradually getting out of the way, you probably now can find time to plant out a batch of Asparagus Sprengeri. In spite of all the houses growing this useful green, it never seems to be much overdone and there are few retail country florists who are fortunate enough to produce all they need. A. Sprengeri needs a strong and fairly deep soil, as it makes many fleshy, hungry roots. For this reason it succeeds better in a solid bed with a foot of soil than in a raised bench with less than half that depth, although I would not say that fine grass cannot be grown in benches. Place the plants 12x12 inches apart, and if you have no bench or bed for them use some roomy baskets, preferably of galvanized wire, and hang them from the roof of a house which is not kept too warm and shady.

Dahlias.

Differences of opinion exist, and probably always will, on the question of early or late planting of dahlias. My own experience has been that a late planting, sometime during the first half of June, gives far better results than an early setting out, no matter whether green plants started from cuttings or dry roots are used. Early planted dahlias may flower in July and August, but run out before the real, natural dahlia season arrives in September. By planting late the danger of cutworm attacks is reduced and plants can be depended upon to make a quick and steady growth. They will flower profusely until frost.

Geranium Stock.

The bedding plant trade is extremely late this year on account of the abnormally cold and backward season. Some calendar writers have felt uncertain whether to class May as a spring or summer month. The weather vouchsafed us in 1917 would hardly fit it for either class, but it would qualify rather well for winter. It has passed, however, and June seems likely to deal more kindly with us.

Tastes vary with regard to geraniums. Once upon a time scarlets filled the entire center of the stage; later, about the whole platform; then the pinks asserted themselves and are still much in favor. Note what color your customers call for most and be sure to reserve a liberal lot of stock plants to plant out in the field. If you chance to be short of the colors needed, it is better to try to buy some stock now and plant it out in the field, so that you can have a good crop of cuttings in the fall.

Adiantums.

Adiantums now will be making a luxuriant lot of fronds and will need spacing apart from time to time. They must have a liberal water supply and when well potbound should be given weak liquid manure once a week, in addition. The fronds while young are quite tender and easily scorched. Therefore see that the glass is shaded sufficiently to prevent this. Where snails are troublesome, dust a little air-slaked lime or fine salt between the pots and place some cabbage leaves or scooped out potatoes for them. Sowbugs sometimes are troublesome and many can be captured in the potatoes. If the greenhouses are unsuitable for fern culture in summer and you have a good coldframe, there can be no better place for maidenhair and other ferns. Dig the soil out of the frame to a suitable depth, spread a layer of fine coal ashes at the bottom and be sure the glass is well shaded. Plants may be elevated if necessary on pots or other supports.

Christmas Cinerarias.

There are many inquiries each year about how to have cinerarias in flower for the holidays, and in practically every case the growers have sown seed in August, or even later. It is utterly impossible to flower cinerarias in four months, but if a sowing is made now in a shallow pan or flat, and the plants are kept growing right along and not subjected to any checks, they can be had in flower for Christmas. They are bulky-growing plants, must have as cool treatment as possible at all times, need constant spraying or fumigation to insure cleanliness and a liberal soil to grow in; but when given these conditions there is nothing difficult in their culture and they form a nice addition to our list of holiday plants.

INVESTIGATING DISEASES OF THE ROSE

THE investigations covered more or less briefly in this report were begun August 1, 1916. During the first four months much time was spent in visiting rose plantings in northeastern United States, making a survey of diseases. This seemed desirable in order to acquaint us with the various diseases, together with their range and the extent of injury caused by them in this country. With these facts in mind, suitable plants and materials have been collected for experiments now under way which will prove of the greatest value to growers of roses.

Old Diseases.

The survey and correspondence with growers has shown the most important rose diseases, in order of importance, to be (1) black spot, (2) mildew, (3) crown gall, (4) stem canker, (5) Phyllosticta leaf spot, (6) rust, (7) bud rot, (8) other leaf spots. Practically all of these diseases are always present and take from the growers yearly tolls of surprising magnitude. It is not uncommon to find houses with all the plants completely defoliated by black spot. It is unnecessary to mention the damage done by mildew, while there is an ever-increasing demand for information relating to crown gall, stem canker, rust and bud rot. Unfortunately, little is known regarding the control of most of these diseases and many points remain to be investigated concerning the control of such common and well-known diseases as black spot and mildew.

A New Disease.

A new, and what appears to be one of the most important diseases of the rose, has been observed by the writer in visits to rose houses. We are calling it the crown canker. Specimens have been sent by growers from many parts of eastern United States and from as far west as Missouri. It was first observed by the writer in September, 1916, but talks with growers indicate that the disease has been present for possibly four or five years. All varieties seem to be susceptible to the disease. The plant is attacked just below the surface of the soil and although the disease advances slowly, the death of the plant is sure, with an ever-decreasing number and quality of flowers.

This disease, which has never been described, is considered of such importance that a large part of the writer's time is being devoted to a study of the life history of the causal fungus and the development of a method of control. Several large growers have stated that unless help is obtained they will be forced out of business.

Will Soon Be Distributed.

With the disease already known to be present in the houses of ten large growers, it is safe to assume that other growers have plants similarly affected and that the disease will be widely distributed and increase rapidly in importance. Steps must be taken immediately to control this disease. Not only is it important that growers who already have the disease shall be furnished with control methods, but it is even of greater importance that the method of dissemination of the fungus be worked out in order that the further spread of the disease be checked.

What appear to be other new diseases than the one mentioned above have been brought to the writer's attention, but too little progress has yet been made in this investigation to give definite statements at this time.

Work on Leaf Diseases.

The following investigations are under way:

(a.) Black spot. It is planned to conduct extensive experiments for the control of this disease during the coming season. Plants at the Cornell test garden and at the nursery of Chase Bros., Honeoye Falls, N. Y., will be treated with various fungicides along the lines of recent developments in plant disease control. One of the most important fungicides to be tried is that of finely ground sulphur applied in the form of dust. Suitable plants have been obtained and are now growing in the greenhouse at Cornell for similar experiments for the control of black spot under glass.

(b.) Mildew. Experiments for the control of mildew through the use of finely ground sulphur used as a dust on both indoor and outdoor roses.

(c.) Phyllosticta leafspot. A study of the life history of the causal organism is now being made. This is one of the most important leaf-spot diseases of ramblers and methods of control will be tried during the coming season.

Work on Root Diseases.

(d.) Crown gall. Some 200 healthy plants have been obtained to be inoculated with bacteria causing this disease. These plants will be grown to determine the effect of the disease upon the plant, there being a divergence of opinion as to just how much damage is done.

(e.) The new root or crown disease, crown canker. Extensive experiments for the control of this disease are now under way. It is probable that the fungus lives in the soil and that successful treatments will be along the line of soil sterilization and the practice of sanitation in the houses. Some 300 rose plants have been obtained and are now growing in the greenhouses at Cornell for these experiments. Much time is being spent in working out the life history of the causal organism, as such information is essential for a comprehensive study of control methods.

(f.) Fungi and bacteria causing other diseases of roses are being studied in culture. These organisms have been isolated from diseased material obtained from growers. Their pathogenicity will be tested and control experiments conducted where the organisms prove parasitic and the importance of the disease warrants such action.

Can't Stop Now.

It will be seen from the above statements that while there is but little yet to report in the line of results in control, still considerable progress has been made and the foundation laid for experiments for the control of diseases which are of extreme importance to the growers of roses. There is every reason to expect that another year's work will bring results upon which proved and definite advice may be furnished the growers for the solution of their rose-disease problems. It is hardly necessary to add

Statement by Rose Society's Secretary

Last year, in response to a letter from President Pennock, of the American Rose Society, thirty-two florists generously contributed toward the investigations in rose diseases which were carried on by Dr. L. M. Massey, of the Department of Plant Pathology, at Cornell University. Dr. Massey has put in considerable work on this problem during the last year and has several lines of investigation well under way. It is the feeling of the officers of the American Rose Society that Dr. Massey should continue his work during the coming year, as was outlined in the project of a year ago. At that time it was stated that it was expected the investigation would be on a two-year agreement. Last year the American Rose Society pledged itself to support Dr. Massey while in the field one-fourth of the time, and that the cost would not exceed $1,000, of which sum $500 the first year and $250 the second year would be for travelling and other special expenses. The rest of the expenses of the investigation have been borne by Cornell University.

Dr. Massey carries on the major part of the outside work during his vacation periods, when he is free from college duties, and can visit commercial ranges. Laboratory research is carried on during the college year.

On this page there appears a summary of a preliminary report of Dr. Massey's work. It will be understood from the nature of the project that definite results cannot be given in so short a time. It seems, however, that Dr. Massey's work during the last year has opened up some wonderfully valuable lines of investigation, which should be continued.

It is hoped that a large number of men interested in rose growing, who did not contribute to the work last year, may feel interested to do their part this year. All subscriptions should be sent to E. A. White, secretary, American Rose Society, Ithaca, N. Y.

The accompanying illustration represents seven large designs made by Schmaus Bros., Paducah, Ky., for the unveiling of the Confederate monument at Shiloh battlefield, Pittsburg Landing, Tenn. The battle flag, 50x50 inches, was a perfect reproduction of the flag of the Confederacy, and the excellence of all of this work commanded the attention of thousands of the people present. Mrs. Roy W. McKinney, of Paducah, Ky., who appears in the picture, is the treasurer of the fund for the erection of the monument by the Daughters of the Confederacy.

INVESTIGATING DISEASES OF THE ROSE

THE investigations covered more or less briefly in this report were begun August 1, 1916. During the first four months much time was spent in visiting rose plantings in northeastern United States, making a survey of diseases. This seemed desirable in order to acquaint us with the various diseases, together with their range and the extent of injury caused by them in this country. With these facts in mind, suitable plants and materials have been collected for experiments now under way which will prove of the greatest value to growers of roses.

Old Diseases.

The survey and correspondence with growers has shown the most important rose diseases, in order of importance, to be (1) black spot, (2) mildew, (3) crown gall, (4) stem canker, (5) Phyllosticta leaf spot, (6) rust, (7) bud rot, (8) other leaf spots. Practically all of these diseases are always present and take from the growers yearly tolls of surprising magnitude. It is not uncommon to find houses with all the plants completely defoliated by black spot. It is unnecessary to mention the damage done by mildew, while there is an ever-increasing demand for information relating to crown gall, stem canker, rust and bud rot. Unfortunately, little is known regarding the control of most of these diseases and many points remain to be investigated concerning the control of such common and well-known diseases as black spot and mildew.

A New Disease.

A new, and what appears to be one of the most important diseases of the rose, has been observed by the writer in visits to rose houses. We are calling it the crown canker. Specimens have been sent by growers from many parts of eastern United States and from as far west as Missouri. It was first observed by the writer in September, 1916, but talks with growers indicate that the disease has been present for possibly four or five years. All varieties seem to be susceptible to the disease. The plant is attacked just below the surface of the soil and although the disease advances slowly, the death of the plant is sure, with an ever-decreasing number and quality of flowers.

This disease, which has never been described, is considered of such importance that a large part of the writer's time is being devoted to a study of the life history of the causal fungus and the development of a method of control. Several large growers have stated that unless help is obtained they will be forced out of business.

Will Soon Be Distributed.

With the disease already known to be present in the houses of ten large growers, it is safe to assume that other growers have plants similarly affected and that the disease will be widely distributed and increase rapidly in importance. Steps must be taken immediately to control this disease. Not only is it important that growers who already have the disease shall be furnished with control methods, but it is even of greater importance that the method of dissemination of the fungus be worked out in order that the further spread of the disease be checked.

What appear to be other new diseases than the one mentioned above have been brought to the writer's attention, but too little progress has yet been made in this investigation to give definite statements at this time.

Work on Leaf Diseases.

The following investigations are under way:

(a.) Black spot. It is planned to conduct extensive experiments for the control of this disease during the coming season. Plants at the Cornell test garden and at the nursery of Chase Bros., Honeoye Falls, N. Y., will be treated with various fungicides along the lines of recent developments in plant disease control. One of the most important fungicides to be tried is that of finely ground sulphur applied in the form of dust. Suitable plants have been obtained and are now growing in the greenhouse at Cornell for similar experiments for the control of black spot under glass.

(b.) Mildew. Experiments for the control of mildew through the use of finely ground sulphur used as a dust on both indoor and outdoor roses.

(c.) Phyllosticta leafspot. A study of the life history of the causal organism is now being made. This is one of the most important leaf-spot diseases of ramblers and methods of control will be tried during the coming season.

Work on Root Diseases.

(d.) Crown gall. Some 200 healthy plants have been obtained to be inoculated with bacteria causing this disease. These plants will be grown to determine the effect of the disease upon the plant, there being a divergence of opinion as to just how much damage is done.

(e.) The new root or crown disease, crown canker. Extensive experiments for the control of this disease are now under way. It is probable that the fungus lives in the soil and that successful treatments will be along the line of soil sterilization and the practice of sanitation in the houses. Some 300 rose plants have been obtained and are now growing in the greenhouses at Cornell for these experiments. Much time is being spent in working out the life history of the causal organism, as such information is essential for a comprehensive study of control methods.

(f.) Fungi and bacteria causing other diseases of roses are being studied in culture. These organisms have been isolated from diseased material obtained from growers. Their pathogenicity will be tested and control experiments conducted where the organisms prove parasitic and the importance of the disease warrants such action.

Can't Stop Now.

It will be seen from the above statements that while there is but little yet to report in the line of results in control, still considerable progress has been made and the foundation laid for experiments for the control of diseases which are of extreme importance to the growers of roses. There is every reason to expect that another year's work will bring results upon which proved and definite advice may be furnished the growers for the solution of their rose-disease problems. It is hardly necessary to add

Statement by Rose Society's Secretary

Last year, in response to a letter from President Pennock, of the American Rose Society, thirty-two florists generously contributed toward the investigations in rose diseases which were carried on by Dr. L. M. Massey, of the Department of Plant Pathology, at Cornell University. Dr. Massey has put in considerable work on this problem during the last year and has several lines of investigation well under way. It is the feeling of the officers of the American Rose Society that Dr. Massey should continue his work during the coming year, as was outlined in the project of a year ago. At that time it was stated that it was expected the investigation would be on a two-year agreement. Last year the American Rose Society pledged itself to support Dr. Massey while in the field one-fourth of the time, and that the cost would not exceed $1,000, of which sum $500 the first year and $250 the second year would be for traveling and other special expenses. The rest of the expenses of the investigation have been borne by Cornell University.

Dr. Massey carries on the major part of the outside work during his vacation periods, when he is free from college duties, and can visit commercial ranges. Laboratory research is carried on during the college year.

On this page there appears a summary of a preliminary report of Dr. Massey's work. It will be understood from the nature of the project that definite results cannot be given in so short a time. It seems, however, that Dr. Massey's work during the last year has opened up some wonderfully valuable lines of investigation, which should be continued.

It is hoped that a large number of men interested in rose growing, who did not contribute to the work last year, may feel interested to do their part this year. All subscriptions should be sent to E. A. White, secretary, American Rose Society, Ithaca, N. Y.

that it is essential that the work be continued, for should it be dropped at this point, the work already done will amount to little. L. M. Massey.

BALTIMORE'S PIONEER.

Samuel Feast Started in 1832.

This week I am going to write about the first florists' business our city ever knew. It was far back in 1832 when a young Englishman, after serving his time in Edinburgh, Scotland, not only as a florist but also as a nurseryman, came to Baltimore. Samuel Feast considered Baltimore a promising field for his enterprise, so on what is now the site of Harlem park he started the first florists' and nursery business of our city and laid the foundation of what now for three generations has been the business of Samuel Feast & Sons. For eighty-five years this concern has enjoyed the confidence and patronage of Baltimore's best people. The business has grown up with the city.

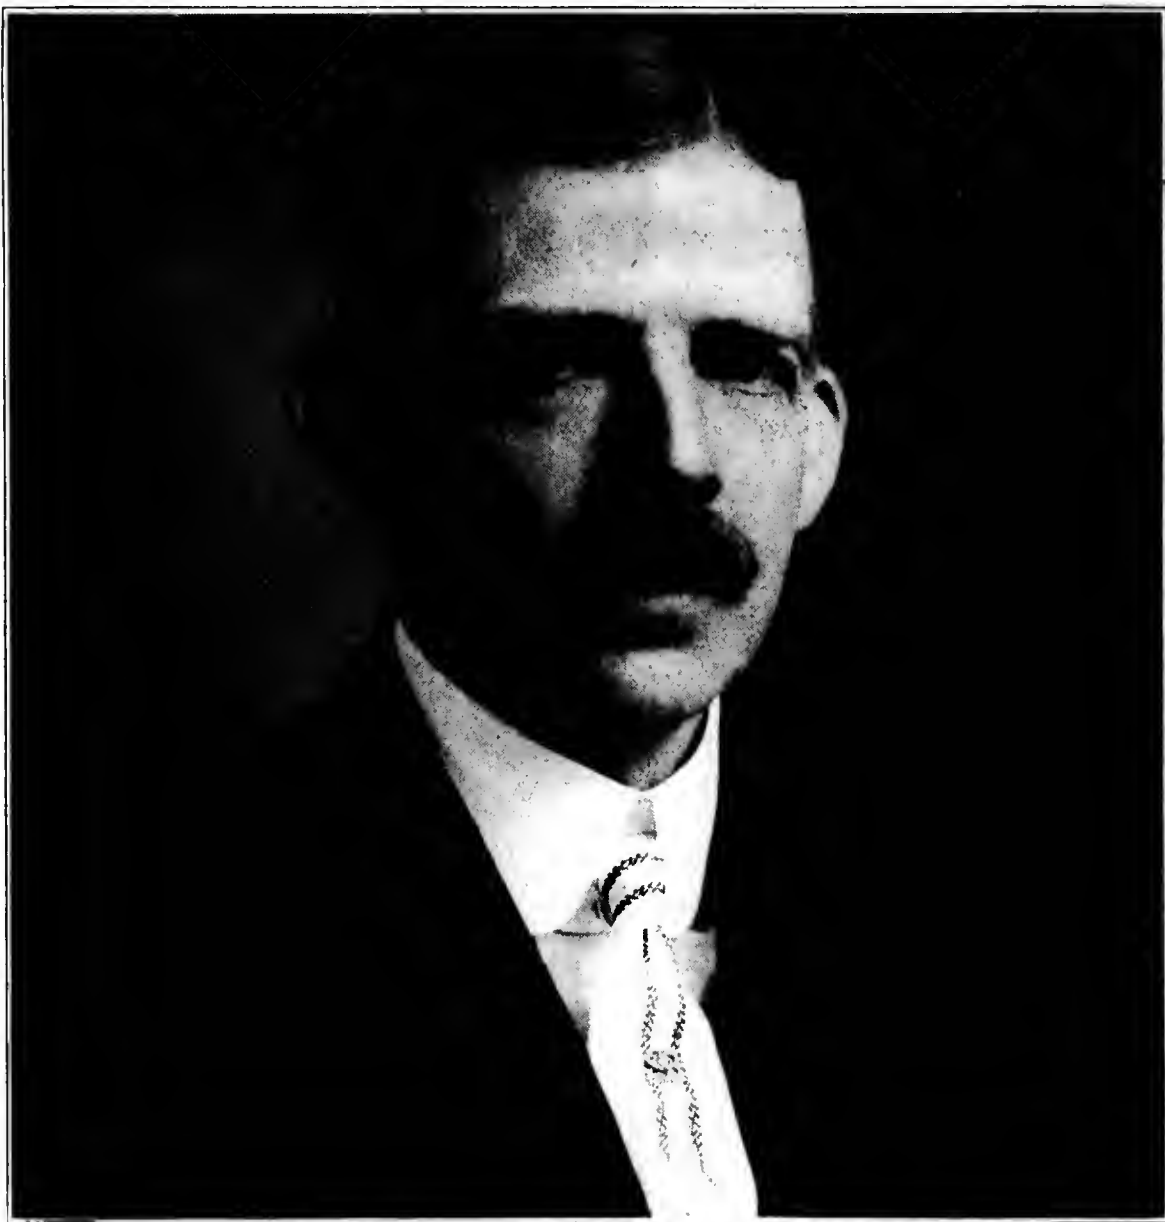

Starting in a small way, the founder, whose undeviating policy was fair dealing and good merchandise, gradually built up a business that about 1855 was ready to admit his two sons, Samuel, Jr., and John Edward Feast. Besides the nurseries and gardens they had a store, in the same block in which they are now situated, at the northeast corner of Charles and Saratoga streets. With young blood the business continued to grow and expand, and in 1878, when the establishment demanded more help, a young lady was engaged. That lady, now Mrs. F. D. Hill, after thirty-nine years of experience, is still one of the important units of the store of Feast & Sons.

In those days the city was growing toward the west, much as today it is going toward the north. The greenhouses and nursery had to give way before the steady growth, and a new location was secured on Frederick road and Beechfield avenue. After getting this place established, the only survivor of the trio, John Edward Feast, died, in January, 1888, leaving the two sons who compose the firm as it is today.

The Feasts of Today.

William, who had received his education at Mount St. Joseph, which, by the way, almost adjoins the Feast country place, was at the time of his father's death with the brokerage firm of White & Co., and it was with this concern that he received a thorough business training. He had been trained to figure profits in fractions of a cent and, while he had no experience in the business of his parent, with the aid of some of those who were a part of the business he took hold where his father left off and made a splendid success of it. In 1891, Charles, the present treasurer of the firm, finished his education and was taken into the business, so that once again two young men, direct descendants of the founder, were at the head of the business.

As I got off the car at Beechfield avenue the first thing that met my gaze was an attractive home, surrounded by the copper-foliaged trees from which it takes its name. There are well-kept lawns and an occasional cluster of the brightly colored Japanese maples. At the back of the house there are some fine specimens of maples, and under these is the first hint that the place belongs to florists. There, plunged in ashes, are the palms that have served at some of the finest social functions of the city this winter. The palms for a time are taking the rest cure. As a floral decorator I was able to fully appreciate the setting. The home is brought out by the trees, shrubs and well carpeted lawn. Everything that would offend the eye is covered by Nature's handiwork, and the thought struck me that here is done in a permanent manner what three generations of the family have been doing for the public of Baltimore. It is no wonder that Feast & Sons are counted among the best decorators of the city.

Tour of the Range.

But our mission was to see what the range of nineteen houses produces. In the absence of Mr. Feast I was taken in charge by the foreman, L. H. Upman. Again I heard a story of long service and devotion to the business, and when I asked Charles Feast how it was that they were able to keep their employees so long, his reply was: "They are all so efficient that we could not find better."

The first house contains fine Asparagus plumosus, and as I had heard so much about the scarcity of greens I was surprised to see them so plentiful and good. Next come two houses of palms, for decorating, and they are as fine and as clean plants as one could wish to see. I asked Mr. Upman how he managed to keep them so fresh looking and his reply was, "Eternal vigilance is the price we have to pay." The rose range—the first house—is devoted to Killarney roses, with the one next to it containing Richmond. Mr. Upman tells me that Richmond is to be discarded for Hoosier Beauty. Then come Ophelia, Sunburst and My Maryland, in the order named. Next is an orchid house, then a house of sweet peas and several houses of miscellaneous stock. As one goes through this large range of well grown stock the thought strikes one that if the head of the firm knew nothing of the business when he started, he has by this time learned it well. It requires twenty-five employees to maintain the system that keeps this business running smoothly. The concern was a pioneer in the idea of using the telegraph in delivering flowers in other cities. Ever since the writer can remember, it has been associated with some organization of the kind, and as I spoke to Charles about this feature of the business he told me that the F. T. D. was the best the firm had ever been connected with, that the advertising the business got through this connection was wonderful.

On a busy day it is quite a sight to see the Feast motor equipment ready for work. This consists of three delivery trucks, two plant vans and two pleasure cars. There is no safer way to get at the amount of business a firm is doing than by watching its automobiles. The Feast cars are expensive, and the concern is going to get along with as few as possible. Tate.

E. Volmer.

E. Volmer died at his home in West Hoboken, N. J., Friday, June 1, after an illness of many years. He was 66 years of age and owned two stores, one on Palisade avenue and the other on Central avenue, the former having two greenhouses in connection. He leaves a widow. Mrs. Volmer conducted the business during her husband's long illness and will continue. Mr. Volmer had a reputation as a botanist and was well known among the trade. J. A. S.

Mrs. Carl Wilk.

Mrs. Carl Wilk, aged 65, who, with her husband, operated a greenhouse establishment at Flatbush, N. Y., is dead. She was widely known among the florists of Brooklyn, where the products of the Wilk range were marketed. She leaves, besides Mr. Wilk, six children. J. A. S.

TIDDLES AND POLLY.

There is a proverb that "birds of a feather flock together"—a neat phrase, which most of us have employed at one time or another as a finishing touch to some discussion. Now look at the accompanying illustration. Smash goes the ancient adage! A parrot and cat hobnobbing with each other! A rare picture, indeed, as each of the subjects is the antithesis of the other. The cat apparently has forgotten her traditional heritage that in the kingdom of cats feathered creatures are lawful prey, and the parrot seemingly bears her playmate no ill will.

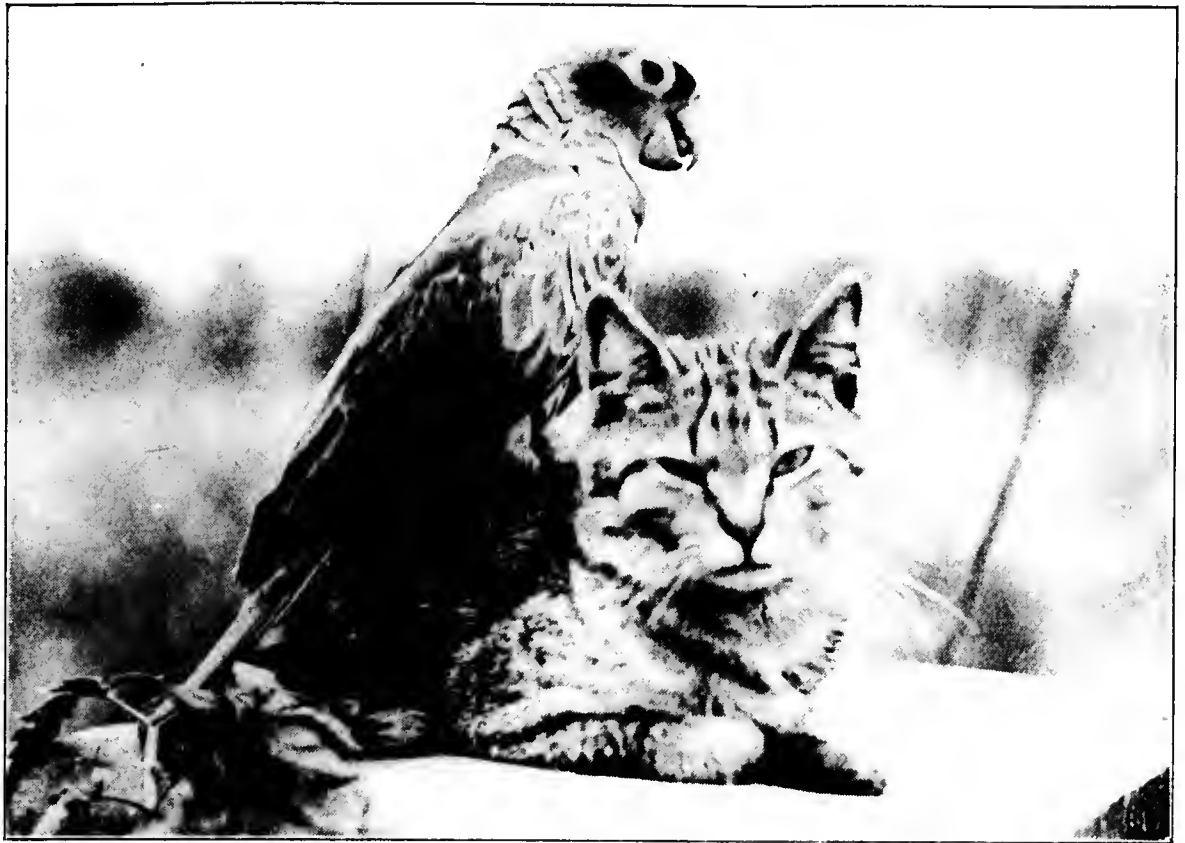

The animal and bird are named Tiddles and Polly, respectively, and are the greenhouse pets of A. S. Finrock, proprietor of the Ferneliff Floral Co., of Springfield, O. Tiddles and Polly like to supervise the doings at the Ferneliff greenhouses and, for that reason, have earned the sobriquet of "Timekeepers." They find life one sweet song and will obligingly pose for a picture in the manner shown, at any time. The only disturbing note in the domestic tranquillity of Tiddles and Polly is that Polly is permitted to perch on Tiddles' back only as long as she refrains from making any improper remarks; Tiddles simply will not tolerate strong language.

PEONY SHOW AT PHILADELPHIA.

The fourteenth annual exhibition of the American Peony Society will be held at Horticultural hall, Philadelphia, June 11 and 12, in conjunction with the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society and the Flower Show Association of the Main Line. There are thirty-two peony classes, eighteen of which constitute the division open to commercial growers. Two classes covering outdoor cut flowers and hardy perennials also are open to all.

VEGETABLE PLANTS WANTED.

The late May frosts destroyed many, many thousands of vegetable plants and created a tremendous demand for stock with which to replant, especially for tomato and sweet potato plants. It is difficult to find the stock needed and many a man is up in the air, with orders out for plants that do not come. In such an emergency it is a plain duty to reply promptly when an order can not be shipped at once.

AMERICAN ROSE SOCIETY.

When the American Rose Society designates a day for the inspection of the coöperative trial garden maintained by it and the government at Arlington, Va., it almost always means rain, but the postponement to June 4 this year gave the visitors as delightful weather as one could imagine, as well as a much better showing of bloom than could have been had on the earlier day originally set. The affair was under the direction of President S. S. Pennock and Robert Pyle, the latter chairman of the society's test garden committee, with Wm. F. Gude as local representative. The party met at the store of Gude Bros. Co., in Washington, and proceeded to Arlington Farm to inspect the 2-acre garden of roses, which was in much better bloom than when it has been officially inspected in the past. Committees were designated to formulate a report on varieties.

Following the inspection there was a public meeting, at which representatives of the Department of Agriculture and other rosarians outside the trade made interesting addresses in reply to those by the officers of the society.

MOTT-LY MUSINGS

Victor Groshens, of Roslyn, Pa., is giving up growing American Beauty and will replace it with Mrs. Russell, on the theory that it will be a saving in labor. He has been successful with Russell and is no novice at growing Russell.

Adolph Farenwald, of Roslyn, Pa., is growing less Beauty and more Mrs. Shawyer. Hadley is good, but the extra crop at this time does not compensate for the shortage earlier in the season, when the cut is more valuable. Cecile Brunner grows freely, but had only a limited sale. Edward Towill admits the market could be better, but will not change, believing in holding on to the certain lines for which he has become known to be dependable by his commission house.

W. B. Kohler, of Frankford, Pa., looked for good business at Memorial day, although previous sales were not so brisk as usual. It is hoped prices will be held up, as good stock is scarce. A large cemetery trade will consume the usual quantity of stock.

Charles H. Buening, of Easton, Pa., reports a good, steady trade. Mothers' day was extra good and prospects for Memorial day were bright, with stock in fine shape to meet all demands.

W. H. Showers, of Schenectady, N. Y., reports a good business for Memorial day, the bright weather following a long dull period adding greatly to the favorable returns.

Julius Eger, of Schenectady, observed that he sold practically everything in bloom Memorial day.

H. E. Eberhardt, of the Rosendale Flower Shop, at Schenectady, remarked that his store had the appearance of being visited by a cyclone, so bare was it. Memorial day business was never better, both for cut flowers and plants.

Hatcher's kept everyone on the run between the Schenectady and Amsterdam stores filling eleventh hour orders from the greenhouses at Hoffmans. The sales slips for Memorial day show up well.

W. C. Eger is the only florist in Schenectady who has a show house. He finds at such occasions as this the full benefit of it, excellent business.

W. M.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN FLORISTS.

Incorporated by Act of Congress, March 4, 1901.
Officers for 1917: President, Robert O. Kerr, Houston, Tex.; vice-president, A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y.; secretary, John Young, 53 W. 28th St., New York City; treasurer, J. J. Hess, Omaha, Neb.

Thirty-third annual convention, New York, N. Y., August 21 to 24, 1917.

Results bring advertising.
The Review brings results.

It is easier to sell well-grown stock at good prices than it is to sell carelessly grown stock at low prices.

THE average size of retail sales in this trade may not increase continuously, but the number of sales will not fail to increase annually.

GOLDFISH have become a standard side line in flower stores; hundreds of florists find them profitable, but there is a scarcity of stock this year, especially of imported fishes.

THE advice to save coal, which the public is receiving from all sides, may be needed by some, but surely not by any florist who finds nobody to take an order for next season.

THE cool weather of May has been of great advantage to most crops; although little growth has been apparent, the plants have been making root and have an exceptional foundation for rapid growth now that warm rains have fallen.

A MODERATE charge for packing in a few months has become so general as to be trade custom in this country, as it long has been in Europe. Nobody objected; if a shipper charges for packing he must pack well, and really good packing is worth paying for. Most buyers know it.

PERHAPS there is no better indication of general conditions throughout the country, or stronger assurance of the continued prosperity of florists, than is found in the fact that the sales of Chicago's largest mail order merchant for May increased 36.67 per cent, from $10,868,897 in 1916 to $14,854,843 in 1917.

SUPERLATIVE SERVICE.

When we grow enthusiastic it is most human to use the superlatives in our language to describe our feelings. Many of the letters that come to The Review from its advertisers contain such words as "wonderful" and "perfection" to describe what a small ad has accomplished. Consequently, the service The Review renders its advertisers may be termed "superlative service."

Here are letters from two advertisers who are enthusiastic over what The Review advertising columns have done for them:

If our ad on tuberose bulbs is still running in your magazine, please discontinue, as we are about sold out of the bulbs. We have done a WONDERFUL business through this ad.—Satex Seed Co., A. Grimm, manager, San Antonio, Tex., May 22, 1917.

Please discontinue my pansy ad. It has done the business to PERFECTION.—Henry Swaby, St. Charles, Ill., May 28, 1917.

"THE SAME OLD PRICES."

A florist who had a large Memorial day business sends The Review copies of newspaper advertisements that are credited with producing the orders, evidently with the idea that The Review will approve. But one of the advertisements is headed "Plants at the Same Old Prices—5c Up." It may be possible, in these days of 6-dollar coal and other high costs, to produce a plant to sell for a nickel, but if the customer gets a satisfactory article it is a mystery how the florist can make any money. It is the opinion of The Review that a florist who advertises "Plants at the Same Old Prices" either doesn't make good with good plants when the customer comes, or goes into the hole in doing it. It may be that, where a florist does most of his own work, or gets his wife and children to do it, in a country town where the need of cash for living expenses is at a minimum, he can get by on plants at "5c up," but the florist who does business on business principles needs more than "the same old prices" this year and he will need better prices still more badly next year—if he is still in business.

THE PROMISE OF JUNE.

Memorial day business, correspondents of The Review report, equaled and in many cities exceeded that of last year. These reports, in the face of unseasonable weather, show that business is good in all sections of the country.

Rain or cold with dark skies was the weather report from practically all the large cities. This, of course, cut down the Memorial day sales. But from nowhere comes the news that Memorial day business fell below normal.

Another healthy sign for the trade is contained in the news reports. That is that there are many advance orders for June wedding decorations. Some cities report that an extra amount of this class of business has been booked by the florists, who are said to be optimistic over the outlook for the month.

In some quarters it was expected that Memorial day would see the finish of good business for the season; that because of conditions June wedding work would not come up to the average of other years. Reports seem to point to the opposite condition—that business during June will be better than a year ago.

Retailers say that prices this spring have not affected business to any appreciable extent. People are used to paying high prices for everything they buy. When they want flowers a few cents more or less does not militate against the sale. The lesson to be drawn from this fact is that the retailer who cuts prices in the belief that people will not pay a fair price, and that he must do so to make sales, is losing the profit to which he is entitled.

June, with its weddings and the bedding plant trade which has been held back because of the lateness of the season, promises well for the trade. It appears certain to be another big month to add to the largest season the trade ever has experienced.

WEATHER, NOT WAR.

There has been a stalemate in the bedding plant business in many parts of the country and a large number of growers are on the anxious seat, in fear that they will not be able to clear their stock.

The trouble has been with the weather; the slow sale has not been due to the war.

On the whole, spring, in a trade sense, is decidedly backward this year; the season has been two or three weeks late, and the demand for bedding plants had little more than started at Memorial day, at which date the decline usually begins. In cases where bedding was done at the usual date, irrespective of weather conditions, much loss has been caused by late frosts.

In those parts of the country in which spring definitely arrived in May, bedding plants have been selling briskly; war seems to have had no effect unless it is a beneficial one.

While there seems every reason to suppose the usual, or even an unusual, amount of bedding eventually will be done as soon as the bulbous flowers fade and warm weather comes to stay, still a late season usually is a short season and a short season seldom is a record season. So any grower who is getting nervous would better sell his surplus while he can—there are dozens of buyers this minute reading the Classified ads.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

A retrospect of Memorial day business in the wholesale cut flower market is not unpleasant. In nearly every instance the final figures show a splendid increase over last year in the business done. This increase, large as it was, would have been still larger had it not been for the fact that Memorial day itself was a rainy, unpleasant day; which killed off almost all buying.

The bad weather May 30, of course, had its greatest effect on the retailers. Although reports from all quarters of the city indicate that retail business was at least fair, there is to be discerned a note of disappointment at the unfavorable weather, which was the cause of striking off some large profits which would have accrued had the weather been more favorable.

Here You Will Find a Fine Crop of Beauties

PROBABLY you realize that Beauties are becoming scarcer every day—growers throwing them out and planting something else. But the Amling supply has not diminished—we shall have the cut from more plants than ever next season and right now one of our growers has a heavy crop. When all is said and done, the public would rather buy Beauties than any other kind of flower, especially for presentation purposes. If you are an Amling customer you need never be without Beauties.

RUSSELLS AND ROSES

Note the reduced prices. While the large supply of other flowers lasts, the retailer can buy roses on advantageous terms. There are no better roses than Amling's roses, now or any other time.

CARNATIONS FOR SHIPPING

This is the season of the year when it pays specially well to buy the best.

day demand in the market was the shortage of peonies. The backward season was the reason for the small quantity in storage, for the light receipts of freshly cut peonies from growers nearer home and for an increased demand from the trade in parts of the country where the peony usually is in bloom May 30. Not only did peonies clean up at the best average prices seen in many years, but it was impossible to fill all orders. Of course all other stock was benefited by the shortage of peonies. There were adequate supplies of carnations and roses, but these sold well at excellent prices until the shipping orders were out, May 29. Late arrivals that day had to be held over to May 30, and the heavy receipts of stock that morning proved to be much more than the business of the day required, although bright weather probably would have cleared everything. As it was, peonies were the only flowers that cleared; there were large quantities of carnations and roses in the iceboxes when the wholesale houses closed at noon.

Since the holiday there has been no recovery from the slump. Stock, with certain exceptions, is plentiful, and the quality on the whole none too good. City trade has fallen off, and shipping business is not large enough to make much of an impression on the large quantities of flowers on the market.

There are not many American Beauties, but other varieties of roses are in plentiful supply, although for the most part they are small and soft. Carnations also are in large supply, but are difficult to move at even the low price wholesalers are willing to accept. The quality, as in the case of roses, leaves room for improvement.

Valley, either indoor or outdoor, is a scarce item and difficult to obtain. Lilies and callas are in small supply, but no great call for them exists. Orchids also are exceedingly scarce and are at times almost impossible to buy. Sweet peas, on the other hand, arrive in large quantities, but find only a small market. Calendulas have been moving fairly well. Mignonette drags heavily. There is a good supply of gladioli on the market, but they move slowly. Spanish iris also drags. Good quality white peonies are scarce and a fair call for them exists. Other peonies are in large supply and move slowly. Quite a quantity of double poeticus is arriving from the south, but it finds sale only at low prices. Lilacs and snapdragons both sell poorly.

Flat ferns are getting scarcer every day and those available require much

The plantsmen who gather about the entrances to the cemeteries were astir betimes May 30 and made a brave show, but most of them had to cart a good bit of stock home again at night, much bedraggled, as the rain interfered sadly.

there was a warm spell of six days just after the middle of the month that synchronized with the market's slump after Mothers' day. This hot spell was followed by a killing frost May 23. The rainfall was light during the first half of the month, but was above normal during the second half. The sunshine was sixty per cent of the possible, normal being sixty-four per cent.

says business all season has been big and that the high prices preceding the holidays had no effect on buyers. "People want flowers and they buy them regardless of price," remarked Mr. Fischer.

That high-class service is a great asset to the retail florist is demonstrated in the business of Charles H. Fisk, Inc., 1581 Ogden avenue. Mr. Fisk has been at the Ogden avenue address for more than fifteen years. Customers who formerly lived in the neighborhood, have moved to all parts of Chicago. However, they continue to buy at the Fisk store and keep three auto trucks busy delivering orders. "We could not do business without auto trucks," Mr. Fisk says. "They cost less than horses to maintain and the latter could not cover the wide territory into which our business reaches."

Andrew Chronis, of the Alpha Floral Co., Adams street and Wabash avenue, declares that every day is a bigger selling day than a year ago. Both Mothers' day and Memorial day showed increases "and every day in between and after," added Mr. Chronis.

PHILADELPHIA.*The Market.

An unusually difficult week to describe closed June 6, a week in which there was a wide range of opinions among those best able to judge the market. The fact that stood out most clearly was that peonies were late. The local crop completely missed Memorial day, so that greenhouse-grown flowers furnished the supply almost entirely. The demand was hardly equal to expectations, taken all together. Still, business was fair. Greenhouse-grown flowers benefited both by the absence of peonies and by the cool nights that prevailed throughout May.

The supply of carnations for Memorial day was unexpectedly heavy. Nearly three-quarters of the carnations were white. Of this color there was an oversupply. Prices were from $4 to $5 per hundred, with a few higher. Prices declined May 31 to $3 per hundred, which has been high since.

There were many unfilled orders for peonies to go out of town. Most of these orders admitted of no substitution. In spite of this fact, the general opinion is that the volume of business was only slightly impaired by the absence of peonies, as staples brought better prices than they would have done had peonies been in crop.

The shipping orders before Memorial day were excellent, but the local demand May 29 was marred by the rain. May 30, though an ideal day, was thoroughly disappointing. However, May 31, June 1 and June 2 brought an unexpected improvement that cleared the market at lower prices. June 4 brought the first local peonies. The receipts increased on the following days. So far they are selling fairly well, thanks to low prices asked, $4 to $6 per hundred, with a few higher and a few lower. The indications are that the height of the crop will be here soon.

Valley has been in brisk demand for

A Golden Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Abram L. Pennock celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding at their home in Lansdowne, Tuesday, June 5. Mr. Pennock is probably the oldest florist in this country. A man who has made his mark in the world, he is respected by all who know him. Mr. Pennock built greenhouses at Lansdowne in 1861, the first year of the Civil war. Just think of it, ye doubters! Five years later, with his brother, J. L. Pennock, he opened a retail store on Twelfth street, above Chestnut street, in Philadelphia. This makes the firm of Pennock Bros. 51 years old this spring. The firm moved ten years later, in 1876, to its present quarters at 1514 Chestnut street. The greenhouses in Lansdowne were carried on for many years by Mr. Pennock's son, the late Aldrich J. Pennock, who was well known as the valley king. They are now operated by B. Schilders. Among the sons and daughters present

A business woman walked briskly into the H. Bayersdorfer & Co. place one afternoon this week. She wanted to have a bluebird stuffed and mounted. All three members of the firm gathered around her. Further thought and inquiry brought the information that Mr. Ross is rapidly forging ahead. A friend asserts that he prides himself on not knowing how to make up a design! Just think of it, the proprietor of three successful stores says that! Possibly it is meant to be taken in a Pickwickian sense, the idea being to bring out the point that in order to make the stores succeed he must work with his brain, letting others work with their hands. This friend further states that Mr. Ross is a wonderfully clever buyer who never fails to grasp an opportunity, that he believes in advertising and that he treats his people liberally but demands of them absolute fidelity.

The Market.

Memorial day was widely observed in every city outside of New York. Here the cemetery florists did the bulk of the business, as usual. In the city itself there was no noticeable increase in business, the great parades apparently absorbing all the interest in the day. The wholesale cut flower market felt the effect of this diversion and the volume of business hardly exceeded that of an ordinary Saturday.

After a dull week a good Saturday was expected and realized. Shipments

With the publication of this album it became possible to show the finished work in beautifully printed pictures. The first edition sold like hot cakes, a second and third edition went quickly. able. The supply of Brunners continues light and they bring good prices. Prima Donna is proving a good summer rose. Of the other offerings, Ophelia, Sunburst, Double White Killarney and the specialties all bring good prices. None of the low-grade stock was offered June 2 under $10 per thousand and for the selected No. 2 grade many were sold at double that quotation.

Carnations are easily holding their excellent average. Flowers of the first class were not selling under $4 per hundred Saturday. Others ranged down to $2 per hundred. There was no surplus. If there is any oversupply in the market, it is in longiflorum lilies, on which prices have fallen to $6 per hundred for the fine, long-stemmed flowers, and from that down to $3 per hundred for the short-stemmed.

Valley now is of poor quality, especially the outdoor stock, and the demand is only for the best, in anticipation of the flood of June weddings, which already is under way. The best cattleyas were selling at 40 cents each Saturday. They were selected gigas.

Lilacs are over and will be out of the market by the end of the present week. But the peonies slip into the breach and there is an abundance of them. The supply has been coming from the south, but this week will see the local stock in the market. The southern shipments have not been satisfactory, the buds opening slowly, if at all. The call is only for the best.

Double white narcissi were here in quantity Saturday, but moved slowly at $1 per hundred. Callas were in excellent demand last week and prices ranged from $1 to $2 per dozen. The tulip supply is lessening. Only Spencer sweet peas are wanted. Shrubs are furnishing their quota of seasonable flowers.

Various Notes.

The coldest month of May for forty-six years is the official report. Three days of sunshine in thirty-one is unusual.

The S. A. F. convention will be the theme of special interest at the club meeting June 11.

Guttman & Raynor now are located at 111 West Twenty-eighth street, occupying half of the store headquarters of the United Cut Flower Co.

A. B. Garden, of Anacostia, D. C., is sending J. K. Allen some exceptionally good festiva maxima peonies.

Barney Jacobs, with the Walter Siebrecht Co., says steps have been taken to establish a Florists' Employees' Protective Association.

William P. Ford will spend the summer at his farm in Pennsylvania.

C. C. Trepel is making rapid progress on his new greenhouses and other improvements at his headquarters at Bloomingdale's.

May 25 at the public school building, Chatham, N. J., Mayor W. G. Badgley, before an enthusiastic audience, delivered a plea to young men to display practical patriotism June 5. Mayor Badgley proclaimed that date as a local public holiday.

The Cadieux Co. has completed a handsome roof garden at the Hotel Majestic and is busy decorating the tea-room with elaborate Japanese effects, including a great quantity of wistaria.

Lieutenant Henshaw was in the city June 2 and looks every inch a sailor in his naval uniform.

A new seed firm has been established at 15 Park Row, to be known as William M. Hunt & Co. Mr. Hunt was with Arthur T. Boddington nine years. Mr. Goldberg, the other member of the firm, was formerly with the Knight & Struck Co. and Weeber & Don.

Edward Roehrs, of the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., is convalescing at the Newark, N. J., hospital, after an operation for appendicitis.

J. Austin Shaw.

The Market.

Although the two days preceding Memorial day were cold and stormy, the holiday itself brought warm weather and the stores all were busy. Business for the day compared favorably with that of other years. Stock was plentiful, but there was a scarcity of most of the outdoor flowers that are usually in the market for Memorial day. Few peonies and fewer lilacs were seen, while there were no hardy blue irises. The latter have since come into the market, but no special demand is noticed.

A good supply of the cheaper varieties of flowers were in and included some fine pink and white stocks, white marguerites and outdoor valley. The Easter lilies are plentiful with some growers, but callas are not much in evidence. The large quantity of funeral work recently has cleaned them up nicely. Several large weddings marked the beginning of June.

Nearly 15,000 plants, principally geraniums, the gifts of the school children of the city, were used to decorate the graves of war veterans Memorial day.

On account of the backward season, the peony show to be held at Convention hall has been postponed until June 28 to 30. The proceeds, after all expenses are paid, will be given to the Red Cross fund.

Edwin C. Kaelber, Inc., had an effective window decoration, consisting of a large black basket filled with yellow daisies on a standard draped with black velvet. He reports that business is good, with many orders for June weddings.

Mrs. Owens, of the Rochester Floral Co., made a trip to Buffalo and Niagara Falls by automobile last week.

Jacob Thoman & Sons have been busy lately with a great number of bedding orders. The weather has interfered with the work considerably.

Reports from the uptown florists show an unusual number of wedding orders for the first part of June. Graduations also will help make June a busy month.

The seed trade continues to be rushed. The demand is for vegetable seeds.

Collecting Express Claims.

The attitude of the express companies in the matter of payment of claims for stock frozen or damaged in shipment provoked a general discussion.

He stated that and recently succeeded in getting $80. Mr. Blackman said he was in a position to know that local agents have authority to pay claims up to $25. The chief reason for frozen shipments, he believed, is the employment of cheap and inefficient help by the express companies.

The following names were proposed as members of the association: Peter Bogies, Indianapolis; T. E. Kenworthy, Richmond, and Mr. Correll, Liberty. Frank A. Wallace, state entomologist, was proposed for honorary membership. Allen Humason was unanimously elected an associate member.

An invitation from the Evansville Florists' Club, asking the association to hold its October meeting in that city, was read and its acceptance urged by William Blackman. The association accepted the invitation with thanks.

Secretary Steinkamp was authorized to assure Mr. Lieber that the association was heartily in accord with his plan to beautify Indiana and that the association was in favor of the proposed botanical garden.

The next meeting of the association will be held July 10. E. E. T.

FRENCH HYDRANGEAS AILING.

I had a good stock of potted French hydrangeas in a house last February. They were all right until the middle of March, when they became yellow, and now the flowers are small and shriveled. The soil consisted of one-fourth cow manure, a little bone meal and some sand. I syringe the plants daily with the hose, and the foliage has become black, as if it were burned. The glass is shaded. Can you tell me what to do with them?

W. H. W.—Cal.

Without knowing something more of your cultural conditions, I would not like to hazard an opinion as to the cause of your hydrangeas doing so poorly. French hydrangeas, if well ripened, stand forcing well. Such soil as you gave them should have proved suitable. These plants love a generous soil, need plenty of water, and when well rooted they enjoy applications of liquid manure until the flower heads show color. They do not need any shade until the flower heads are expanded, at which period and recently succeeded in getting $80. Mr. Blackman said he was in a position to know that local agents have authority to pay claims up to $25. The chief reason for frozen shipments, he believed, is the employment of cheap and inefficient help by the express companies.

The following names were proposed as members of the association: Peter Bogies, Indianapolis; T. E. Kenworthy, Richmond, and Mr. Correll, Liberty. Frank A. Wallace, state entomologist, was proposed for honorary membership. Allen Humason was unanimously elected an associate member.

An invitation from the Evansville Florists' Club, asking the association to hold its October meeting in that city, was read and its acceptance urged by William Blackman. The association accepted the invitation with thanks.

Secretary Steinkamp was authorized to assure Mr. Lieber that the association was heartily in accord with his plan to beautify Indiana and that the association was in favor of the proposed botanical garden.

The next meeting of the association will be held July 10. E. E. T.

FRENCH HYDRANGEAS AILING.

I had a good stock of potted French hydrangeas in a house last February. They were all right until the middle of March, when they became yellow, and now the flowers are small and shriveled. The soil consisted of one-fourth cow manure, a little bone meal and some sand. I syringe the plants daily with the hose, and the foliage has become black, as if it were burned. The glass is shaded. Can you tell me what to do with them?

W. H. W.—Cal.

Without knowing something more of your cultural conditions, I would not like to hazard an opinion as to the cause of your hydrangeas doing so poorly. French hydrangeas, if well ripened, stand forcing well. Such soil as you gave them should have proved suitable. These plants love a generous soil, need plenty of water, and when well rooted they enjoy applications of liquid manure until the flower heads show color. They do not need any shade until the flower heads are expanded, at which period a colder house and some shade are beneficial. A temperature of anywhere from 50 to 65 degrees until the flowers are well advanced suits French hydrangeas. C. W.

The polyanthus flowers indoors in a cool greenhouse from the middle of February until the end of April. The flowers are specially good during March and April. Outdoors they flower during May and June. They may be had in many colors, but yellow sells best; next to that, white. They are easily grown either from seed or by division. During summer they should be planted out in the field. This should be done as early in May as possible.

William Sim, a large and successful grower of polyanthus, shades his plants from the hot sun by means of cheesecloth. The plants should be lifted and stored in coldframes if special places are not ready for them at the lifting time. They do best in solid beds of deep, well manured soil, and enjoy a violet temperature. If seed is sown in January or February, strong plants may be had to flower the following season. Divisions secured at once will also give good results. These flowers sell well in the eastern wholesale markets.

CHICAGO NOTES.

business at its new store at 174 North Wabash avenue, although the move, which has been progressing slowly for some time, has not as yet been fully completed.

At Peterson Nursery the irises usually are a glorious sight early in June, but this year the season is at least a fortnight late, and William A. Peterson says frost has destroyed a large percentage of the buds.

Mrs. N. J. Wiator has been seriously ill for a week. Although still confined to her bed, she is recovering rapidly.

The work of enlarging the cut flower department of the A. L. Randall Co. is in full swing and the additional facilities will soon be in use.

Memorial day business broke all previous records with O. A. & L. A. Tonner, according to Miss O. A. Tonner, sales being even larger than for Mothers' day, which was the firm's record day until last week.

That it pays to get orders out on time was proved in another way by the Geo. Wittbold Co., May 29. All orders on hand were out that evening and thus many cancellations were avoided, which would otherwise have been a certainty because of the rainy weather of Memorial day.

Frank J. Rioux, of the A. L. Randall Co., has landed a war baby, having closed a contract with the government for a large refrigerator to be erected in the Canteen building, United States Naval Training Station, Great Lakes, Ill. The company is also building a refrigerator for the retail store of Anton Then.

Paul Dressel, an employee of the American Bulb Co., has been accepted for service in the navy.

Visitors.

Frank Washburn, of Bloomington, Ill., was in Chicago last week investigating coal.

L. F. Darnell and wife were in the city June 5 on their way home to Cleveland after spending six months on the Pacific coast. Mr. Darnell was associated with the Gasser Co. for many years, but sold his interest prior to departure on this vacation. He plans to reengage in the trade in the autumn.

C. E. Baldwin, of The Fernery,

BOSTON.

The Market.

The Memorial day business was good, fully equal to that of any previous year.
On account of the abnormally late season, no outdoor flowers, such as valley, lilacs, deutzias, etc., were available, and there was only a limited number of Darwin tulips. There was, however, a heavy cut of greenhouse stock, in spite of the fact that many growers failed to get their crops of stocks, spiræas, feverfew, etc., in on time. Much pickled stock appeared; it looked as if some carnation growers had sold little or nothing between Mothers' day and Memorial day. This stock realized but poor prices and harmed the market.

Roses were abundant and sold tolerably well at from $2 to $3 per hundred for short-stemmed blooms and $6 to $10 for the better grades. The call was chiefly for the short and medium grades. Carnations sold well, especially the colored ones, at $5 to $6. A few fancies realized $8. Colored snapdragons sold well; the white ones not at all. The small types of gladioli, Spanish irises, yellow marguerites and bachelor's buttons were in good demand, as were colored stocks, some specially fine spikes realizing $12 per hundred. Lilies sold poorly, as did valley. Narcissus Barrii conspicuus was hard to sell, but poeticus went better. Darwin tulips made $40 to $60 per thousand. A good many early tulips also appeared.

Bunches of feverfew, gypsophilas, candytuft, etc., had a good sale. Sweet peas made from 50 cents to $1.50 per hundred. Asparagus plumosus and smilax sold well. There were enough flowers for everyone and some surplus.

Since Memorial day business has taken quite a drop and prices are considerably lower. On account of the continued dark weather, a real glut has not yet developed. Roses sell mostly at from $1 to $6; white carnations vary from $1.50 to $3; sweet peas make from 25 cents to 75 cents, with a few selects realizing $1. There is an oversupply of Spanish irises, snapdragons and gladioli. Quantities of laggard Memorial day flowers are seen, but there is little call for them. Lilies continue druggy. Darwin tulips are now abundant, with only a feeble demand. A little local lilac now is obtainable, but there is little call for it.

Various Notes.

Penn's Memorial day business netted thirty-three and one-third per cent more money than that of last year, with less expense. Both artificial wreaths and fresh flowers sold well. Mr. and Mrs. Henry Penn left June 1 for a 10-day trip with the Pilgrim Publicity Association. Penn's had a Chinese wedding decoration at the Somerset June 2. The groom was a graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and of Harvard, and the bride a graduate of Wellesley College.

Boston's big outdoor flower show, which opened June 1, is the chief horticultural event of the year. In spite of the busy season and the unusual political conditions, it is being well patronized, quite a number of people from a distance attending. The exhibition will continue for at least a fortnight and the display will be much finer as the show progresses, with new features added each day. I doubt whether any other city in the country has ever staged a more imposing non-competitive open-air flower show.

Mann Bros. had 1,000 bunches of feverfew for Memorial day and a fine lot of lilies, early and late tulips, irises, gladioli and snapdragons. They grow much lilac in their fields, but not one bunch was available this year.

The Welch Bros. Co. is receiving, among other flowers, a fine lot of Iceland poppies, annual larkspurs, Marguerite Mrs Sander and gladioli. The company had a tremendous Memorial day trade. Shipping orders were numerous. Roses, carnations and sweet peas were the best sellers.

Patrick Welch says his Memorial day trade exceeded that of 1916. Roses, carnations, sweet peas, colored stock, spiræas and gladioli sold well, while snapdragons, valley, lilies, white stock and short trumpet narcissi went slowly.

Thomas Roland has been receiving more roses of late than any other local grower. He had a heavy Memorial day cut. June 2 he had 12,000 and cleaned them up easily. His rose garden at the outdoor show is a magnificent one.

C. T. Beasley & Co., of East Milton, the leading pansy specialists, state that sales were double those of a year ago. They had several thousand Darwin tulips, planted on a warm, sunny slope, that flowered on time. These realized $60 per thousand.

F. J. Dolansky has received a large shipment of phalaenopsis from the Philippines in excellent condition, and also a number of rare orchids from England. At present he has a fine lot of Cattleyas Mossiæ and gigas, miltonias and odontoglossums.

Mrs. Winthrop Chanler, of New York, June 2 gave a splendid illustrated lecture on "Alpine Plants and Rock Gardens" at Horticultural hall, before an appreciative audience.

The display of ornamental malus at the Arnold Arboretum was at its best June 5. The lilacs promise to be in good condition by June 10. In the deciduous shrub collections there was a greater amount of winter-killing than usual, among the stock ruined being diervillas, philadelphus, spiræas, hyperi-

The month of May proved to be the coldest, wettest and cloudiest month ever experienced here. June started inauspiciously, but it now is doing better, and the brighter weather is appreciated by the great and new army of amateur cultivators. W. N. C.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Memorial Day Trade.

Because of the heightened patriotic spirit and the elimination of the speedway races, the number of decorations at the cemeteries was unusually large this year. Flowers were so extremely scarce and the demand so heavy that buyers were by no means exacting—anything in the blooming line was salable. Snowballs went at $1 per bunch and even geranium blooms cleared easily at 50 cents per dozen. Easter lilies, with a little plumosus, brought 35 cents per bloom. Roses were quickly consumed at $1.50 to $10 per

Prices continue firm and stock remains scarce. Indications are, however, that in a few days there will be a superabundance of everything. A few bright, warm days will bring in larger quantities of peonies, candytuft and feverfew, which are about two weeks late. A few peonies have already made their appearance, along with a few outdoor Spanish irises. The market is flushed with Easter lilies, but callas are comparatively at an end. A limited supply of gladioli of superior quality is available. These include America, Peace and Francis King, which bring $1 and $1.50 per dozen. Snapdragons have become scarce.

Roses are plentiful, but although the quality is inferior, the prices do not suffer, and the blooms clear readily.

Planting out and June weddings are the features of the day, and between the two all hands are kept busy. The weddings bring into play valley and orchids, though daisies and roses are also in popular favor for these occasions.

Various Notes.

The A. Wiegand's Sons Co. reports that bedding out work has greatly increased in volume, despite the fact that prices have been increased.

There has been much talk about closing the flower stores Sundays and at 6 o'clock during the week, except on Saturdays, when 9 o'clock is the proposed closing hour. As yet, however, nothing definite has been done.

The Indianapolis Flower & Plant Co. reports a rushing business. On account of the late season, everybody is anxious to have his outdoor work done immediately.

A. F. J. Baur and family are taking a short vacation at Richmond, going there by motor.

It is the belief of the retailers that when the streets are filled with soldiers, business has a tendency to increase. There are 50,000 men at Fort Harrison who have money and want to spend it.

FORT WAYNE, IND.

Memorial Day Trade.

The Memorial day trade was exceptionally good this year and the majority of florists, both wholesale and retail, report an increase over the business of last year. This is attributed partly to the advertising campaign of the Fort Wayne Florists' Club and the retail firms. There was a great shortage in the supply of cut flowers and many more could have been sold had they been obtainable. Practically all the business for Memorial day was done the two days before the holiday and the florists' forces were rushed handling the great volume of trade.

Ponies never were so scarce for Memorial day as they were this year. There were no home-grown ponies on the market and the shipped stock was difficult to obtain in large quantities. Carnations, which were in good supply, were sold out in many of the stores and more were not obtainable. The supply of roses was large and they sold exceedingly well, the short and medium grades being in the greatest demand. Bouquets of mixed flowers for cemetery purposes and magnolia wreaths had a large demand. The supply of gladioli was good and the demand equal to the supply. Lilies were scarce, as the home-grown flowers were about gone. Sweet peas were abundant and the demand was good. The majority of florists report a good sale of bedding plants for Memorial day.

Trade since Memorial day has been lively, as the weather warmed up considerably. The demand for bedding plants has received quite an impetus. June weddings also have been demanding a large number of flowers and there has been considerable funeral work. There is a fine supply of all kinds of seasonable flowers on the market, Easter lilies being especially abundant. There is a large supply of Shawyer and Sunburst roses and also some fine, local-grown Cattleya gigas. Greens are about equal to the demand.

only eight clear days in this locality. There was but forty-three per cent of the possible sunshine during the month. The highest temperature during the month was 85 degrees and the lowest was 33 degrees. In spite of this unfavorable weather, business was brisk.

There will be a meeting of the Fort Wayne Florists' Club Wednesday evening, June 13, at the store of the Doswell Floral Co., 301 West Main street. John Doswell will give a talk on landscape gardening. A large attendance is desired, as this is the last meeting before September.

The Flick Floral Co. reports a good Memorial day business. Magnolia wreaths and mixed bouquets sold well. This company advertised in the daily papers for Memorial day.

Miss Clara Belle Flick and Miss Helen F. Patten, of Toledo, O., are in the city to attend the wedding of their niece, Miss Mildred Flick.

The Doswell Floral Co. was completely sold out for Memorial day in both cut flowers and blooming plants.

June weddings are the order of the day at the A. J. Lanternier store, which had a satisfactory Memorial day business. The sale of bedding plants here is rushing.

W. J. & M. S. Vesey are cutting a fine lot of Cattleya gigas, Shawyer roses and Easter lilies. They report a good Decoration day business. The demand was heavy for everything except bedding plants. R. F.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.—H. W. Pierce advises his confreres to lay in as large a supply of coal as possible, and as early as possible. His opinion is of value, inasmuch as he practically lives over a mine and is in closest touch with the black diamonds. An accident has taken him off his feet, but only temporarily, we were glad to know.

Seed Trade News*AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

President, Kirby B. White, Detroit, Mich.;
Secretary-Treasurer, O. E. Kendel, Cleveland, O.
Thirty-fifth annual convention, Detroit, June 19 to 21, 1917.

THERE seems to be no let-up in the demand for seeds. Large orders for replantings are now coming in.

EDWARD S. LEONARD, of the Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, is home from a brief visit to the woods of northern Wisconsin.

It is said that a large percentage of the onion set crops at Chicago already has been sold into second, third and fourth hands.

It looks as though the war will result in valley pips commanding unusual prices for several years after the return of peace.

It is reported that one Chicago operator in onion sets, a man not often heard of by the trade in general, cleaned up $100,000 in the last season.

THE opinion seems to be spreading that seed supplies for 1918, as a whole, will be far shorter than they were this season. Only an unusually good crop can relieve the condition.

THE acreage of onion sets at Chicago is thought to considerably exceed that of 1916, and the condition of the crops at the beginning of June was decidedly better than a year ago, but the market is firm.

THE Page-Clark Seed & Nursery Co., of Billings, Mont., has been reorganized to carry on a larger business, the newly elected officers being H. H. Hortman, J. W. Shea and R. C. Dillavou. The company this year has bean seed contracts covering 4,500 acres.

It is stated that the British government has given instructions that steamer space be provided at New York for consignments of vegetable seeds needed in England. Heretofore seeds have had to take their chance at the limited space available for general merchandise.

REPRESENTATIVES of Holland houses still in this country are hearing from home to the effect that shipping bulb and nursery stock to the United States again has been made possible by an arrangement between the governments of Great Britain and Holland. This confirms similar news emanating from Washington, printed in The Review several weeks ago.

"We visited every seed store in the city last week," says a correspondent at Nashville, Tenn., "in search of some standard varieties of beans, and also of cow peas, without finding a single seed. We did not find a soy bean of any variety in the entire round. In general, we have never seen the stocks of seeds of all kinds so low in this city as they are today. The question is, where are the seeds to come from for next season's business?"

DANISH SEED IMPORT

Import of all kinds of Seeds direct from seed growers in Denmark. Please send for price list.
Chr. Møhlberg, 216 7th St. N., Minneapolis, Minn.

THE acreage of tuberoses this year, according to reports from the southeastern states, is reduced to a mere trace, due to the indications that none of the crop could be exported.

DANISH SEEDS.

"Denmark has assumed a leading position in seed cultivation and its seeds are in demand throughout the world," says Consul General E. D.
Winslow. "The soil, favorably affected by the insular climate, adapts this country for the production of well-developed and hardy strains, especially of cabbages (brassicæ) and cruciform varieties of plants. The northern climate, producing a slower growth than in southern latitudes, enables plants to attain their full and natural development. By rational modern culture Danish seed growers have produced seeds with such conspicuous qualities that the markets of the world have long been opened to them."

THE SOURCE OF SEED SUPPLY.

In discussing the disrupted condition of the regular channels of trade in the seed business, a British writer says:
"While America has been importing seeds from all the allied countries as well as from Germany in the past, not a few seeds, apart from the vast quantities of sweet peas, have been exported.

To many, it is well known that America produces as fine, aye, finer, aster seed than Germany ever knew how to grow.
American seedsmen have not in the past bought such quantities of German seeds

because they specially liked the German. Like many seedsmen in this country and in our colonies, they were led to believe Germany was the source of seed supply instead of being largely a mere store or intermediary. Take the sugar beet supply. The American beet growers were in a funk when the war started, because they thought no seed would get through from Germany. But in a short time they discovered that Russia had, all along, been growing the seed which Germany had sold, and according to the last report, the Americans had succeeded in importing something like 20,000,000 pounds of sugar beet seed from Russia, and you may bet your bottom dollar that the Americans will not bother about Germany in future."

DISPOSITION OF CENSORED MAIL.

Since the outbreak of the war the volume of mail both ways between Germany and the United States has steadily decreased in volume, but it has not stopped. While direct mail communication has been interdicted, Germans are posting mail in Scandinavia and Holland and are receiving correspondence from this country through an addressee in a neutral country. Almost from the beginning of hostilities the British censor has examined all European mail from and for the United States. Communications that were of no value have been forwarded to and from Germany, even since the United States entered the war, but anything of value to Germany has been held up. Inquiry as to the disposition made of this intercepted commercial mail brings the information that none of it has been destroyed. The British censor has stored away thousands upon thousands of sacks of it, to be held until the close of the war. In the mass of parcel post mail for the United States are large numbers of small lots of flower seeds that were stopped by the censor for the reason that they would assist in establishing German credit in the United States. In the letters mailed from America are large numbers of orders and remittances that have never been permitted to reach the German addressees. All remittances are contraband, but where in the form of drafts payable to order they have been without value in a prize court.

CLOVER FOR WET PLACES.

The possibility that a continuance of the war may affect the supplies of concentrates for stock feed makes it wise at the present time to consider growing feeds rich in proteins. Of such feeds the U. S. Department of Agriculture calls attention to alsike clover as a plant for low, wet places. Analyses show that alsike clover hay is slightly richer in protein than red clover, and the hay is fine and well liked by stock. For dairy cattle, especially, it is an excellent feed, and a ration of alsike hay could partly replace a ration of silage and concentrates where these have been used, making a saving in concentrates. The department especially calls attention to the wet bottoms that are often waste or weed-overgrown lands. Alsike clover thrives in such places.

MOTT-LY GLEANINGS.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

The St. Louis market last week was in splendid condition and members of the trade were satisfied with the business done. Despite the rain Memorial day, which marred business somewhat, there was a big demand May 28 and 29. The wholesalers did a large shipping business for Memorial day and the retailers report that business was excellent.

There was a good supply of stock for the holiday and it cleared well at reasonable prices. The supply the last part of the week was large and the demand small. Consequently prices dropped.

Excellent roses, Ophelia, Russell and Sunburst, especially, are coming in daily and low prices prevail in all grades. The supply of all grades and varieties of carnations is heavy and the average price has dropped to around $2 per hundred.

Peonies are crowding the market. The best sell for $5 per hundred. Sweet peas again are in heavy supply. Some fine America and Mrs. Francis King gladioli are coming in and clear daily. Valley is of good quality, but there is not enough in the market to supply the demand. The supply of cape jasmine from Texas is large and the price is low. Easter lilies are plentiful at $8 per hundred. Huckleberry, which has taken the place of wild smilax, is in great demand for decorative purposes and is in good supply. All other greens also are in demand.

Various Notes.

As provided in the will of the late Henry Shaw, founder of the Missouri Botanical Garden, the annual sermon on flowers was preached May 13 at Christ's church. Plants from the garden were used to decorate the church.

Edwin Denker, of St. Charles, Mo., who was in St. Louis last week buying supplies, said orders for Memorial day were heavy this year.

Joseph Witek delivered his Memorial day orders with a new Ford delivery truck. He reports business for May was satisfactory.

HAVE YOU BOUGHT YOUR PANSY SEED?

In the past a large per cent of the pansy seed has come from Germany. This source is now cut off.

You need not worry about this very important item, as there are several firms in the United States that are growing pansy seed equal and superior to any foreign grown seed.

The firm of William Toole & Son is one of these.

We are just starting to harvest what promises to be the largest and finest crop of pansy seed Wm. Toole & Son have ever grown.

William Toole & Son are pioneers in the raising of pansy seed in America.

Thirty-five years' experience in selecting, breeding, studying, and growing pansy seed and plants especially to suit the wants of American people, have resulted in our superior strain of pansy seed.

Our aim is to grow the kind of seeds we would like to buy ourselves.

Our endeavor is to combine a wide range of bright and pleasing colors with large size flowers, heavy substance of petals, together with an attractive round flower, many of which are ruffled and lightly fringed.

TOOLE'S GIANT PRIZE STRAIN

This strain contains the best pansies we know how to produce. Besides colors and shades of our own selection it contains such novelties and varieties from other growers as we have found worth while after careful trials.

It will produce flowers of large size, splendid form and substance and in the widest range of shades and colors. Packet, 20c.; trade packet of 1,000 seeds, 40c.; 1/8-oz., 90c.; 1/4-oz., $1.25; 1 oz., $5.

COLOR MIXTURES

10. Blue Shades—This is a mixture of all blue and purple varieties of pansies.

20. Black Pansies.

30. Brown Shades—This is a mixture of all the beautiful brown varieties of pansies.

50. Red Shades—All of the showy red and purple kinds are combined in this mixture.

60. White Mixture—All of the different varieties of white flowered pansies are to be found in this mixture.

70. Yellow Shades—Into this mixture we put equal parts of the various shades of yellow pansies.

80. Fancy Varieties—All the fancy edged varieties, such as Freya, Silver Edge, Fire King, etc., are included in this very popular mixture.

100. Masterpiece—Large curled and ruffled flowers in wide range of colors, mostly with large dark center markings.

Leaflet on pansy culture sent free on request.

Any of the above mixtures or varieties, packet, 20c.; trade packet of 1,000 seeds, 40c.; 1/8-oz., 90c.; 1/4-oz., $1.25; 1 oz., $5.00.

New crop ready June 15 to 20.

here this week is creating considerable business for the florists, as the convention has many social features.

Alexander Lurie and John Noyes, respectively horticulturist and landscape gardener of the Missouri Botanical Garden, were the judges at the exhibition under the auspices of the Webster Grove Garden Club.

John J. Bentzen, who recently sold his stock of plants at auction, says that the greenhouses, which he vacated, are the property of his father, A. J. Bentzen, and are not owned by his grandfather.

Frank Gorly, of Grimm & Gorly, reports that Memorial day business was the best on record. The firm sold out its supply of cut flowers. Plants of all kinds sold well.

George H. Angermueller says orders for Memorial day exceeded those of any preceding year.

Fred Strohmeier, designer for the Ayres Floral Co., has the sympathy of the trade in the loss of his brother, who died last week.

New Early-flowering or Winter-blooming Giant Pansies

An entirely new and distinct strain of Pansies. The main advantage of these new Pansies over all hitherto existing Pansies is the extreme earliness of flowering and the unusual hardiness, which enables them to withstand quite severe winters, and to bloom right on into the summer. Sown at the same time as other Pansies, they begin flowering the early part of March, or as soon as the snow is off the ground, many times having four or five large flowers to a plant, when all other Pansies are only showing buds. The flowers are large, well formed and fragrant. They are highly recommended for autumn planting and for very early bedding, as well as for early cut flowers.

14. WINTER SUN. Golden yellow, with dark eye.
15. ICE KING. Silvery white, with dark blue eye.
16. CELESTIAL QUEEN. Light or sky blue.
17. CHARM OF MARCH. Dark velvety blue.
18. MIXED. The above four colors with other shades and variations.

The Memorial Day Business.

Sales for Memorial day were most encouraging, but it was evident that if the weather had been pleasant twice as much stock could have been sold, providing it were available. As it was, nearly everyone sold out, and where it was possible pans of geraniums and other made-up stock were moved. The long spell of dark weather held back all but a few of the peonies, those that did make the day bringing high prices. A comparatively large quantity of roses and carnations was disposed of, with the roses leading. Higher prices were obtained for these than during the same period of any previous year. Cape jasmines of supreme quality sold rapidly, at good prices. There were fair quantities of Spanish irises, baby gladioli, Easter lilies and callas.

The reports indicate that comparatively few bedding plants were sold, as it was too wet to set them out; but blooming pot plants met with a satisfactory sale. As a whole, the day's business surpassed that of last year.

Various Notes.

Out-of-town shipments for Memorial day business at the Arthur Newell establishment greatly exceeded last year's total for the holiday. Mr. Newell is erecting a residence out in the Morningside drive addition, at a cost of $9,500.

Samuel Murray smilingly reports that he has nary a kick to register in the matter of Memorial day business.

A splendid business was done by the G. M. Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., the salesmen disposing of everything on hand. The company's supply of cut flowers was large, with the exception of peonies, of which there were only about 5,000 cut this year, as compared with 40,000 last year. Hydrangeas came in for a good sale.

W. J. Barnes cleared everything, and he had a large quantity of cut stock.

The W. L. Rock Flower Co. experienced a big business, the largest it ever had for the day. The company was well prepared in the matter of carnations, having a large crop of blooms that were unusually fine for this time of the year.

Adolph Mohr announces the arrival of a 10-pound son at his new home.

Among others reporting a better-than-ever Memorial day business were E. Humfeld, the Alpha Floral Co., Mrs. T. A. Moseley, Miss Jennie Murray, August Luther, Jr., and Miss L. E. Boggess.

Despite the rain, the people flocked to the cemeteries, and the store of A. F. Barbe was jammed with buyers during the greater part of the time. Mr. Barbe did a record business, as he had plenty of roses and carnations to take the place of peonies. Wreaths of all kinds sold well.

The Market.

A combination of circumstances led to a shortage of some lines of stock this week. The demand from out of town was unprecedented, and there is no questioning the fact that the territory served by Los Angeles is every year becoming larger and better developed. Small towns that a few years ago were hardly on the map now are supporting a flower store or two, and people who formerly had all they could do to scrape a living now are looking for the luxuries of life. The excellent stock shipped by the wholesalers of late years has greatly helped to make flowers popular and possible in the desert towns. At any rate, whatever the cause, the result is here, and a most satisfactory result it is.

The scarcest article in the market was indoor-grown carnations, and order after order for these had to be turned down. Fortunately, the field crop was fine and in many cases could be substituted at a far lower price, which gave the retailers a chance for better profits. Roses, while not so good as those a few weeks ago, are in fair condition and there were about enough to go around. Many more gladioli could have been sold had they been on hand, but the cool weather has held this stock back. America, Panama and Mrs. Francis King are the headliners.

Orchids and valley are both on the short side, and Cecile Brunner roses are poor. Sweet peas are arriving satisfactorily, the newer Spencer types being particularly attractive and good. A remarkably good line of purple statice is in and sells freely.

There is little demand for plants at this time, or the fine hydrangeas now being shown would meet with more favor. Greens are plentiful and of good quality.

Various Notes.

At an executive committee meeting hurriedly called by President Taylor of the Los Angeles County Horticultural Society for May 29, a most remarkable condition was brought up. Place of next meeting, speakers, etc., had been arranged, but a member who holds no office whatever had given orders for notices to be printed, containing statements to the press altogether different from the society's arrangements. Naturally, President Taylor decided to ignore these, and instructions were given to the secretary to give correct data to the press and have corrections printed.

Henry Kuntz, long known in horticultural circles in this city, has returned here from Arizona. He is speaking of an eastern trip.

Fred Hills, of Hills' Nursery, presented Mrs. Hills with a fine birthday present recently, in the form of a new automobile. With their usual good nature, the couple are taking their friends out for rides around the country. Mr. Hills reports the biggest year's business he has ever had and says that it probably will be necessary to build another greenhouse this year, to take care of the increasing trade in ferns alone.

J. Roller, of the California Cut Flower Co., reports a bigger and better shipping business than ever before for Memorial day. Frank Nelson, of this firm, was called east by wire to see his mother, who was seriously ill in Chicago. This doubtless interfered with his plans for a vacation trip. Harry Hansen, formerly of this city, and B. W. Perks, more recently of Berkeley, have joined the staff here.

The cashier's funds at the S. Murata & Co. place will be seriously depleted to pay the month's electric light bill. The staff has had to get down extra early and stay until late at night to handle the shipping business for Memorial day.

Fred Sperry, manager of the L. A. Floral Co., was found in somewhat the same position as the O. Henry character who would not take his feet from the cold bed-rail for a fortune. It is true that Fred was using the desk, but he said that both feet and brain required the respite after the big rush at Memorial day, and he absolutely refused to talk.

For direct, forceful advertising, the windows of the Germain Seed & Plant Co. are hard to beat. Whoever has charge of this has not only an artistic way of producing a practical effect, but also has the knack of hitting off the situation in a timely manner. For instance, the window showing a mountain scene, with fire signs and natural shrubbery, is great. It may not apply directly to the seed or nursery business, but the natural effect produced draws the crowd and familiarizes possible customers with the firm's staple lines. M. L. Germain, president of the company, says that the wonderful amount of business done in the vegetable seed end has not had any reflex action on the business of the flower seed and nursery departments; in fact, it has been rather the reverse.

Frank Lichtenberg reports several big decorations and the usual amount of good funeral work.

R. W. Saake has returned from a few days' vacation in the country. Some excellent stock was shown for the holiday.

W. Armacost & Co. are still sending in valley, but apparently not enough to take care of the demand. Mr. Armacost says that his company will probably postpone building on the newly acquired land for this season at least, probably growing a vegetable crop for one season and using the top soil, if needed, for the benches. The rose stock is still coming in finely.

W. W. Felgate, of Sierra Madre, gave a talk at the Forty-ninth street school under the auspices of the home gardens committee, May 29. He illustrated his remarks with some fine potatoes and other vegetables.

peas. The large quantity of lilacs helped to ease the market. There is a good demand for wedding bouquets, which is a usual thing at this season. Outdoor roses are beginning to show in the yards, but they have not made their appearance in windows.

A few bright days have helped to relieve the tightness of the market to some extent, but there still is a scarcity of some of the standard items. Carnations are a little easier as to supply. Sweet peas are more plentiful, but the demand for them is good and they are cleared closely. Baby gladioli are arriving sparingly, but gypsophilas are more plentiful. Peonies, which are usually featured at this season, are as yet not in the market, and there probably will be no cut of any size for two or three weeks. The late frost did considerable damage to the crop.

Roses are more plentiful and of good quality, but they are not sufficient for the demand. Lilac is in full crop, but on account of the large quantities grown privately it receives only a light call. Ten weeks' stocks are of good quality and abundant enough to meet the demand. Snapdragons also are plentiful, but the quality is not up to the standard. Outdoor valley is at its best and is meeting with a good demand for corsages and wedding bouquets. Bedding stock is plentiful, while the demand is weak.

Various Notes.

Van Slyke & Seamons are marketing a large stock of choice cucumbers. Their peas are in good demand.

James Simpson is bringing in some choice roses from the Acme Floral Co. range. He cut a fine lot for the Memorial day trade.

without sacrifice. Quantities of practically all items were shipped out and the extra demand at home took care of the remainder nicely. Not only did the wholesalers enjoy a splendid shipping business, but most of the large retailers also had many orders from out of town. This helped out decidedly at the downtown establishments, as extra trade in flowers for use in the cemeteries on Memorial day has ceased to cut much figure with them. Some say that each year sees a falling off in this respect, on account of the fact that more of the people taking flowers to the cemeteries buy them at the stands near the entrances. This year many vendors catered to this demand, and consequently the large retailers got less. They did not miss it especially, however, as there was enough business to keep them busy as it was.

The Memorial day services were elaborate, and the florists were called upon to fill a large number of special orders for high-grade stock and to make up many floral pieces. Besides, the week saw a heavy funeral business, and school graduations demanded some little attention. All told, there was an uncommonly heavy demand for flowers.

Peonies were at their height and they figured prominently in the out-of-town shipments. Baby gladioli were not excessively plentiful and cleaned up easily. The large varieties of gladioli have not put in an appearance as yet. Carnations and callas were about the weakest points in the local market. While there were plenty of carnations, the quality was not up to the standard, and other flowers were shown the preference. Callas were extremely scarce. On the other hand, Easter lilies were offered in abundance, and the quality was about as good as was ever seen in this market. Sweet peas suffered a little from the dark, cold days near the end of May, but there was enough good stock for nearly all requirements, the exceptions in most instances being large orders from out of town. Roses maintain a high average of quality and the demand is sufficiently active to clean up the heavy cut from day to day, at fair prices. The supply of orchids about equals the demand, and the same may be said of valley. There is a splendid cut of gardenias, and the blooms are well taken. As a matter of fact, the flower offerings are of such a wide variety that it is impossible to do them justice in a summary of market conditions. Suffice it to say that the shops never presented a finer appearance and were never in better position to satisfy even the most exacting buyers.

Various Notes.

The leading retailers made up a large number of funeral pieces for the late George W. Guthrie, the American ambassador to Japan, whose remains were brought to this city from Tokyo.

Pelicano, Rossi & Co. used sixty dozen long-stemmed American Beauty roses in a decoration at the Bohemian Club. This firm reports an active week, there being a great deal of funeral and school graduation work, besides the Memorial day rush. The force worked well into the night of May 29 in order to get out the last of the shipping orders.

Mrs. R. E. Darbee says the Memorial day business was far above her expectations, both as to out-of-town and local orders. She worked so hard that she is now planning a month's vacation. As soon as school is out she expects to leave on a motor trip to southern Oregon, tak-

Memorial Day Business.

"I never had such a rush before" and "I sold twice as much stock as at any previous Memorial day," are examples of expressions by proprietors of retail stores, attesting the remarkable business that came to Portland florists. Never before has there been such a shortage of outdoor flowers. The minds of the people are turned to military matters, and these formed a strong feature of the observance of the day. The people felt that they must keep up the usual cemetery decorations, and, having no flowers in their yards, all made a rush to the florists. The repeated demands for carnations for grave decorations, when the expenditure was to be small, proved that many of the buyers had little experience in buying flowers for such a purpose. First the market was swept clean of carnations of all colors, at $1 per dozen. Roses, snapdragons and other indoor flowers followed. White and yellow Scotch broom, irises, larkspur, ranunculi, narcissi and anything and everything in the way of cut flowers was taken.

In pot plants, hydrangeas easily led as best sellers, but anything which had a bloom looked good to the buyers. A was held May 29, took large quantities of flowers intended for Memorial day and added to the rush and worry at the flower stores. Some stock was brought in from California, coming from as far south as Los Angeles. The movement of bedding stock has increased, but it is not up to normal.

Various Notes.

In discussing the recent change in packing flowers for parcel post, retailers say that the prices of corrugated boxes put them entirely out of the question, but they find they can buy thin material for wooden boxes, knocked down, for about the price of a good grade of pasteboard boxes. This material is reinforced when necessary with thin strips, forming a substantial container and adding but little weight to the package. Some careful shippers who have been using double boxes of pasteboard welcome the change, as it will cut down the cost of packing.

were made in the Masonic Temple and in the City Council Chamber rooms. The decorations for both places were furnished by the Martin & Forbes Co. At the funeral were some of the largest floral designs seen here for some time. Nearly all of the florists furnished more or less work.

At the booths along the public market inferior carnations sold for $1.25 Memorial day, it is reported. The flower stores followed the same course as on Mothers' day, when $1 per dozen was the price for the best grade of stock as long as it lasted. No advantage was taken of the unusual demand.

Red carnations were used at the Portland crematorium in the urn niches. It took about 100 dozen. G. Teufel furnished most of them.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

President, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.; Vice-president, Lloyd O. Stark, Louisiana, Mo.; Secretary and Counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass.; Treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.

Forty-second annual convention, Philadelphia, Pa., June 27 to 29, 1917.

THE annual exhibition and meeting of the American Peony Society will be held at Philadelphia June 11 and 12.

THE nursery trade, harassed by the activities of certain entomologists, will be interested in James McHutchison's letter under the head, "Our Alibi Established," on another page of this issue.

THOMAS B. MEEHAN, Dresher, Pa., invites all nurserymen who had shipments consigned to them on the Nieuw Amsterdam, of the Holland-America line, to address him with reference to their rights and liabilities in the matter. Mr. Meehan proposes a test case.

THE CONVENTION PROGRAM.

Strange to relate, the word war does not occur in the program for this month's convention of the American Association of Nurserymen at Philadelphia, Pa., but, nevertheless, the war will furnish the principal theme for discussion at this, as at other trade gatherings. It is probable that the war thus far has adversely affected the nursery trade to a greater extent than it has any of the allied branches of the horticultural industry, and there are wide diversities of opinion as to the outlook for next season.

The convention will open Wednesday, June 27, and will close with the election of officers on Friday afternoon. The program in full is as follows:

WEDNESDAY, JUNE 27, 9:30 A. M.

Call to order by the president.
Address of welcome; for the city of Philadelphia, James Edward Cattell; for the Chamber of Commerce, President Ernest T. Trigg.
Response, by a member of the association.
President's annual address, John Watson, Newark, N. Y.
Report of secretary, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.
Report of treasurer, Peter Youngers, Geneva, Neb.
Address, Congressman Champ Clark, Washington, D. C.
Reports of committees; Hall Insurance, Frank A. Weber, chairman, Nursery, Mo.; Nomenclature, J. Horace McFarland, chairman, Harrisburg, Pa.; Standardization, Harlan P. Kelsey, chairman, Salem, Mass.; Landscape, W. H. Wyman, chairman, North Abington, Mass.; Publicity, F. L. Atkins, chairman, Rutherford, N. J.; Telegraphic Code, R. C. Chase, chairman, Chase, Ala.; Transportation, Charles M. Sizemore, chairman, Waxahatchie, Tex.
Appointment of committees.
Adjournment.
WEDNESDAY, 2:30 P. M., EXECUTIVE SESSION.
Report of counsel, Curtis Nye Smith, Boston, Mass.

proved. It may be unknown to many importers that steamers have come across from Holland right along this spring. All these steamers, however, came to this country in ballast or with some cargo especially designated by the British or American governments. By leaving Holland without cargo they avoided the calling at an English port, which enabled them to reach the ocean without touching the zone of submarine danger. I was informed a couple of months ago that steps were being taken by the Holland government to get permission to ship bulbs and nursery stock on the Holland boats without obliging them to call at a British port, and the cable received by me indicates that this permission has been granted. In my opinion, prospects of shipping nursery stock are better than they were last fall. Steamers will come across considerably quicker than before, the delay in England having been eliminated."

BUFFALO.

The Market.

The weather last week was exceedingly unpleasant, the one exception, fortunately for the Bison florists, being Memorial day. Stock of all descriptions was plentiful for the occasion and the returns were most satisfactory. The pot plant business was a conspicuous feature of the day's activities. American Beauties moved well in funeral designs, and other varieties of roses provided no grounds for complaint, the supply being adequate, the quality good and the prices, except for a few, reasonable. Carnations cleared speedily at good figures and thereby gave other flowers a showing.

Corsage bouquets made large inroads on the supply of sweet peas, and miscellaneous stock, such as daisies, snapdragons, marigolds and mignonette, was most useful. It is gratifying to note that geraniums realized much better prices this year.

Various Notes.

A smart touring car is affording Frank Baum much enjoyment, and Mr. Baum says he is going to take to the country when bright days come.

Liberty Loan window displays were the attraction at both of the Palmer stores last week.

Alice A. Ereker had an exceptionally good Memorial day trade, William Legge disposed of all of his plants and L. H. Neubeck chalked up a record business. A. E.

EVANSVILLE, IND.

The Memorial day business was good, fully up to the average of other years, and in some instances greater. Cut flowers fell short of requirements, and when they were gone plants came into favor. Peonies were scarce on account of the late spring and other outdoor stock was not so plentiful as it should have been.

Julius Niednagel & Sons put into service a new auto truck for the Memorial day business. This concern had a large cut of roses and carnations for the day.

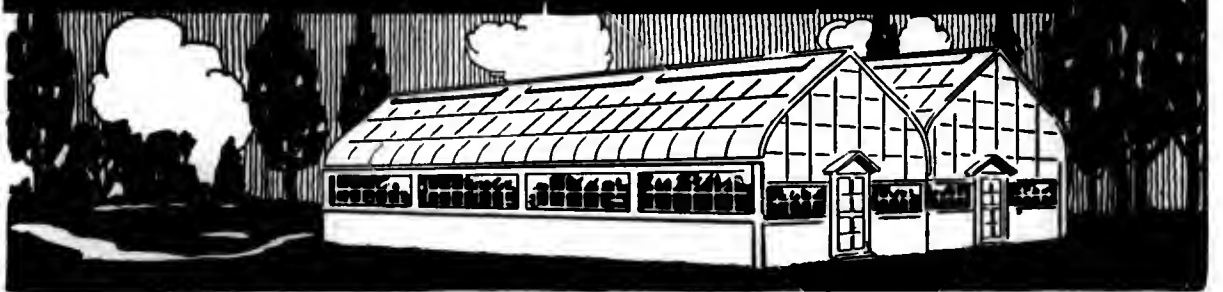

J. C. Elsperrmann experienced a good holiday business, in addition to a large batch of funeral work.

Greenhouse Heating.

SUBSCRIBERS are invited to write the Editor of this Department with regard to any details of greenhouse heating that are not understood. But please do not ask The Review to make a choice of apparatus for you. The greenhouse heating equipment advertised in this paper is, we believe, the best for the trade to buy, and each article the best in the special field of its adaptation.

THE HIGH COST OF COAL.

There is one slight sign of progress in the attempt to find a remedy for the situation in the coal market. There is evidence of an advance from general principles to precise facts. Heretofore prevailing conditions, and not any definite group of persons, have been blamed for the enormous prices of fuel. Now there is a disposition to place the chief blame on one body of people—namely, the mine owners. The guilt, it is said, has been traced to their door. If that judgment is not entirely just, a quick and loud protest undoubtedly will come from the mine owners, and the exact truth will finally be reached. Indeed, the accused men have already offered some defense, but do not seem to have succeeded completely in acquitting themselves.

It is still conceded that the shortage of labor and the inadequacy of transportation facilities have been largely responsible for the stagnation in the coal business, but it is alleged that the mine owners, in boosting the prices, have taken unjustifiable and unscrupulous advantage of these circumstances. Francis S. Peabody, chairman of the national commission on the control of fuel, is continuing his investigations energetically. C. M. Moderwell, a retired coal operator who represents Illinois and Indiana in the same commission, seems to be ably and conscientiously doing his part. So there is a ray of light in the darkness.

An expert statistician, said to be favorable to the mine owners, has presented this statement of the increase in the cost of mining: Increased cost of labor, due to advance in wages, 50 cents per ton; increase in cost of all mining materials, 10 cents per ton; increase in cost of securing and housing miners, 5 cents per ton; total increase in production cost, 65 cents per ton.

It should be pointed out that the increased cost of labor is estimated by the Illinois state council of national defense as not more than 25 cents per ton. Other authorities doubt that the cost of materials used in mining has increased as much as appears in this statement. But, taking these figures at their face value, and averaging last year's price of screenings at 90 cents a ton, this year's price, so far as justified by the jump in production cost, should be about $1.55 a ton.

Instead of that it is $2.75 a ton, which leaves a new profit of $1.20 a ton. In other words, the coal mine owners, after making liberal allowances for increases in cost, seem to have added 130 per cent to last year's price at the mine mouth, for no other ap-boiler. The expansion tank is outside, on a platform thirty feet high. The tank is leaking and we shall have to get a new one. The elevated platform is rather unsightly and we should like to do away with it. Will the hot water system work satisfactorily if we take down the expansion tank, plug up the opening at the bottom and leave the city water pressure on the return pipe in the boiler? There are air valves on all the highest pipes in each house.

CAST IRON BOILERS WASTE FUEL

I had a cast iron 8-section boiler before, but was afraid it would crack to pieces. The Kroeschell Boiler is certainly a fuel-saver. My coal bill to heat 5000 sq. ft. of glass surface with your boiler is less than last winter's coal bill, when I had only 2050 sq. ft. of glass, heated with the 8-section cast iron boiler.

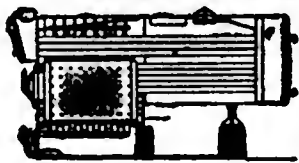

Your boiler burns any kind of fuel. I would not have any other boiler than the Kroeschell, and will recommend whenever I get a chance.

F. B.—Ala.

The city water pressure may be used instead of an elevated expansion tank, but there may be danger of an explosion in case the line between you and the pumping plant is shut off for repairs or other cause. This can be guarded against by having a safety valve upon the system. For temporary use, it would also be well to have a small expansion tank slightly above the highest point in the system.

We would suggest that the safety

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

The Market.

Everybody reports an exceptionally good Memorial day trade. The backwardness of the season caused a shortage of outdoor plants and flowers, and this stiffened the market on indoor stock. Never in the history of the trade has there been so large a demand for potted plants, geraniums being the leaders. Some of the downtown stores made a feature of rustic baskets filled with plants. These took well, the prices ranging from $2 to $5 at retail. Magnolia wreaths with wax flowers found a ready sale, in large numbers.

Various Notes.

The Empire Flower Co. store, at 9 Empire street, has been closed for the season.

Miss Gladys Williams, daughter of George F. Williams, of the W. E. Barrett Co., is to be married Wednesday, June 20.

Johnston Bros. furnished an immense shield in national colors for the recent banquet to the commander of the United States military district of the north-east.

Frederick McKenna, of the O'Connor store, has enlisted in Battery A of the Rhode Island light artillery.

The Westminster Greenhouses are being overhauled, and extensive alterations are being made to some of the buildings.

Charles Smith was a business visitor to Boston last week. He was looking for novelties.

Richard Hogan disposed of several thousand potted geraniums during the week.

Daniel A. Clarke, of the Red Oak Nurseries, of Fiskeville, has presented 500 Rose of Sharon bushes and 1,500 flowering currant shrubs to the pupils of the public schools of Coventry.

William A. Bowers maintained a store annex at 144 Washington street, last week, with good results.

F. A. Geisler, of Bristol, had an exceptionally fine assortment of potted flowers for Memorial day.

W. H. M.

Lansing, Mich.—The store of the Lansing Floral Co. has been sold to a party of two, who will continue it under the name of Atlas Floral Co. The greenhouses, which will be retained by the original company, will be conducted under the old name.

DETROIT, MICH.

The Market.

Because the Memorial day demand apparently was not up to the expectations of the downtown retailers, the preparations for a good supply of stock for the holiday turned out to be more than ample. The business done, however, seems to have pleased the majority of the florists.

Stock of the best quality now is arriving, but there could be more life to the sale of carnations, American Beauties and tulips. Sweet peas, however, clear before a robust demand, the supply not being any too large. The activities in the bedding stock departments now are in full blast, with everybody in the greenhouses speeding up his work.

Various Notes.

One grower deserves special credit for the high-grade stock he is shipping to the Detroit market. He is Fred Breitmeyer, of Mount Clemens, whose new Pink Ophelia roses are a treat to the lucky retailer who can obtain them. Mr. Breitmeyer also grows Ward, Ophelia, Mott and Reid to perfection.

Splendid Darwin tulips are being cut at the A. Stahelin place.

Plans for a fishing trip by florists are being made by William Dilger, of the Dilger Landscape Co.

Norman Sullivan has leased a part of the Woodward Flower Shop to a high-class confectioner. H. T.

BRIEF ANSWERS.

A. N. R., Mich.—These are each forms of Cephalotaxus Fortunei.

K. C. G., Pa.—It is impossible to grow good stock in insufficiently heated houses. You could grow violets or lettuce in a house kept up to 45 degrees.

B. & S., Kan.—Advertised by the American Greenhouse Mfg. Co., Chicago.

J. & C., W. Va.—We do not know anything new to say. Still, we think we can see a gradual improvement in business methods. We think the importance of bookkeeping, the prompt filling of orders, careful packing and a prompt reply to a business letter are beginning to be appreciated. We look for steady progress.

Flushing, N. Y.—R. Hughes says he sees potatoes in front of him, potatoes on the left of him and potatoes on the right of him, from which it would seem that the people of Flushing need some sort of inoculation against the potato bug. Have no fear, Mr. Hughes; there is plenty of room for both flowering plants and the lowly spud.

SAN FRANCISCO NOTES.

ing along camp equipment, so she can stop in the prettiest spots along the way. Mrs. Darbee says flowers were in excellent shipping condition for the holiday, thanks to the cool, damp weather.

The management of the California Floral Co. is well satisfied with its first Memorial day business. This concern did considerable shipping, in addition to a number of church decorations and an active counter trade.

Frank Claverie reports business good on Polk street. He has his store nicely fitted up and has added three employees to his force.

Norman Marcus, decorator for Albert O. Stein, has enlisted in a hospital unit and expects to leave soon for France. He has two brothers and several friends in the same corps. On account of his father's illness, Patrick Orr, of the Stein force, has given up his plans for a month's trip east and has gone to Oroville, Cal., instead, to spend the time with his father.

The Francis Floral Co. enjoyed a wonderful Memorial day business, according to the proprietor, Francis Schlotzhauer. His force worked overtime on out-of-town shipments.

Frank H. Forrest has closed a deal whereby he will do all the decorating for the Tait-Zinkand cafe, which is one of the largest in the city. He makes his headquarters with the Art Floral Co. and has been helping out there for several days during the holiday rush. P. V. Matraia, head of the company, says shipping business was especially good.

At his stand in the St. Francis hotel Julius Eppstein has had a special display of orchids from Carbone's place in Berkeley. The showing included ten or more varieties. Mr. Eppstein says business is holding up well.

Victor Podesta, of Podesta & Baldocchi, gave his attention personally to a large floral piece for the Guthrie demonstration. Mr. Podesta says that the Memorial day business has ceased to amount to much with florists doing a high-class business downtown, at least as far as extra counter trade is concerned.

Manager J. A. Axell, of the E. W. McLellan Co., reports the largest shipping business for Memorial day that his firm ever experienced. Peonies were one of the principal items, and baby gladioli were in great demand. The McLellan Co. continues to bring in a fine cut of gardenias and has a heavy cut of roses.

Fred C. Jaeger, manager for MacRorie & McLaren, has resumed his duties, after a pleasant outing in Lake county. This concern sent many flowers out of town for Memorial day.

Robert Newcomb, representing the American Bulb Co., says he is going to remain on the coast until July.

Beautiful lawns—by killing the weeds without harming the grass. Every florist, seedsman, nurseryman and landscape gardener can render a real service to every private estate, home, country and golf club that has a lawn—and at the same time make substantial profits, by recommending

LAWN SILICATE

KILLS WEEDS—NOT GRASS

Lawn Silicate, in powder form, is sprinkled over the weeds with the hand. It sifts past the perpendicular-growing grass and is caught only by the flat-lying weeds. The chemical burns into the weed and is drawn down to the very root—killing the weed permanently.

Lawn Silicate kills weeds effectively, economically and quickly. It eliminates costly hand-weeding.—saves disfiguring lawns—all without injury to the grass.

We are helping you to sell Lawn Silicate by advertising it and stimulating the demand that already exists—just as we are doing for ATLAS (WEED) KILLER, which, by the way, you should tell your customers to use for killing weeds on paths, drives, gutters, tennis courts, etc.

You should have the details of our proposition because it means big new profits. Now is the time.

The Market.

General trade conditions are excellent. Memorial day business was not what it would have been had the weather been agreeable. March 29 was a cold, rainy day that hurt the plant trade considerably. The retailers were somewhat busy, as the customers who would not plant stock on account of the rain bought cut flowers with which to decorate the graves. Funeral work, too, was quite heavy and a few good weddings helped to keep the forces busy at the stores.

The wholesalers had little to complain about; there were no local peonies and few outdoor flowers to interfere with the sale of greenhouse stock. Lilies were quite plentiful, as were roses. Carnations were on the short side. A few southern peonies came in, but they were in a bad condition. There were quantities of irises and sweet peas, but the latter were soft and did not realize much. Greens of all kinds continue scarce. June 2 brought in an avalanche of roses, most of them open, and the street boys had a big inning.

Various Notes.

Fred Davidson, of Martins Ferry, O., formerly of Davidson Bros., called on the trade while on his way to one of the training camps.

Word has been received of the death, June 1, of M. I. O'Brien, of Sharon, Pa. Mr. O'Brien was one of Sharon's oldest florists and was well known among the trade here, although he had retired from the business. He grew many orchids for the trade of this city.

The funeral of George W. Guthrie, ambassador to Japan, brought many handsome orders to this city from various representatives at Washington, D. C. A. Krongold is proud of an order for a floral tribute which he received from Vice-President Thomas Marshall, to be executed without regard to expense, for the funeral of Mr. Guthrie. Clarke.

New Orleans, La.—Members of the New Orleans Horticultural Society, many of whom are florists, at a meeting last month decided to assist those who are fighting the proposed law against the importation of foreign plants, trees, bulbs and seeds. Secretary Richard Eichling spoke on the stringent quarantine law of Louisiana and the many hardships it forced on the florists. It was decided to hold the society's annual outing in July at one of the resorts across the lake.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

The supply of stock is large and therefore can easily satisfy every present demand. Business is good, but it is not good enough to take up the receipts as fast as they arrive. Roses are in heavy supply, the offerings including excellent blooms of Ophelia, Sunburst, Russell and Ward. Many of the Killarneys, however, are badly mildewed. Carnations are plentiful, and the same is true of Easter lilies. The cut of peonies now is heavy, and gladioli follow suit in this respect. Other items of importance are snapdragons, irises, callas, sweet peas, cornflowers and sweet williams. New southern ferns are meeting with a large demand.

Various Notes.

C. E. Critchell has been having an excellent demand for his fresh southern ferns.

W. Frank & Sons, of Portland, Ind., shipped some exceptionally good Ward and Ophelia roses to L. H. Kyrk during the week.

Among recent visitors were Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Beckman, of Middletown, O.; E. Uhl, of Greenfield, O., and Mrs. Fennel, of Cynthiana, Ky. C. H. H.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Market.

Continued cool, cloudy weather last week cut down Memorial day business somewhat, but retailers report that sales for the holiday were good, considering the weather. There was a big demand for many kinds of bedding plants before Memorial day and it has continued since. Carnations and sweet peas are in supply sufficient for the demand and are of excellent quality. Pansy plants have passed their prime, although there is quite a supply still in the market. Gladioli, which made their appearance two weeks ago, are in large supply. Lilacs are abundant. Outdoor tulips are plentiful.

The demand for vegetable seeds has let up, because of the weather. Prices have been high. Florists who handle vegetable plants report them in short supply and high in price.

Various Notes.

George Penek says business has been exceptionally good, considering the weather.

W. R. James has opened a flower shop at Clinton and Elizabeth avenues.

The S. A. Rogers Co. is doing a good business in plants and seeds.

John W. Blakeley, of Elizabeth, reports that spring business has been satisfactory. R. B. M.
